SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Hydrangeas.

The young stock that was propagated this spring can be grown either for Easter blooming with a single stem or for summer blooming with three or four heads. The plants should be now potted in 4-inch pots and plunged in a frame, where they will receive attention. They should have a good rich soil and a strong, sturdy growth encouraged. For those that are to be bloomed early, as soon as the pot becomes full of roots a little liquid manure will help the formation of a good strong bud. Those that are wanted for summer blooming, the tip can be rubbed out and branches will form. Leave the plants outside until the first light frost, which will harden off the wood, and they can then be stored in a cool house or pit, where they will not freeze. Those wanted for Easter will have to be placed in heat by the first of the year.

Begonias of Lorraine Type.

The early rooted plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and its many fine varieties will now need shifting into 3½-inch pots, and should be given a little stronger soil than the young stock was potted in, but the manure used should be well rotted, and, where obtainable, a generous addition of leaf-mold. As the plants grow, space them out so that they will not become drawn and so that there is a good circulation of air around each plant. They will need a little shade on the glass for a few weeks yet, but it should not be too heavy. As the nights become cool it is well to close the frames down if they are outside, or if in the greenhouse close the ventilators, leaving a small crack of air on, or the house will sweat, which is not at all beneficial to begonias, as it is very apt to cause spot on the leaf. If this occurs remove the leaf at once. Care should be taken in the watering not to wet the foliage any more than possible. The later rooted stock will not need potting up until later, but all the growth possible should be obtained by giving them the best of attention. If the grower has not stock enough on hand, now is the time to purchase before the plants are shifted into large pots, when the price will be higher and the transportation charges increased.

Asparagus Baskets.

There is always a good call for hanging baskets of Asparagus Sprengeri and there is nothing more decorative in a store or greenhouse than these beautiful baskets when well put up and when they are growing nicely. The young 3-inch stock will make nice basket work. The wire basket frame should be of good size, eight inches in diameter at least. Line the outside with green sheet moss, which makes a much better appearance than sphagnum, and then fill with good rich soil and plant the young plants in this. The basket, after planting, should be placed in a warm, moist house to encourage rapid growth; a house with a temperature such as palms are grown in is about right. They should be frequently syringed, and as soon as the long fronds have made a good growth they can be removed to lighter and cooler quarters.

Sweet Scented Geraniums.

The grower who has a stock of rose or other sweet-scented geraniums can turn them to good account by planting them in a bench in the greenhouse and can obtain some fine sprays for winter cutting. The green is very much appreciated by the best trade and there is always a demand in the stores catering to that class for more of this than can be obtained. The sprays are cut 12 to 14 inches long and are used in the boxes of cut flowers. There is also a demand for the leaves, to be placed in the finger-bowls at luncheons. It is easily grown in a cool house and very rapidly makes long sprays fit to cut. The plants can be set about eight inches apart, which will give them plenty of room, provided the sprays are cut as soon as they are long enough for use.

Am 3+ v. 53

Genistas.

The genistas should be potted by September 1 in the pots in which they are to bloom, and a few days before potting should be trimmed into shape. It is a good plan with all soft wooded plants when growing rapidly not to cut at the top the same time the roots are disturbed, so it is better to do the pinching back before the shifting is done, and then not again until the plants are beginning to grow in the new soil, plainly showing that root action has again taken place after being disturbed. The plants that are being grown in prescribed shapes should be kept tied to the form, and as soon as established in the new soil pinched back. They will stand considerable hard cutting back for some time yet, for the blooming shoots do not set until well into the winter. Keep the plants in as cool quarters as possible until the first of the year, when if a few plants are wanted early they can be brought into warmer locations, but these plants are cool-growing subjects and do not like any great amount of heat.

Pyrethrums.

An early summer flower that is very showy and beautiful, ranging in color from white to the deepest scarlet, with all the intermediate shades, is the Pyrethrum roseum, and it is being much more grown every year for cut-flower purposes. The best flowers are to be obtained by buying named varieties, but good selected seed will give fair satisfaction and many handsome flowers. The greatest trouble in growing these plants in the north is the danger of winter killing and crown rot during extremely wet spells in hot weather. Seed sown during July and August and wintered in houses or cold frames will produce plants that will flower next summer. Obtain the best seed possible and sow in flats and as soon as large enough pot in 2½-inch pots. These can be grown on in a frame until cold weather comes on, when they can be securely covered or carried into a cool house and wintered under a bench, started in March and planted out as soon as secure from frost, and will flower in June and July.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Asters.

The aster is one of the most useful of the summer cut flowers. Its perfectly formed blossoms in a range of colors from purest white to lavender and dark purple, and from blush through various pinks to dark red, furnish shades and tints suitable for numberless color combinations when used by themselves or in connection with other flowers. The various types, some with full, double, perfectly formed flowers, others with tasselled petals, and later the astermums, with their huge blooms almost like chrysanthemums, give a variety of form that is used to great advantage by the decorator in his artistic arrangements.

Coming, or being at their best in August, when business is at its lowest ebb, the bulk of the stock is used to supply the demand for funerals, for which they are most appropriate, the white, lavender and purple shades being especially desirable.

The spray is perhaps the most popular form of arrangement, composed all of one color or in combination, white with light pink or lavender. While many have stout stems, which support the flowers, others have to be wired so that they can be placed to stay. There is nothing better as a backing for a spray than long single shoots of the privet, which take up but little room, and are of a length sufficient for most clusters. When the bunch is of extra size, sago palms will give the necessary support and add to the size and appearance.

Asters can be worked into a very showy and acceptable casket cover to take the place of the blanket; in fact, it is given this name by some, and can be arranged much quicker than the blanket. Two large, rather flat, but loosely tied sprays, each 36 inches in length, are bound together at the handles, and this center space filled in with flowers, wired on sticks, which find support in the stems of the handles. This center may be made of asters of another color, or with other choice flowers, such as cattleyas, roses, water lilies, etc. The large double white varieties of the pond lilies will remain open if the green calyx leaves or petals are drawn back and wired with the stem. Before finishing the center, the ribbon bow should be attached, as this will, if properly used, take the place of quite a few flowers. When well made this will completely cover the top of a casket. It can be made more elaborate with a garland of green and flowers, festooned along the sides, caught up and fastened to the outer edges of the spray with ribbon bows. A fringe of narrow ribbons, tied to hang from the edges of the cover, can also be tied with small flowers, and used in place of the garland.

A shower spray is readily made by attaching some ribbons and small flowers to the outer edges of an otherwise plain cluster and gives variety, where there are a number of such pieces for the same funeral. A knot or two of ribbons should also come from the center. The same or similar treatment can be used to advantage with the full round or crescent wreath, the decoration to fall to the outside from the full side of the crescent.

The wreath made or decorated with asters, admits of great variety. All white, lavender or purple, or in combination, is better than anything else at this season. The magnolia full, round or crescent decorates beautifully with a cluster in the center, or to half cover the surface, or with a tapering spray down one side. A rich ribbon bow or a liberal use of chiffon is always used to advantage. A wreath of ivy leaves and sprays, together with dark purple asters, decorated with a bow of purple ribbon, is ideal for the funeral of a person three score years and ten or more.

The large standing wreath, massed full and round, can be worked into a very effective design with asters. The lower center should have a cluster, or more elaborate decoration, which relieves the plain, formal appearance. Gladiolus spikes can be used with asters for the base. An even larger and more pretentious crescent wreath can be placed on a large easel. The advantage of this form is that it is easier to pack or transport. The large standing design can be put into a somewhat compact form by having the upright between the foot and wreath made of a piece of gas pipe, which fits over the middle stem at the base, and into which the center wire of the wreath is placed. When being carried for delivery in a car, it does not require nearly so much height, and can be set up and made firm in a few minutes.

The great majority of the asters are worked up into moderate sized sprays of from four to six dozen flowers. Do not use four dozen when three is enough, or try to make three dozen cover the space of four. There should be a liberal use of green, but too much gives a weedy appearance.

Baskets of flowers are quite a factor now at funerals; plateaus take the place of pillows, while long, narrow, box-like patterns, loosely filled, are used to place on the floor in front or under the casket.

While August is not a popular wedding month, Cupid never seems to take a vacation, and always has some candidates to present. Quite acceptable bouquets for the bridal party can be made of asters while all light and bright colors, give a good effect in vases about the several rooms of the dwelling.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

In the middle of summer there are often sudden weather extremes, at which times stocks suddenly shorten up until it seems almost impossible to get flowers of any quality. The market, that had been for a week, more than supplied, all at once becomes bare, and there is the greatest hurrying and scurrying around for stock to fill the orders of particular people for whom the best is none too good. The choice variagated foliage of the greenhouse is always a great help in such emergencies, as are the fancy fronds of the nephrolepis. Choice wreaths of these materials, set off with a cluster of cattleyas, large, white pond lilies, select gladioli or other choice flowers of the summer stock, present a well finished and artistic appearance. In certain sections, sweet peas are still fine and are useful in all kinds of design and spray work.

As a foundation for summer design work, there is nothing better than the prepared magnolia leaf wreath. There should be a stock of these in all styles and sizes. They should be well made and symmetrical, so that the part not covered with flowers or foliage should be so perfect as to furnish a good background and show the cutflowers off to the best advantage. Quite a number of the trade are still averse to these leaves, saying they are too artificial, but their great advantage over the galax, from the fact that they can be prepared and kept on hand, ready for instant use, makes them one of the most essential items of the retail florist's stock. The very best trade use these leaves, working them up into some of their choicest pieces. There is no question but galax leaves are beautiful and have their place, but it was hard work at first to get them introduced, as many objected that they were not flowers, and looked too artificial.

Great care should be taken at this time in the packing of cutflowers that are to travel for a few hours or over night by express or parcel post. There should be, in addition to the cutflower box, a corrugated pasteboard box, just a little larger, so as to admit of loose but firm paper lining. A half inch of dry sphagnum in the paper lining of the bottom of the inside box, covered with wax paper, will take up a great deal of the ice meltage. No cutflowers should make such a journey at this time without a little ice, which in these boxes that are well wrapped with paper, which keeps the heat out, will generally last the journey. If the orders are at all important, send special delivery letter or telegraph their departure, then if there is any delay, it is at once looked into. A reply postal, stating the character of the order and its time of departure, express or parcel post, and asking for a reply as to how the flowers arrived, if satisfactory, and on time, is worth while sending to the destination of all such distance packages. It shows that the florist is careful, painstaking and trustworthy.

Always try and have something to feature, just a little out of the ordinary. At this time, a window of fancy cyclamens, with their beautifully marked and mottled leaves, will last for a couple of weeks and be sure to attract attention. Zinnias are just coming in. There is no garden flower that has a larger range of colors than the zinnia. Its beautiful red, pink, light and dark shades of yellow, orange and all the half-tones between, give almost every rainbow hue. They are very attractive for the table, either for vases or arranged in baskets. The stems foul quickly, but a few drops of formaldehyde in a quart of water, will keep them sweet for 24 hours or more.

The helichrysum, or straw flower, is also coming in. This is highly prized on account of its keeping qualities; put up in bunches of one or two dozen, and dried in a cool, dark room, they retain their form and color, and make very attractive small baskets for winter house decoration.

Have you noticed how the publicity movement is bounding along. It has taken on new life. Are you putting anything into its veins? Count out just a little of that surplus and add to the fund, so as to make the impetus greater. One can do but little, but when all push together, there is a mighty force. Send your check today.

Texas State Florists' Association.

The fifth annual convention of the Texas State Florists' Association, at Austin, July 9-10, is now a matter of history. Every arrangement was perfected by the florists of Austin to entertain the visitors properly and to say that the convention was a success from every standpoint, expresses it very incompletely. Although no special rates had been made by the railroads, about 65 of the Texas florists were in attendance. The day before the convention, representatives of several of the florist supply houses arrived with their samples and arranged their displays.

On the morning of July 9, the regular programme was taken up and carried out as announced. The treasurer's report showed that the association was fairly prosperous from a financial standpoint, as the treasury had enough funds to pay all outstanding accounts and contribute $50 toward the S. A. F. publicity fund, and still leave ample funds to bear all expenses of the association for another year.

It was a great pleasure to the Texas florists to have present J. F. Ammann, president of the Society of American Florists and to have him address the convention on national publicity.

Follows the regular programme of the afternoon on the first day, there was a visit to the capitol building by the delegates and quite a number of historic papers were examined, including the Texas declaration of Independence from Mexico and the articles of secession of Texas from the Union of the United States. These documents are the originals and bear the signatures of quite a number of the men who made Texas history famous. A dinner was given to the visiting florists by the Austin Floral Club, Wednesday evening, and it was a very enjoyable occasion. It was one of those get together love feasts, and it was at a late hour when the meeting was adjourned.

The second day was taken up in carrying out the prescribed programme and the discussion of several very important questions of vital interest to the florists of the state, and the conclusion of the business of the association.

The election of officers resulted as follows: H. O. Hannah, Sherman, president; J. H. Davis, Fort Worth, vice-president; L. J. Tackett, Austin, secretary-treasurer. Directors: Chas. Aliff, Sr., Austin, and E. W. Judge, Tyler. Mrs. E. W. Judge, Tyler, was elected press representative and Miss Bird, Denison, educational director.

Fort Worth has been mentioned as the place for the next convention.

[For preliminary report of the meeting, with lists of exhibitors and visitors, see issue of July 12, page 1254. —ED.]

FLOWER SHOWS RESUMED.

The first exhibition of the Society d'Horticulture of France, since the war began in 1914, was staged June 5, and proved a grand success. As was to be expected, the number of exhibitors was smaller than in pre-war years, but it was nevertheless a most satisfactory show, although the attendance was affected by the transportation strike which involved bus, car and underground railroad service.

The first grand medal of honor was awarded to Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co.,

PROMINENT MEN AT TEXAS STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION MEETING, AUSTIN, JULY 9-10, 1919.

Left to Right: H. O. Hannah, Sherman, President-Elect; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., President of Society of American Florists; W. J. Baker, Fort Worth, President of State Association; Lewis J. Tackett, Austin, Secretary-Treasurer, and R. C. Kerr, Houston, Past President.

Paris, for an exhibit of annuals and perennials, the plants, in great variety, being arranged with perfect taste. The second grand prize was won by Maron & Son for a splendid display of orchids, including fine specimens of cattleyas, odontoglossums, odontiodes, laelia-cattleyas, phalaenopsis, etc. The well known firms of Croux & Sons and Moser & Sons, were, as usual, in the front rank with splendid specimens of rhododendrons and azaleas, as was M. Chantrier with a collection of Begonia Rex and greenhouse stock, among which Begonia Rex magnifica, Mme. Chantrier and Resplendissant were conspicuous. Vallerand Bros., as customary, made a fine showing of tuberous begonias, of which the new variety, Verdun, awarded a certificate of merit, was much admired. The rose exhibits were smaller and not so numerous, the principal entries being those of M. Nonin and Leveque & Sons.

Noteworthy were the groups of hydrangeas shown by M. Becault, who received a medal of honor, and Moulliere & Son and Henry Cayeux. Some of the newer varieties which attracted attention were Satinette, Etincelant, Marechal Foch, and Triomphe Beaute Havraise. Henry Cayeux and M. Le Clerc had fine collections of peonies.

Dobbie & Son, Edinburgh, Scotland, staged a fine assortment of sweet peas for which they were given a prize of honor, and M. Ferard had a good collection of alpines and rock plants. In carnations, the principal exhibitors were M. Debeaux, M. Vacherot and Vallerand Bros. Conifers and ornamental plants were entered by Leon Carnet, Jules & Henry Thuilleaux and Kiefer & Sons.

The large nurseries of Momblot-Bruneau had a fine collection of fruit trees, which was awarded a prize of honor, and Leon Parent showed some splendid specimens of forced fruits.

Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co. were again in the lead with the finest collection of vegetables, the display reflecting great credit on the work of the Benefit Society of French Market Growers and the commercial office of the Orleans Railroad company, which is encouraging the work of increasing the production of vegetables and fruit along its lines.

WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

Exceptionally unfavorable weather conditions have existed in France practically since the first of the year. After having rain almost every day during January, February, March and the greater part of April, which interfered with most of the spring work, growers are now confronted with a most disastrous drought, there having been but very little precipitation for two months, and most crops are suffering, especially peas, beans, potatoes and cereals. Unless the ground receives a good soaking soon, a very light yield in most items is anticipated.

Fruit crop conditions do not offer much more encouragement. Early in the spring, the outlook was favorable, but snowstorms which swept the country the latter part of April, occasioned great loss, which was later increased by the ravages of caterpillars and the unusually dry period. Strawberries are drying up, and our present hope is that expectations for a reasonable crop of late pears and apples will not prove a disappointment. A few good showers would materially improve the situation, which at present is far from encouraging.

PARISIAN.

NORFOLK, NEB.—L. Buchendorf, florist on Madison avenue, has been succeeded by Rufus A. Hirsch.

DES MOINES, IA.—Premiums totaling more than $5,000 will be offered at the horticultural show to be held in this city, November 10-15, according to Wesley Greene, secretary of the state horticultural society, whose office is in the state house here.

THE S. A. F.

National Publicity for Flowers.

Almost daily, there comes to the office of the promotion bureau a hearty endorsement of the work of the campaign. As an example: "Enclosed find our contribution towards the 'Say it with Flowers' campaign. We are looking forward towards sending another check a little later on. We want to congratulate the society on its splendid work in getting up such a campaign, and the results obtained should more than please every individual in any way connected with the business. Wishing you the greatest success, we are, very truly yours, Moraio Brothers, Rye, N. Y."

Still, the fund lags. Why this should be is hard to understand. The time is past when argument might be necessary. Experience should be the preceptor now—and we have had a glorious experience. We have ascertained that, beyond a question of doubt, our efforts to increase the sale of flowers are being rewarded with a success beyond our fondest anticipation.

And you, Mr. Nonsubscriber, know full well that you are being benefited by this success. Give a thought to what might have been had this campaign never been started. Look over your books and note how many new customers you have recorded in the bad times now behind us, when you fully expected to notice a decline in your business. What is it that is reminding many thousands of forgetful people every day, that there are anniversaries they should not forget? Have you never received thanks from some cordial individual for the reminder which perhaps has saved him from criticism, even censure? Such happenings are common throughout the trade. Our slogan,

"Say it with Flowers" is now deep rooted. Let us see that its roots suffer not for want of nourishment.

It seems to be easier in almost any other line to raise a publicity fund than in the florist trade. The Florida growers of citrus fruits made a big success of their efforts last year to increase the sale of their products, and they are not what might be termed a numerous body. Through their exchange, which undertakes work similar to that of our promotion bureau, it has been unanimously voted to make the assessment for publicity on the coming season as much as three cents a box on oranges and five cents a box on grapefruit. This assessment is expected to produce a fund largely in excess of $100,000. Their California brethren are pushing forward a continuation of their efforts to establish "Sunkist" products on a scale which makes the Florida effort seem small indeed. These fruit growers know what they are about, and are working on experience. Every grower contributes to his fund.

And every florist, without exception, should contribute to his fund. Over 1,600 of the thinkers in the trade have already done so. Get busy with your think tank, Mr. Nonsubscriber. There is a space awaiting your name on the honor roll. Can you, in your own interests, refuse to fill it as your conscience dictates?

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

The Detroit Convention.

MEMBERSHIP ENROLLMENT URGED.

Secretary John Young has sent out over his complete mailing list, the following letter to the trade:

"With this letter, you will find an application form for membership in our society. Why not complete the same, and enroll your name with the names of the other progressive florists of the country? Better inducements to do so can hardly be set out than those appearing in the article also enclosed, 'Why should I join the S. A. F.'

"After you have done this, why not arrange to attend our thirty-fifth annual convention and trade exhibition, to be held in Detroit, Mich., August 19-21, and in addition, as a guest, enjoy the day of entertainment which your brother florists in Detroit will provide, August 22? Take with you your wife, daughter or other members of your family—all, if you so choose. See the great trade exhibition, examine the very latest productions in greenhouse construction, boilers, fittings, supplies, retail florists' supplies, such as baskets and the other hundred and one things in which design is kept up-to-date, as well as a host of other auxiliaries. The trade exhibition is an education to those who are 'keeping shop' or operating greenhouses.

"If you would like further information, just write to the secretary. We cordially welcome you."

On the other side of this letter is a list of the firms who at this date have arranged to make comprehensive exhibits. There will be additions to the list of course, before the exhibition opens. No effort is being spared to make this the banner convention in the history of the society. The outlook for the trade exhibition is that the immense floor of Arcadia auditorium will be taxed to the limit to accommodate the exhibits. In addition to the exhibitors previously announced, the following have taken space: Jacob Kier Nielson, Oak Park, Ill.; Peters & Reed Pottery Co., South Zanesville, O.; Russin & Henfling, New York; Max Schling, New York; Fred J. Mead, Newark, N. J.; W. A. Manda, Inc., South Orange, N. J.; John Lewis Childs, Inc., Flowerfield, N. Y.; D. Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, Ill.; Chicago Feed & Fertilizer Co., Chicago.

At this convention, action will be taken on a recommendation that the dues in the society be increased to $5 per year, and that the life membership fee be increased from $25 to $50. Only dues. It goes without saying that life membership taken out now will forestall any action emanating from the convention.

The local committees in Detroit are members in good standing can become life members, therefore it is obvious that any applying for this membership, must be clear on the books for the 1919 actively at work, and, it is understood, have laid out a programme for the entertainment of their guests which will be highly pleasing to all.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Bowling Trophies

Chairman Joseph Streit of the committee in charge of the bowling tournament states that this feature will be of greater importance than ever before, due to the most favorable conditions and the extraordinary efforts of the local committee to make it a success, and to this end trophies are solicited from firms and individuals in the way of purchases, merchandise or anything else that may be scheduled as a prize for the victors. An early response will be appreciated to enable the committee to give publicity to the contributions and complete the programme. Address communications to Joseph Streit, chairman, 1366 McClellan avenue, Detroit, Mich.

A Nutmeg for the Blue Hen.

That report in the trade papers of June 28, regarding the activities of the florists' publicity committees is very interesting. I have only got to page one as yet; but I see that the "Nutmeg State" boys have contributed $1164.50, which is very good for a population of less than a million. On the same page, I observe that the "Blue Hen" chickens have only been able to scrape up a 5-spot, which is not so very good for a state with a population of about one-fifth of a million. I speak of course by the census of 1900, but the increase of population in both states is probably relatively equal, and therefor, does not affect the 5 to 1 proportion. Now if Delaware wants to show that she's a spunky bird, she will get busy right away and scrape up more than a 5 spot. About fifty 5-spots would be more like a game chicken. Maybe this comparison might be carried further afield than Connecticut and Delaware, but I have not had time to look them up yet. You can do that for yourselves. But to stick to the text, my idea for the present is to stir up my near neighbors who have been enjoying an era of great prosperity these past five years. Every chicken in the florists' business in the state of Delaware ought to do its share of scratching for publicity, and not live on the scratching done by the less lazy birds in other parts. Get in the publicity garden and do your share. Get after that Nutmeg! Dear old Blue Hen!

GEORGE C. WATSON.

Baltimore Publicity Meeting.

The July meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore, Md., held at Royal Arcanum hall, on the evening of the fourteenth, had for its feature the national publicity campaign of the Society of American Florists, the principal speakers being Major P. F. O'Keefe, of the O'Keefe Advertising Agency, Boston, Mass., and Secretary John Young of the society. Invitations had been sent to the florist clubs of Washington, D. C. and Philadelphia, Pa., the former sending a delegation consisting of President Z. D. Blackistone, A. Snell, George C. Shaffer, William Grillbortzer and E. P. Rodman, while the Quaker City was represented by Robert Kift, secretary of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia. Before the meeting, members of the local club and guests sat down to an enjoyable dinner at the Hotel Rennert, at the close of which President R. A. Vincent called on Secretary Young. Major O'Keefe, President Blackistone and Robert Kift, all of whom voiced their pleasure at being once more in hospitable Baltimore, which Mr. Young said was the city in which he was elected to the secretaryship of the national organization.

With about 50 members and visitors present, the meeting of the club was called to order at 8 p. m. by President Vincent, and on motion, the regular order of business was suspended so that the speakers should come first. Major O'Keefe made a fine address, full of fire and enthusiasm. In speaking of the importance of advertising, he stated that the government was going to spend $2,000,000 to get necessary information before the people the coming year. Some one had asked if there was any way in which returns could be guaranteed; they could not, but results were certain in the well-financed and carefully conducted camaign. The slogan, which had been so successful, was but one step. The country was entering into a period of prosperity such as had never been experienced before; 107,000,000 people had money to spend, and flowers would get their full share, if they were properly presented. Department stores, he said, spend three per cent of their gross receipts in newspaper advertising, and other large firms with specialties, up to seven and eight per cent. There is a large field in trying to make new uses for flowers, such as "armistice day" or "peace day." People do not want to be informed, so much as they need to be reminded, that flowers are the things to give. The campaign was absolutely sure of success, and the florists would soon be spending $200,000 a year. One florist in Boston, Mass., for his own trade, spent $25,000 annually to reach 700,000 people with fine results. There is no question but the campaign is going to be a tremendous success and deserves the support of every florist and the allied trades. Florists, to get immediate results, must tie up with the work of the campaign, intensify it, and thus make the most of it for themselves. What was spent last year is still pulling, and adds force to the work of this year. He closed with an eloquent appeal for all to contribute liberally and regard such money as an investment that would bring splendid returns.

Secretary John Young said he was pleased with the activity now shown in the movement, but returns should come in at the rate of $3,000 per week to reach the coveted mark. He urged that all get interested and tie up to the work of the society, using the slogan everywhere, and also the electros in their store advertising, and they could surely get results. Referring to the coming Detroit convention, he said more space had been sold in the exhibition than ever before, and predicted the 1919 meeting would be a record breaker.

A publicity committee for the state of Maryland was then appointed as follows: R. G. Graham, J. J. Perry, W. J. Johnson, Chas. J. Bolgiano, J. S. Hamilton, W. E. McKissick, I. H. Moss, Wm. Ekas, R. A. Vincent, and Geo. Morrison. With the subscriptions taken up at the close of Secretary Young's address, the total for Maryland now amounts to over $500.

Pennock-Niessen Baseball Game.

The sporting event of the week was the baseball game between the employes of the S. S. Pennock Co. and the Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia, Pa., Saturday afternoon, July 12. At the invitation of Chas. H. Grakelow, the game was played on the grounds of the Lulu Temple country club, at Edge Hill. Captains of the teams were Harry Eisele, for Niessens, and Walter Davis for the Pennocks. Mr. Davis, although the oldest player, set the pace by making five runs. For such an important game, there were two umpires, George Aengle calling balls and strikes, with Martin Gannon for the bases. Arthur Niessen and Charley Moorby were chief rooters for their nine, while S. S. Pennock, together with Ralph Faust, Sam Lilley and others, kept up enthusiasm for their side. The field, except in the diamond, was ploughed ground, being in preparation for golf links. This robbed the players of a number of home runs, as the balls over fielders' heads lay where they fell. Except for the one-sided score, it was a good game, as both sides fielded very well, and the umpires were not called on for any very close decisions. Umpire Aengle had to assert himself at first, and then his decisions were taken as final. The Pennocks took the lead at the start, scoring five runs in the first inning, then in the fourth they added 12; the way they slugged the ball was awful, singles and two baggers quickly following one another. They finally in the succeeding innings, ran the score up to 25, while the best the Niessens could do was six. Jimmy Kilgallen's pitching was very effective, while Swan was a regular Killifer behind the bat. The opponents made but eight hits and received three bases on balls. Eisele and Ruley played well together, but the pitching just suited the Pennock boys, who made 27 hits, a number of them two baggers, and were given five bases on balls. After the game, all hands were grouped for a photograph, and then sat down to a good dinner in the club house with "Charlie" Grakelow as the host. With the passing of "pipes of backy," Mr. Grakelow referred in a humorous vein to the events of the afternoon and presented players, rooters and umpires with ball catchers, sun shields, horns, rattles, etc. S. S. Pennock and Arthur Niessen explained how it came about; one as a matter of course, and the other, wait until next time, when they meet again, in the near future, with Elmer H. Gaehring as host, at the Frankford athletic club. A rising vote of thanks, called for by Mr. Pennock, was given with a will. There were songs by Jack Cunningham and the company. Mr. Grakelow also provided later a movie exhibition, which was much enjoyed. It was a delightful afternoon to all whose good fortune it was to be present.

GERMAN mails and cables are now open.

A WASHINGTON special to the New York World says government control of telegraph and telephones will end July 31.

THE New York Sunday Sun of July 6 devotes considerable space to window boxes and contains a good account of the recent Chicago conventions of the seedsmen and nurserymen.

Personal.

Fred H. Howard, Los Angeles, Calif., was in Lyons, France, June 23, and reports a successful trip.

Wm. F. Gude and wife, Washington, D. C., were at Banff, Alberta, July 9.

Tinfoil Ought to Decline.

All the inter-allied tin, consisting of 10,169 tons, has been sold. A careful estimate of the supply of tin on hand in the United States shows there is sufficient to last until the end of October.

American Gladiolus Society.

As announced in our issue of July 5, page 1200, the tenth annual meeting of the American Gladiolus Society will be held in the Arcadia auditorium, Detroit, Mich., August 19-21, at the time of the annual convention of the Society of American Florists in that city. President A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind., urges all members of the organization to make a special effort to be in attendance, as it is desired to make this meeting one of importance and further the interests of the society to the fullest extent.

Chrysanthemum Exhibition at New York

The schedule of prizes to be awarded at the eighty-eighth annual fair and chrysanthemum exhibition of the American Institute of the City of New York, November 5-7, has been issued and copies may be had upon application to W. A. Eagelson, secretary board of managers, 324 West 23rd street, New York.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America offers special awards consisting of silver cups, medals and cash in 14 classes, while the American Institutes' list embraces 62 divisions for chrysanthemums, six for roses, six for carnations, three for begonias and two for violets.

Plant Inspection in Arkansas.

The third assistant postmaster general, under date of June 12, has announced that effective July 1, places for the terminal inspection of "all florists' stock, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, grafts, scions, buds, fruit pits, and other seeds of fruits and ornamental trees and shrubs, and other plants and plant products in the raw or manufactured state, except vegetable and flower seeds, provided that such list of plants and plant products shall not apply to plants and plant products shipped under certificate of the federal horticultural board", will be established in Arkansas.

All postmasters have been informed that packages containing plants or plant products addressed to places in the state of Arkansas may be accepted for mailing only when plainly marked so that the contents may be readily ascertained by an inspection of the outside thereof. The law makes the failure so to mark such parcels an offense punishable by a fine of not more than $100.

New York to Detroit.

The New York Florists' Club, for its route to the convention of the Society of American Florists at Detroit, Mich., August 19-21, has decided upon the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad to Buffalo, then by boat to the convention city. The party will leave New York, August 17, at 8:30 p. m., Hoboken, 8:55 p. m., due in Buffalo 7:30 the following morning, spending the day in that city, and leaving on the 6:00 p. m. boat, arriving in Detroit Tuesday morning

The railroad fare New York to Buffalo, is $12.85; berths, $2.16, including war tax. Boat fare, Buffalo to Detroit, is $4.32; stateroom accommodating two persons, $3.78.

Applications have already been received by the committee, which consists of A. L. Miller, Jamaica, N. Y., chairman; John G. Esler and P. W. Popp, to fill two cars, and it is most important that those who are going to travel with the club party notify the committee at once in order that the necessary reservations may be made. This is going to be the banner convention, so reservations should be arranged for at the earliest opportunity. Communicate with the chairman of the committee should any further information be desired.

Cottage Garden Nurseries.

The receiver of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Inc., Eureka, Calif., writes as follows, July 11:

"Unless some relief comes immediately we will lose practically all our young stock on hand. With the exception of a handful of men, the crew has been on a three weeks' strike. No work is being done on the bulb farm and only a little watering is done at the Eden plant. The orders are piling up in the office, and I am unable to get ready to deliver them. Already $28,000 worth of orders have been accepted, and I am positive to reach the $100,000 mark.

"As I have stated in my former statements, only $20,000 is needed to save the situation and to guarantee the creditors dollar for dollar on their claims. The local merchants have subscribed for $7,500, but it cannot be used unless the full amount is subscribed.

"It seems ridiculous, that with assets of over $300,000, I have been unable to sell the certificates which were ordered by the superior court of Humboldt county, and which constitute a first lien upon the crops. These certificates bear eight per cent interest and mature in six months or sooner.

"It seems to me that with 200 creditors and stockholders, they should at least co-operate and be able to raise that small amount, which is all that is necessary to protect themselves.

"Unless some action is taken, there is only one way left for me to follow, and that is to ask for my release as receiver, and after that I cannot vouch for the outcome.

"I cannot keep on this way and work without funds and see the stock starve on my hands, as the losses since the strike are already over $1,000 a day.

"Meetings of local creditors have been held, but without any results."

The Late Morris Hoffman.

Morris Hoffman died July 11 in the Jefferson hospital, Philadelphia, Pa., where after a month's illness, he had undergone an operation. Mr. Hoffman served most of his life in the commission business, first with the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., later for a number of years as foreman with A. L. Campbell, and for the past two years with the Leo Niessen Co. He was a hard working, faithful employe, very well liked by his associates and the retail trade.

DETROIT HOTELS.—The committee in charge of hotel arrangement for the S. A. F. convention urges all intending visitors to make reservations early, other conventions being held in the city at the same time.

BUSINESS NORMAL FOR SEASON.

Business was about normal for this season of the year, during the week just passed. The weather has been exceedingly hot and sultry, but a grateful relief came, July 13, the first rain we have had for several weeks. Outdoor gladioli were showing the effects of the dry spell. They are arriving in large numbers on the local market, in numerous varieties, and judging from present indications, they will soon dominate the demand. Summer roses are of good quality, particularly in Mrs. Russell and Hoosier Beauty varieties. A few of the new rose, Premier, are being offered, and although these are from the young stock, they give much promise for the coming season. The aster plants in the field are developing finely, and it will be but a short time until these will be offered on the market. Some handsome Hydrangea arborescens are being shown in the retail shops, and come in well at this season for various purposes, including decorative work and funeral sprays.

NOTES.

The Flick Floral Co. believes in publicity, particularly in the summer months, as they are carrying large display advertisements in the daily papers. They are featuring fine gladioli, and Russell roses, which they receive daily from their greenhouses. This firm had a number of wedding orders, besides a good amount of funeral work. Miss Alice Flick, of the store force, is spending a week's vacation at Clear Lake, Ind.

A large number of handsome baskets and other attractive arrangements of flowers were in demand last week for the opening of the new furniture store of The Rowland Company. Gladioli, Russell roses and American Beauties were the principal flowers used for the gifts for the opening, and the company also gave away thousands of roses and carnations. These latter were furnished by the New Haven Floral Co.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are cutting some good specimens of the new rose, Premier, from their young stock. Although they are having a fine cut of all the seasonable varieties in orchids, they are not nearly able to supply the big demand for them. H. K.

SUMMER BRINGS TRADE TO STANDSTILL.

Summer conditions now prevail and as a result business is at its lowest ebb. Transient sales are very limited as many of the usual patrons are now at their summer retreats. Vacation time for the employes has begun. Carnations have improved somewhat in size and the price has advanced to 75 cents per dozen. Roses are only fair, the best being Ophelia, Kaiserin and Hoosier Beauty, Maryland, Francis Scott Key and Sunburst are off crop and poor in quality. Garden flowers are much sought. Sweet peas are not up to standard and the supply is short. There is very little funeral work at this time.

NOTES.

Dewy Lester is now with the Hart & Vick greenhouses at Fairport, N. Y., having been given leave of absence by J. B. Keller Sons during July and August.

Edwin Wilson, son of E. P. Wilson, is spending the summer at Northport, Mass. Miss Elizabeth Wilson is taking her vacation at Holly, N. J.

Horace J. Head has severed his connection with H. E. Wilson's wholesale establishment. He is now spending a vacation at Hilton, N. Y.

Joseph C. Werckin and wife are rejoicing over the arrival of an eight-pound son.

We can now offer you all the finest colors in the Early or Winter Flowering type of Spencers—everything offered is grown on our own Floradale Farm in California.

The House of Burpee is recognized as the American Headquarters for Sweet Peas.

WHITE

3390 EARLY SANKEY (BURPEE'S). This truly magnificent white was awarded a special Silver Medal when exhibited at the great International Show in New York, March 20, 1915, also Certificate of Merit at the Spring Show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March 23, 1915. Black seeded. Pkt. 7c; oz. 80c; ¼ lb. $2.40; lb. $8 00.

3392 IMPROVED EARLY SNOWSTORM (BURPEE'S). The result of a cross between King White and Yarrawa, it embodies the best qualities of those two varieties and easily eclipses all early-flowering white Sweet Peas to date. The flowers are of Yarrawa size, but finer form, as the standard does not reflex but is magnificently bold, though charmingly waved. A vigorous grower, the immense flowers are invariably borne in fours on very long stems. Awarded Certificate of Merit at the International Show, New York, March 20, 1918. Our improved Snowstorm is so immeasurably superior to our original Snowstorm that we have now discarded the latter. Improved Snowstorm is the last word in Early-Flowering White Sweet Peas. Pkt., 10c; oz., $1.50; ¼ lb., $4.50; lb., $15.00.

CREAM

3342 EARLY CANARY BIRD (BURPEE'S). This is a splendid, rich, deep cream or primrose colored self. The flowers are of great size, beautifully waved, and usually borne three or four on a stem. Pkt., 7c; oz., $1.00; ¼ lb., $3.00; lb., $10.00.

CREAM PINK

LIGHT PINK

3376 EARLY LOVELINESS (BURPEE'S). The color is white, the entire flower being suffused soft pink and the edges distinctly picoteed with rose-pink. Pkt. 7c; oz. 85c; ¼ lb. $2.50; lb. $8.50.

DEEP PINK

3351 EARLY ENCHANTRESS (BURPEE'S). It is a bright rose-pink, becoming deeper toward the edges of standard and wings, gradually softening in tone toward the center of the flower. Pkt. 7c; oz. $1.00; ¼ lb. $3.00; lb. $10.00.

3383 EARLY PINK BEAUTY (BURPEE'S). The color is soft rose-pink on white ground, richer toward the edges, gradually softening in color as it reaches the center of standard and wings. Pkt. 7c; oz. $1.00; ¼ lb. $3.00; lb. $10.00.

CERISE

ORANGE

3381 EARLY ORANGE BEAUTY (BURPEE'S). Similar in color to Helen Lewis, therefore a glowing orange-scarlet with softer colored wings. Extremely free and early blooming, valuable alike for culture under glass or in the open as it withstands the sun and weather well. Pkt. 14c; oz. $3.00; ¼ lb. $9.00; lb. $30.00.

STRIPED AND FLAKED

3357 EARLY FANTASY (BURPEE'S). Striped and marbled with rich rose-pink on a creamy white ground. Exceedingly bright and makes a telling bunch when cut. Extremely free and a continuous bloomer, the flowers usually borne in threes and fours on long stems. Pkt., 7c; oz. 80c; ¼ lb. $2.40; lb. $8.00.

ROSE AND CARMINE

3362 FORDHOOK ROSE IMPROVED (BURPEE'S). Quite distinct from our original Fordhook Rose. The flowers are of immense size, usually borne in threes and fours on very long stiff stems. In color similar to the well-known George Herbert. A pleasing shade of rosy carmine. Pkt. 7c; oz. $1.00; ¼ lb. $3.00; lb. $10 00.

3393 EARLY SPLENDOR (BURPEE'S). A magnificent new deep rose self. The rich rose-crimson color is accentuated by the distinct white blotch at the base of standard and wings. The flowers are of great size, usually borne in fours on very long stems. Similar in color to the Summer-flowering Rosabelle. Pkt. 7c; oz. $1.00; ¼ lb. $3.00; lb. $10.00.

CRIMSON AND SCARLET

3374 EARLY KING (BURPEE'S). The finest early-flowering crimson. The flowers are of great size, perfect form, averaging fully two inches in diameter. Pkt. 7c; oz. 85c; ¼ lb. $2.50; lb. $8.50.

3388. EARLY ROSY MORN (BURPEE'S). Flowers grown under ordinary field culture have measured fully two inches in diameter. The flowers are usually borne in threes or fours on stiff, long stems. Color, a pleasing shade of rose with crimson-scarlet standard. Pkt. 7c; oz. 80c; ¼ lb. $2.40; lb. $8.00.

LAVENDER AND LIGHT BLUE

3375 EARLY LAVENDER KING (BURPEE'S). A first-class lavender has been much wanted in this type, therefore, we have great pleasure in offering the new Lavender King. This glorious new variety is a rich, true, deep lavender throughout. Similar in color to the summer-flowering varieties, Burpee's Orchid and R. F. Felton. The flowers are of large size, beautifully true waved form, and borne in threes and fours on stems of great length. Pkt. 7c; oz. 85c; ¼ lb. $2.50; lb. $8.50.

3399 EARLY ZEPHYR (BURPEE'S). This is a delightful shade of pale blue or lavender. It might be briefly described as a silvery blue self. An extremely dainty and charming variety. Pkt. 7c; oz. $1.00; ¼ lb. $3.00; lb. $10.00.

BLUE

MAUVE

3380 EARLY MAUVE BEAUTY (BURPEE'S). Color a pleasing shade of rosy mauve. The flowers are of immense size, often measuring two and one-half inches in diameter, yet exquisitely waved and of best Spencer form. A strong, vigorous grower and very free flowering. Charming under artificial light. Pkt. 7c; oz. 85c; ¼ lb. $2.50; lb. $8.50.

PICOTEE EDGED

3346 EARLY DAINTINESS (BURPEE'S). This has always been a favorite since it was first exhibited in 1915, when it was certificated. We have only now been able to work up a sufficient stock to offer to our friends. A strong grower, with flowers of largest size and usually produced in fours. Color pure white edged rose. Similar to Summer-flowering Dainty. Pkt. 7c; oz. 80c; ¼ lb. $2.40; lb. $8.00.

3352 EARLY EXQUISITE (BURPEE'S). The ground color is a soft shade of primrose, the edge of the standard and wings being beautifully "picoteed" with deep rose-pink. Pkt. 7c; oz. 85c; ¼ lb. $2.50; lb. $8.50.

BICOLOR

3361 FORDHOOK PINK AND WHITE (BURPEE'S). This is similar to the old Blanche Ferry, having a bright, rosy-pink standard with white wings, lightly suffused rose. Pkt. 7c; oz. 60c; ¼ lb. $1.80; lb. $6.00.

3398 YARRAWA. The flowers average two and one-half inches in diameter, many are duplex or double. The color is a bright rose-pink with a clear, creamy base. Our stock of this popular Australian variety is absolutely true. Grown by us from seed procured direct from the introducer. Pkt. 7c; oz. 75c; ¼ lb. $2.25; lb. $7.50.

The prices quoted are net for packets as well as larger quantities, f. o. b. Philadelphia, for delivery July to December. The above varieties—each the best in its class—provide a complete range of colors. We have many other desirable varieties of Early Flowering Spencers on which we shall be pleased to quote prices upon request.

HOT WEATHER AFFECTS TRADE.

The hot weather affected trade somewhat the past week, but at that the sales have been fair and compare favorably with those of last July. Stock is in good supply such as it is, but a few brisk days would find the market pretty well cleaned up in all lines. American Beauty roses are good property and move quickly each day at high prices. Mrs. Chas. Russell are in good demand and so are Premier, Columbia and Ophelia. The other roses grown for the market are also moving well considering the conditions and are not in any great oversupply. Carnations are still to be had, but the receipts are nowhere near as heavy as they have been. Gladioli are a big factor in the market and are moving fast at good prices. Peonies are obtainable but the end of the supply is in sight and another week will find them pretty well disposed of. Lilies and callas are included in the offerings in limited supply. Lily of the valley is holding its own and the same holds true for orchids. Pond lilies are good property and so are asters, which are more plentiful this week. Daisies, calendulas, candytuft, snapdragons, gypsophilla, larkspur and other miscellaneous seasonable stock is included in the shipments and is to be seen featured in many of the store windows this week. Greens of all kind appear to be plentiful, with ferns commanding good summer prices. The weather has been rather severe on the carnation plants in the field and the stock is not looking as well as in other years. They promise to be in exceedingly short supply this season and the growers who have not already arranged to secure what they need will find it to their advantage to do so at once. One large grower reports that he sold what surplus he had for $10 per 100 and could have easily disposed of many more at that figure.

NOTES.

Many of the local florists have signified their intention of attending the Detroit convention and from present indications this city will be largely represented. Some will make the trip by auto. Kroeschell Bros. Co., Poehlmann Bros. Co., American Bulb Co., Duro Paper Products Co., A. Henderson & Co., Allan W. Humason, Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Vaughan's Seed Store, American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Lord & Burnham, and the A. L. Randall Co. will be among the local firms to have space in the trade exhibition.

Miss Olga Tonner, of O. A. & L. A. Tonner, who has been confined to her home for several months with rheumatism, is able to be about again, and visited the store on several occasions the past week. Her many friends are pleased to hear of her recovery.

Victor Bergman, formerly with O. J. Friedman, and L. Koropp, formerly with the Ohio Floral Co., are to engage in the manufacture of prepared foliages. All arrangements are now being completed and further particulars will be announced later.

Charles Balluff, with Mrs. J. B. Freeman, Toledo, O., visited his many friends here this week on his way home from Fox Lake, where he had been spending his vacation.

Joe Carlin is back on the job at the Fleischman Floral Co. after enjoying a two weeks' vacation. Ed Mallison is now away on his vacation after a strenuous season.

Bassett & Washburn have sold over 25,000 plants of their new early double white pompons, with new orders arriving in every mail.

The eighth annual meeting of the directors and stockholders of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association was held at their store on North Wabash avenue, July 15. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: George Weiland, president; Ed. Meuret, vice-president; Chas. McCauley, treasurer, and Rudolph Ellsworth, secretary. Paul Klingsporn was retained as manager.

Vincent Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, Mo., arrived here from Michigan, July 14, where he had been spending his vacation. He visited several of the retail stores and the wholesale houses before returning home, besides spending one evening with Ed Eisner, now with Mangel, the Palmer House Florist, but formerly with his firm.

The programme for the state fair, which is to be held at Springfield, August 15-23, has been completed. The programme this year is the first to be given under the new administrative code, which provides for the direct management of the fair by the department of agriculture.

Miss Charlotte Paradise, cashier at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store, accompanied her mother to Benton Harbor, Mich., July 13, where she will spend her vacation. Miss Paradise is planning to spend a couple of weeks in beautiful Wisconsin.

Zech & Mann's new Kroeschell ice machine is in operation and is giving complete satisfaction. Vincent Gorly, of St. Louis, Mo., who was a visitor here this week, was very much impressed with it and considers it a great asset to any firm.

L. R. Bohannon, of the Bohannon Floral Co., is back from a fishing trip in northern Wisconsin and reports a most pleasant time. The fishing was good and he succeeded in landing some extra large brook trout. The trip was made by auto.

Otto H. Amling, secretary of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, advises the regular meetings of that organization are held at the Randolph hotel on the third Thursday of each month.

W. J. O'Carroll, of the Chicago University Botanic Garden, has been appointed superintendent of the Lincoln park greenhouses.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., is calling on the trade this week.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. is finding a ready market for its summer crop of American Beauty roses.

Bert Cole, with the E. C. Amling Co., and wife are spending their vacation at Sandusky, O.

E. C. Amling is driving a new Packard. He disposed of his old one to John Michelsen.

Henry Kruchten, of the John Kruchten Co., is enjoying a two weeks' vacation.

Frank Oechslin, who has been under the weather, is out and about again.

The remains of the late Joseph Craig were removed from the vault at Mt. Carmel cemetery, Wednesday, July 16, at 10 o'clock, to the family lot. The reason for the delay in the burial, was that the body was held awaiting the arrival of one of the Craig boys from overseas where he was serving with the American troops in France.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has four houses of carnations planted and work on the benching of the remainder is being pushed rapidly. The demand for chrysanthemum stock was exceedingly heavy this season, with a grand clean-up in all varieties. This firm is just coming in crop with five houses of asters.

The Misses Josephine and Cecile Then, and Lorraine Schultz, are making a western trip, which includes a tour of Yellowstone park and California.

William Wolf and wife spent the week-end in Michigan, returning July 13.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Hotel Randolph, July 10, with a small attendance, President Zech in the chair. Only routine business was transacted.

The report of the transportation committee on plans for the trip to Detroit for the annual convention of the Society of American Florists was adopted. The convention party will leave Monday, August 18, at 11:25 p. m. in special Pullman cars via the Wabash railroad, from the Dearborn station, Polk and Dearborn streets. The fare one way, tax included, is $8.82, lower berth, $2.16, upper berth, $1.73.

Paul R. Klingsporn, state vice-president of the Society of American Florists, was appointed chairman of the convention boosters' committee, with authority to select his associates on the committee. All friends are invited to join the party. For further information relative to special Pullmans, tickets, etc., communicate with H. L. Purdy, Division Passenger Agent, Wabash Railroad, Room 300 Royal Insurance building, 160 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago. Telephone Wabash 1920.

The regular club meetings were suspended for the summer, the next meeting to be held October 9.

Illinois State Horticultural Society.

The summer meeting of the Illinois State Horticultural Society will be held at Anna, Union county, July 31-August 1, upon invitation of the Union county farm bureau. Professor C. E. Durst, formerly of the department of horticulture of the University of Illinois, is the farm adviser for this county, which has had an excellent crop of fruit this year, of which great quantities will be shipped, together with produce, assuring a largely attended and interesting meeting. The complete programme and further data will be supplied later by Secretary A. M. Augustine, Normal, but members are assured that plans have already been made to make this the best, most valuable and comprehensive summer session in the history of the society. There will be orchard inspections, short talks on successes and failures, and actual demonstrations in the field, among the principal features. The visit to the state experiment station at Anna will in itself, be well worth the trip, and all in all, those who do not attend, will miss something worth many times the small expense incurred in making the trip.

JUNE BEST IN SEVERAL YEARS.

The month just passed has been the best June since 1916. Flowers have been plentiful and have brought good prices. The return from overseas of the soldiers has resulted in numerous weddings and social functions in which flowers played their part. The scarcity of lily of the valley has caused local growers to turn their attention to swainsona which makes up more gracefully than any other substitute. Delphiniums and gladioli have been in great demand for decorations. Roses are fast falling into the summer rut, with small colorless blooms, due to the extreme heat of the past week. Carnations are also on the wane and good flowers are hard to get. Indoor sweet peas are done for and the outdoor stock is now beginning to arrive. Statice, salpiglossis and bouvardia are much in demand.

NOTES.

Business at Philip Carbone's has been very good with six large weddings during the past month. Mr. Carbone has been in Europe during the past six months and has been making large shipments to his establishment here of Venetian glass and Florentine pottery.

Henry Cocola, buyer for Zinn's store, will tour the lakes of Maine during the last two weeks of July.

William Gilson, of Thomas Roland's staff, has gone to New Hampshire for a month's vacation.

Welch Bros. Co. reports very good business.

BUSINESS INCLINES TO DULLNESS.

According to reports from nearly all of the local florists, trade during the past week has been rather quiet. Temperatures have been extremely high and a large number of the population have left for vacations. The holidays of two weeks ago also cut in on the business. With the supply of indoor stock curtailed, prices have remained steady. Funeral work has been the principal factor for several days. There was a noticeable lack of street peddlers during June. It has been said that several of the smaller establishments put forth quite a number of these corner vendors, and for a while it appeared as if there was a well directed and established effort to firmly root this somewhat questionable business in this city. A number of the trade are now employing the leisure that comes with the hot season to better equip their establishments for the late summer and fall business.

NOTES.

Alpha Elberfield, of the Alpha Floral Co., recently returned from a vacation trip through the west and is again at his desk. He reports business good, considering the hot season. Gas was decently discovered on his farm near Olathe, Kan., while drilling for water. The well has been capped and will furnish fuel for the greenhouses, which it is planned to erect in the near future. About 20 acres of the farm has been plowed for planting which will commence at once.

Arthur Newell is preparing for a quick move to his new store at 1122 Grand avenue, which is fact nearing completion. As the work progresses, dismantling goes on at the old location and a small part of the equipment is moved. Under this plan, he will be able to close the old store in the evening, move during the night, and open for business in the new quarters on the morning of August 1.

Samuel Murray has enjoyed a good trade despite the warm weather. Considerable attention has been attracted to his fine plant display by a unique and artistic arrangement of tangerines grown at his greenhouses. The trees in pots have the effect of commanding notice to the store through this clever window display.

Fred Fromhold, of the Fromhold Floral Co., in the Muehlebach hotel, states that while business took a decline during the hot season, funeral orders have been unusually numerous. He enjoys a steady patronage from guests of the hotel.

Howard Bartlow, of the Akin Floral Co., says his firm has had a fairly good demand during the past month. Funeral work in considerable quantity has kept the force here quite busy.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. reports business, especial funeral orders, very good during the past two weeks.

R. F. M.

Milwaukee, Wis.

FUNERAL WORK ONLY FACTOR.

Aside from a little funeral work, there was not much activity the past week. The greater part of the daily consignments consist of outdoor flowers, such as delphiniums, Shasta daisies, gaillardias, gypsophilas, achilleas and sweet peas, while all the stock is showing the effects of the lack of rain, especially the sweet peas, which are small and short stemmed. The rose supply, while adequate, has a good call and moves well, while carnations are practically done for; a few fair ones are seen, but even these are more of a necessity than a credit.

CLUB MEETING.

While the regular florists' club meeting, July 10, was a bit late in getting into action, it still proved to be quite interesting to the 17 members present. H. Hornicke, who took over the former Kummer place, 1267 Hopkins street, was proposed for membership. A. Hare, for the entertainment committee, reported a net gain of $24.35 from the dance held May 15. Nic. Zweifel, state vice-president of the Society of American Florists, became pretty well warmed up while soliciting new members, and urging a strong turnout to the Detroit convention, August 19-21. There was some talk of organizing an auto party for this occasion. Several members present had a few new ideas which they thought would be a benefit to the Society of American Florists, and these may be brought up at the proper time. It was also decided to send Wm. Edlefsen and wife, of Lorane, Oregon, a telegram of congratulations for their golden wedding.

NOTES.

The Piggly Wiggly chain of stores used the following in the advertising announcing the opening of their first store: "We will express our gratitude by 'Saying it With Flowers'."

Announcement of the engagement of Miss Fanny Sinar to Walter H. Hummel, formerly in the florist business here, was made, July 13. E. O.

WEDDINGS STRONG TRADE FACTOR.

Trade showed quite an improvement last week over the previous one. The large number of wedding decorations proved very stimulating to the market, and most of the stores were busy. There is now an ample supply of roses of the new crop coming in. Most of the stock, while not extra long stemmed, is of good quality. The market is confined to Ophelia, Hadley, Shawyer and Ulrich Brunner. There are no Russell or American Beauties to be had. There is a large cut of Cecile Brunner, but it all finds a market. Gladioli are not so plentiful as heretofore neither is it of such good quality as earlier in the season. Fair returns are being received by the growers, however. There is an abundance of carnations, most of which goes into funeral work. Enchantress, both pink and white, are the best sellers. It is hard to move reds at any price. In variegated, Benora is always the leader, owing to its keeping qualities. Zinnias are coming along in limited quantities. Snapdragon can also be seer and is as popular as ever. Something new to the market this season is the supply of hunnemannias, which have proved very acceptable, owing to their beautiful yellow flowers and excellent keeping qualities. Buddleya magnifica and variabilis are being prominently displayed among the stores and are in much favor for baskets and decorations. Dahlias are arriving freely, but there is much room for improvement in the quality of the stock offered. Nearly all colors are to be had, but pink and red are the best sellers. There is still a large cut of sweet peas of mediocre quality arriving. The supply of delphiniums is limited, but of good quality. There is still quite a shortage of cattleyas. Good gardenias are also on the short side. Large stocks of hydrangeas are being used in decorations, both the pink and blue being available. There are plenty of statice and other perennials to be had. Pot grown hydrangeas are seen everywhere. Boston ferns are selling well and all the stores are carrying a large stock. Small piceas and abies in pots, ranging in size from one to three feet, are proving good sellers. There is a heavy cut of adiantum, of the best quality. All other greens are plentiful also.

NOTES.

Mrs. Jennie McWilliams Collie, wife of David Collie, a pioneer nurseryman of this state, died July 4, at the age of 65 years. She was a native of Stonehaven, Kincardinshire county, Scotland. Together with her husband, she came to California in the early days and established a nursery at Redwood City. She is survived by her husband, who has retired from the nursery business for several years. Mrs. Collie had a large number of friends in the trade, who will regret to hear of her passing.

W. B. Aldrich, of M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa., has been visiting the trade in this city. He has been looking for a suitable location for the establishment of a western distributing point for his firm. The business has grown to such a size, according to Mr. Aldrich, that it is considering very seriously the carrying of a large stock in this city to take care of their trade in the west.

With the passing of the large collection of orchids belonging to Dr. Parker, of Santa Cruz, to the firm of Ferrari Bros. in this city, Dr. Parker discontinues the growing of these plants. For many years he has been sending his stock to this market, but it is a matter of much satisfaction to the trade to know that they will remain in this city permanently at the Ferrari greenhouses.

John Carbone, the orchid specialist of Berkeley, is getting his stock in fine shape for fall trade. He is constantly adding to his large collection, and has many new hybrids which will flower this fall for the first time, and of which he expects great results. The brasso-cattleya hybrids, which he has already flowered, showed up wonderfully well, particularly as to size and color.

The Art Floral Company reports a busy week with the wedding decorations. Chief among these was the Buckland wedding, where everything was carried out on an elaborate scale under the direction of Alfred Cuneo. The unique manner in which it was handled was greatly commended.

The telephone strike, which is now entering on its third week in this city, is proving a great hardship to all in the trade. It necessitates the employment of special messengers by nearly all the stores. There does not seem to be any likelihood of a settlement being reached at this writing.

E. Schuentenbaus, proprietor of the Mayfield Nursery, has joined the ranks of the benedicts. He has returned from his wedding trip and he and the bride are cosily domiciled at his home at Mayfeld. He is sending in a fine cut of hunnemannias to this market every day.

F. C. Jaeger & Son and the Art Floral Company, are showing some beautifully trained specimens of golden California privet, grown in pots, at the entrance to their stores. They are something out of the ordinary, and are greatly admired by the public.

Brown & Kennedy have been busy with funeral work lately. They report stock plentiful. They expect to make many improvements in their store before the fall season opens, so as to be able to take care of their ever increasing business.

Robert Newcomb, of Chicago, has left this city, after a successful visit in the interest of his firm. He remained over to attend the funeral of the late Peter Ferrari and serve as one of the pallbearers.

M. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, called on the trade this week. He reports business rather quiet up his way, chiefly owing to the warm weather. He will shortly start for a vacation at the beach resorts.

J. W. Grandy, of Norfolk, Va., spent some days here calling on the trade. He is on his way home after attending the Rotary Club convention at Portland.

L. Scatena, who is in charge of the shipping department of the Art Floral Company, is spending a vacation in the mountain country on a fishing trip.

Manager Luke Uzick, of the J. B. Boland store, says trade is keeping up in good shape with them in their new temporary quarters at Lick place.

CLUB MEETING.

Notwithstanding the heavy rain, about 25 members of the florists' club journeyed nine miles out of the city on the night of July 10 to attend the monthly meeting, which was held at the home of Fred Goldring, a former president, at Font Grove. In the absence of President William Newport, Mr. Goldring presided at the short meeting. Besides the reading of a few communications, and the receipt of one application, which was held over until the August meeting, the principal item of business was a discussion on the advisability of holding a clambake this year. The high prices of the commodities necessary for a bake were mentioned as a strong deterrent. The members voted finally to place the matter in the hands of the entertainment committee, with instructions to report at the August meeting. Following the adjournment, refreshments were served by the host and a social hour was enjoyed by the members. On invitation of Frederick Henkes, the August meeting will be held at the establishment of Henkes Brothers, Newtonville. Among the visitors at the meeting was Walter Mott, traveling representative for Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y. Mr. Mott, who lives in Schenectady, had not been at a meeting of the local florists' club for a year. The members were glad to renew their acquaintance with Mr. Mott, who has traveled this territory for many years.

NOTES.

About 100 relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ansel D. Carpenter, of Cohoes, were present at the celebration of their golden wedding, which took place at Brookside park, a short distance east of Troy, July 8. The celebration took the form of a clam steam. Among those present were several of the florists of Troy and Cohoes. In behalf of these, John E. Sambrook, of Sambrook Brothers, Troy, presented the couple with a silver loving cup in which were 50 yellow roses. Mrs. Carpenter was given a miniature shower bridal bouquet, and each woman present received a bouquet of Ophelia roses. The programme included short addresses of congratulation by the Rev. Drs. George A. Armstrong and George Perry, and Dr. J. H. Mitchell, a popular physician and a former mayor of Cohoes. Among those present were relations from Seattle, Wash., Pennsylvania, and Newfoundland. The programme was prepared by Dale S. Carpenter, the only son of the couple. Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter were married in Pennsylvania half a century ago. Mr. Carpenter and his son have been in the florist business in Cohoes for more than 40 years, and are well known in this locality.

The club members sympathise with President Newport in the death of his brother, Arthur, age 53 years. A despatch from Oneonta states that Arthur Newport was found dead in the kitchen of his home July 3, from gas asphxyiation. He left a note to his three daughters saying his strength was gone and bidding them good bye. Mr. Newport had been in ill health for some time. He was born in Bristol, England, January 22, 1866, and came to this country with his parents when he was five years old. He learned the florist business in Albany, and in 1895 went to Oneonta to work in the Grove Street Greenhouses. He remained with the successive proprietors until the time of his death. The funeral services were held Saturday, July 5, at Oneonta where the Rev. Dr. Edson J. Farley officiated. The body was brought to the home of his mother, Mrs. Martha Newport, 330 Western avenue, Albany, and thence was buried in the Albany Rural cemetery. Mr. Newport, besides his mother, is survived by three young daughters, three brothers, Benjamin, William, and George Newport, and two sisters, Mrs. Nellie Slingerland, and Miss Katherine Newport, of Albany.

An exhibition of the garden work of the school children of the city will be held in Chancellor's hall, state education building, September 6. Last year, about 2,000 gardens were planted by the school children of the city; the number this year is said to be larger. Prizes will be awarded for the best gardens and for the best exhibits of flowers and vegetables. The local woman's club is interested in the school garden work, and has named Mrs. J. Henry Johnson, chairman of the garden committee of the club. The gardens are being visited through the summer by Miss Virginia Hastings and Mrs. Saitee Baumann.

During the long June days, A. J. Hilton of 412 Second avenue, this city, was kept busy showing visitors the rambler roses, ablaze with color on the 30 foot trellises he had built for them in the yard of his home.

CLUB MEETING.

The club meeting, July 8, was well attended, and the proceedings devoted almost exclusively to the affairs relating to the approaching convention of the Society of American Florists. Chairmen of several committees were appointed as follows: Hotels and reception, E. A. Fetters; Subscriptions, Chas. H. Plumb; Finance, E. A. Fetters; Music and entertainment, Walter Taepke; Press, M. Bloy; Refreshments, Philip Breitmeyer; Decoration, Henry Forster; Automobiles, A. Pochelon; Bowling, Joseph Streit; Badges and publicity, Wayne McLaughlin.

The Saginaw-Bay City Floricultural Society, through its secretary, Henry W. F. Goetz, enlisted the club's support in an attempt to organize a state florists' association, and to that end, letters will be addressed to every florist in the state to attend the S. A. F. convention here August 19-21, and to be present at the initial meeting of the proposed organization, which will be held in the Arcadia hall at an hour to be later announced from the chair.

UNUSUALLY DULL BUSINESS.

The past week was a record breaker for dull business, as reported by all retailers. The warm weather and scarcity of funeral work were the contributing factors. Stock of all kinds has been, and will be plentiful, but the quality of the roses is hard to maintain, owing to the excessive heat and humidity. Gladioli are now on the market in limited quantities, but they only serve for advantageous window display thus far.

NOTES.

Vice-President E. A. Fetters of the Society of American Florists is daily receiving applications for hotel accommodations from all parts of the country, indicating the prospects for the greatest attendance the society has ever had. Two other big conventions are to be held here the same week, making the early reservations of rooms at the hotels imperative.

Charles H. Plumb, 1430 Burns avenue, has taken out incorporation papers covering the business, effective July 1. Charles H. Plumb is named president, Robert F. Plumb is secretary-treasurer, and Albert E. Docksey, who has been in Mr. Plumb's employ for 25 years, holds a portion of the stock.

A. Pochelon and family are enjoying their fishing and hunting lodge at Lovells, Crawford county, Mich. The trip was made in Mr. Pochelon's Hudson "Super-Six."

Harry Taylor, manager of the Breitmeyer store in the David Whitney building, was married June 21 at Washington, D. C., to Miss Helen Burga of that city.

Peter Rush has purchased two acres of land at Inkster, Mich., on which he will soon build a residence and greenhouses.

Walter Taepke and family have gone to their summer home on the Canadian shore at Lake St. Clair.

MARKET CONDITIONS SHOW IMPROVEMENT.

The weather during the past week appears to have given the market a favorable turn; stocks appear in better form and buyers have shown a trifle more energy. Gladioli,, a plentiful supply of roses, such as they are, and a rather surprising quantity of carnations, that show up very well for so late in the season, and cattleyas, are the quantity items. Hydrangeas, cornflowers, achilleas, feverfews, gaillardias, water lilies, the first of the dahlias and sweet peas are also prominent and quite important offerings. The gladioli are seen in good variety and are largely used by the artists in all the funeral and decorative work of this season. There is a wonderful difference in the quality of this stock. It would appear to pay growers to force for flowers only the largest bulbs of the best varieties, give them the best location in well prepared and enriched soil, and with overhead watering insure the necessary moisture. This means some additional effort and expense, but instead of from three to six cents the quality stock will bring 10 to 12 cents and is always in demand. Almost anything will sell in the summer market if it is just a little better than the ordinary, for much that comes in, is so poor that one wonders what the grower is thinking about or expects to get out of it.

July 14.—The receipts of the various stocks, while not heavy, were more than enough for the demand, there being very listless buying. There were fair Russell and Columbia and very nice looking Premier. Gladioli were plentiful, and there were a few more asters.

GRADING AND PACKING.

Grading, bunching, getting the stems and flowers well filled with water before shipping, careful packing and seeing that the boxes get to the market early in the morning, are just as essential as skill in growing. August Doemling, Lansdowne, whose specialty is roses, grades the stock as soon as cut, wrapping each 25 in a sheet of stout, brown paper, on which is stamped the grade. This paper projects an inch or more beyond the flowers. A rather firm tie outside the paper binds the package firmly. These are then placed in the cold storage room, ready for quick handling and packing early the next morning. This is unquestionably the best method of protecting such fragile stock as freshly cut roses, whose petals are easily torn by thorns or are broken off in the handling, or dry out and wilt when lying about exposed to drafts, and in the packages, are quickly counted, not one, but 25 at a time. That this practice is not universal proves how hard it is to get new ideas or improved methods adopted. Men will go on, year after year, doing things as they were taught years before, while their more progressive neighbors are quick to see and profit by the new and practical ways that are alike open to all.

DETROIT CONVENTION PLANS.

The transportation committee presents the following information as to time of trains, routes, rates, etc., from this city: Via Pennsylvania system, all rail; leave North Philadelphia station, Monday, August 18, 11:20 a. m., due Detroit, 7:45 a. m., Tuesday. Fare, including tax, one way, $20.90; Pullman, lower berth, $3.78. Rail and boat route: Via Lehigh Valley; leave Reading Terminal, 9:15 a. m. Sunday, August 17, due Buffalo, 8:25 p. m. Fare, $11.99. Spend the night in Buffalo and Monday in sight seeing and a side trip to Niagara Falls. Leave on steamer in company with New York delegation at 6 p. m., eastern time, due in Detroit, 8 a. m. Tuesday. Fare on boat, $4.50; berths, upper, $1.50; lower, $2.00; stateroom accommodations for three, $3.50. There should be a good representation from this city and surrounding territory. The convention promises to be one of the best ever held by the society. Detroit is a beautiful city, where any of the craft are always sure of a warm welcome, and when attending in a body, are splendidly entertained. The trip going and returning presents an opportunity to see many of the large trade establishments of the country. The New York delegation now numbers over 100, and reports from other centers show an unusual interest. It is important that reservations should be made at once, and individually, as there is no quantity or convention rates.

NOTES.

S. S. Pennock attended a special meeting of the executive committee of the American Rose Society in New York, July 14. Mr. Pennock, in a recent trip on the New York, New Haven and Hartford road, stated that in all the deep cuts, the banks were planted with Dorothy Perkins roses. This was done to keep the slope from caving and hold down the dust. This planting extended from west of New Rochelle to East Rowayton, a distance of 25 miles, and as he saw them in full flower, they presented a beautiful decorative effect.

C. U. Liggit finds an ever increasing demand for all kinds of forcing greenhouse stock. Freesia bulbs are all sold. Cyclamen seed are going fast. Carnation plants, field grown, are sold up very close. Prices are now $10 per hundred for any stock worth handling, and $12 for some varieties. He believes there will not be one-fourth enough for the demand.

The wholesalers are having trouble with letter mail deliveries, many orders arriving too late to be filled. Expensive long distance telephone calls or telegrams are thus made necessary, which places another cost to the many recently added and which appear as if destined to stay.

Eugene Bernheimer and wife are now motoring in the White Mountains, their itinerary being from this city to Portland, Me., and return by routes that will take them to many points of interest. They expect to be gone about two weeks.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange finds a good demand for summer roses, some varieties of which are not being rested by their growers.

Caspar Pennock, of Lansdowne, has his rose stock in a very good condition for the season. Mock and Maryland are cutting freely.

John Young and Major P. F. O'Keefe passed through this city Monday, enroute to the July meeting of the Baltimore Florists' Club.

MUCH STOCK SACRIFICED.

The intense heat that prevailed during the first week of this month, forced out an immense stock, particularly in roses, which were thrown on the market to be sacrificed at cost. By the same token, as the hot weather brought in the flowers, it drove tens of thousands of people out of the city. The multitude that remained had their minds centered on getting what little comfort could be had in the sizzling atmosphere, but flowers did not, to any great extent, enter into their scheme of existence. Although the weather of the past week was much cooler, the supply of stock continued heavy with prices, on such as could be sold, at a low level. Even orchids, which were not plentiful, were slow and dropped in price. But few roses of special grade can be expected at this time, but fairly good stock, as it came out of the boxes, has sold for $20 per 1,000. As a matter of course, buyers of small lots of picked stock, have paid higher prices, but none to compare with the June market. It must also be taken into account that much stock has been lost. The American Beauty situation was no better. Thousands of specials came in; a few would sell, when fresh, at $20 or $25 per 100, but the problem was, what to do with the surplus. Much long stemmed stock that started as "special," finally sold for $6 per 100. It is unnecessary to devote much space to carnations and sweet peas, for the bulk of both stocks reached the market in such a condition that they had better never to have been shipped. There were a few passably good carnations—for the season—but a bunch of good sweet peas was almost a novelty. A heavy stock of gladioli has been arriving, but has gone down in the general catastrophe of prices. Fairly good asters have arrived in limited quantities. Although the supply of lilies and lily of the valley is light, there is but little demand for either, and they too lag.

July 12.—A week of continuous cool weather has somewhat reduced the supply of stock, made city life more endurable, and slightly improved both wholesale and retail conditions. If there is no great advance in prices, less stock is being lost in the wholesale district. The asters that come in, sell readily at 50 cents per dozen.

July 14.—The supply of roses is much lighter than a week ago, but the demand also continues light. There is but little good rose stock on the market.

NOTES.

Some of the older generation of florists will recall the name of John Henderson, who in 1870. and later, conducted a range in Flushing, N. Y. In his time, he was a progressive and successful grower. He was the son of a London, England, horticulturist of note. After coming to New York, Mr. Henderson for a time, conducted the place known as the "Oaks," the Taylor estate. Eventually, he bought a tract of land bounded by Parsons, Queens, Burling and Forest avenues, in Flushing, on which he erected greenhouses. Previous to his death, about 20 years ago, he donated the site for the Flushing hospital and much other bequests. The greenhouses were long since removed. The land has been platted, and 25 of the 75 dwellings to be erected on it have already been started. Dennis Kamer, a well known seedsman, formerly with Vaughan's Seed Store, now with J. M. Tharburn & Co., worked for Mr. Henderson in 1870.

George J. Ball, the sweet pea specialist of Glen Ellyn, Ill., was in the wholesale district July 14. He is not altogether a stranger to this city. Years ago, he worked on the John Henderson place at Flushing. He enlisted in the 71st regiment of New York for the Spanish-American war and went to Cuba. He returned seriously ill and was for some time in the Flushing hospital. Later, he served in the Philippines, and on his return, settled in the west.

James Sullivan, who enlisted in the United States army on our entrance into the war—and saw it through in France—is now with the United Cut Flower Co. Hugh Pada, who enlisted at the same time in the same company, and went through it with Sullivan, is now with Riedel & Meyer.

Peter Theopine, of the Boulevard Floral Co., Broadway and 86th street, has sailed for Greece for a visit of two months. He is a popular man, both with Americans and Greeks of this city, and all will wish him a prosperous and happy sojourn in his native land.

The directors of the Cut Flower Exchange held their annual outing and shore dinner at Patchogue, L. I., July 8. Patchogue is now the home of John Donaldson, a retired florist, formerly prominent in the exchange.

H. Baylis, of the New York Cut Flower Co., is receiving a good variety of roses from Dailledouze Brothers; also good asters from John Reimel's Sons, Woodhaven, N. Y.

Albert A. Schanzer, formerly well known in the retail trade of this city, has returned from a year's stay in France with the 6th Division, United States army.

M. Schwartz and wife, who have greenhouses at Central Park, L. I., now have a neat store in a fine new building at 427 Fulton street, Jamaica.

Nicholas Carajanes, a florist of Minneapolis, Minn., has been spending a week with his brother, George J. Carajanes, the florist of 2594 Eighth avenue.

Emil Schloss has so far recovered from his recent attack of rheumatism as to be at the store. He will go away for a time for rest.

Visitors: Charles Robinson and Herman Hackle, representing Henry M. Robinson & Co., Boston, Mass.

DEMAND MOVES ORDINARY SUPPLY.

Business is somewhat quiet, but is sufficient to take up substantially a very ordinary supply. Out-of-town business, however, appears to be holding up fairly well. Roses are in fair quantity. Gladioli are plentiful. Easter lilies and rubrums are coming into the market regularly. Asters are now a daily factor, and up to this time have been selling well. Other offerings are water lilies, sweet sultans, snapdragons, and a few out-door sweet peas.

NOTES.

W. Ray Murphy is spending his vacation on an automobile trip to various Indiana points; while his sister, Miss Clare Murphy, has gone to the Murphy cottage at Les Chenaux, Mich.

W. C. Schaefer Floral Company has been sending some excellent rubrum and Harrisii to C. E. Critchell during the past fortnight.

H.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—Ryan & Culver have purchased and taken charge of the retail store and range conducted by H. H. Cade since 1914.

WINSTED, CONN.—Carl Swenson, a prominent florist and resident of this city for more than 25 years, died here June 26, age 66 years.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

DULUTH, MINN., July 9.—Flax seed sold at a new high record of $6.02 here today.

CHICAGO. — Charles Hollenbach is making a western trip, taking in Yellowstone park.

GILROY, CALIF. — Lin W. Wheeler and wife, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., returned July 7.

DUTCH BULB prices in Holland advanced materially in June. Some kinds are no longer obtainable.

WESTERN reports on pea crops are so bad that many buyers are looking for carried over stocks of the 1918 crop.

W. R. HASTINGS, Atlanta, Ga., who remained at Chicago for some time after the convention, returned home July 9.

HOWARD M. EARL, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., returned home July 10, after an extended tour of Europe and South America.

THE seed testing school of the United States department of agriculture began in Washington July 7 and will continue during the greater part of July and August.

THE Nebraska wheat crop is 100 per cent west of the Missouri river. The estimate for the state is 83,000,000 bushels. Corn has been laid by in nearly all sections and looks like a bumper crop.

NEW YORK.—Business was at low ebb during the hot period, but now shows more activity. Freesias, fertilizers, bamboo canes and other supplies are in demand. Early shipments of Paper Whites are expected.

PORTLAND, ORE.—A fire which started from the explosion of a gasoline tank on a launch, July 5, resulted in the destruction of the seed warehouse of the Charles H. Lilly Co., the loss being between $75,000 and $100,000.

BOSTON, MASS.—R. & J. Farquhar & Co. say the war garden excitement has shown abatement during the last year and in consequence more attention has been given to flowers, shrubs and trees. The nursery business has been particularly active.

BENTON HARBOR, MICH.—The business of the Michigan Bulb Co., of this city has been taken over by the National Bulb Farms, a new corporation capitalized at $100,000. The officers are: August G. Pruyser, president; H. S. Gray, secretary, and F. L. Bradford, treasurer.

TOLEDO, O.—October and December clover opened 25 cents higher July 14 than on the previous day, with cash quoted at $28.25, October $29.15 and December, $23.50. Timothy was unchanged, cash being offered at $5.50, September $6.10, October $5.85, December, $5.87½ and March $6.10.

Onion Sets.

The acreage put out for onion set production this year in the south side district of Chicago, according to the Government Seed Reporter of July 12, is probably a little larger than for last year. The early sown beds have developed well. The sets are all bulbing at this time but the early sets show a much larger growth of top and with favorable weather conditions should develop from now on much better than the late sown fields, which have a much smaller top and need rain at this writing. Fields are very uneven because weather conditions at planting were not satisfactory. Some fields sown in sandy soil started immediately and are in good shape; others with a clay soil formed a crust so that onions could not come through. It is thought that the yield in this section will average at least five bushels per pound of seed sown.

The acreage in the Louisville district is slightly larger than that of last year. Prospects for a crop are good at this time, although a week ago they needed rain badly. A precipitation came in time, however, to bring about good condition, but there must be good growing weather with more moisture during July for the crop to develop properly.

Packers Want All Foods.

Armour & Co. increased their canned goods sales from about $6.500,000 in 1916 to $16,000 000 in 1917, whereas the combined sales of these products of Austin Nichols Co. and Sprague, Warner & Co., two of the largest independent wholesalers, amounted to only some $6,000,000 in 1917. Early in 1917, Armour & Co. first undertook the handling of rice, and in that one year sold more than 16,000,000 pounds, thus becoming at a single move, on the statement of the vice-president of the company, 'the greatest rice merchant in the world.' During this period the wholesale price of rice increased 65 per cent.

Col. Davis, Q. M. C., told the house sub-committee investigating conduct of war that $100,000,000 worth of surplus canned vegetables was added to army rations to ease minds of canners, who feared effect of dumping these stores on the open market. Canners also feared the farmers would not plant vegetables this year and the canning industry would be stalled if the war department surplus was sold.

Pacific Coast Seed Crops.

The Chas. H. Lilly Co., Seattle, Wash., have the following in a communication dated June 19:

"The weather to date has been ideal for practically all kinds of crops. Cabbage pods are setting fine and there is every prospect of an abundant yield. We estimate the acreage planted is 25 per cent larger than usual. Cost of production has not decreased and the best land rents for $50 to $60 per acre. These observations are made after inspection of our contract fields two weeks ago. The experienced grower demands nearly as much for growing cabbage or other seeds for next year as he will receive for this year's crop and while the seed growers feel that in view of probable European competition selling prices will of necessity be lower, some of the older and larger seed houses are placing their contracts with the older and more experienced farmers at practically the same price as last year, they knowing from observation that, although it is possible to contract with inexperienced farmers with probably unsuitable land who will grow seed cheaper, they can not produce the quality which the trade requires. The acreage for cabbage for 1920 is not so large as this year, and this is particularly so of Wakefields, of which there is a much larger acreage than usual this season.

Of turnip and rutabagas there is a large acreage growing for seed in territory we personally inspect, and we anticipate a heavier crop than usual.

VEGETABLE SEEDS

With our Stock Seed Farms at Grass Lake, Mich., and our growing stations in every part of the United States where seeds are grown successfully, all in charge of capable and experienced men, we are equipped for and are producing of all kinds in quantity and of highest quality.

Glad to quote for present delivery or on growing contract for crop of 1919.

JEROME B. RICE SEED CO., CAMBRIDGE, N. Y.

Growers' prices appear to be quite reasonable in comparison with other vegetable seeds. Only a few turnip and rutabaga contracts for 1920 harvest have been placed so far, but present indications point to a much smaller acreage.

Beets and spinach have just had a good start, but everything will depend on weather conditions from now on, which will largely affect the crop. Spinach will be a much smaller crop this year than last, only the larger growers having placed contracts.

In beet and mangel, the acreage for next year is going to be considerably less than this season.

Quotations should reach the department on or before 2 p. m., Tuesday, July 22, 1919. Upon this date all bids will be opened by the department board of awards, and members of the seed trade are cordially invited to be present either in person or by representatives. The prices on the various items will be read aloud by the chairman of the board, but the quantities quoted upon, and other information submitted by the bidders, will be treated as confidential matter. After the awards have been made, orders will be placed with the successful bidders by telegram, which will be followed by a letter stating the conditions under which the order is placed and also giving reasons why any other items quoted on were not accepted by the department.

All unsuccessful bidders will be advised by letter why their bids on each item were not accepted; from whom these items were purchased and the prices paid.

The departmen reserves the right to reject all bids in whole or in part.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, July 15.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen boxes, $2.25 to $2.50; celery, Michigan, crate, $1.00 to $1.25; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 25 cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50; tomatoes, 4 baskets, $1.00 to $1.50.

New York, July 14.—Celery, per doz. roots, 25 cents to $1.25; cucumbers, $1.50 to $2.00 per dozen; mushrooms, 75c to $3.50 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 15 to 30 cents; lettuce, per package, 50 cents to $2.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $2.00.

Tomato Blight and Leaf Spot Control.

According to the agricultural college extension service of the Ohio State University, Columbus, tomato blight and tomato leafspot may be controlled by spraying with Bordeaux mixture at intervals of 10 days. Small amounts of Bordeaux may be made as follows: Dissolve one ounce of copper sulphate, commonly known as blue stone or as blue vitrol, in one-half gallon of water; dissolve one and one-half ounces of hydrated lime in another half-gallon of water; then pour the two solutions together and spray at once. Some of the many proprietary spray mixtures containing copper sulphate which are on the market give satisfactory results.

Vegetable Growers' Convention.

The annual convention of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America, which will be held at Detroit, Mich., September 9-12, promises to be one of the most interesting and best attended meetings in the history of the organization. Special features will include a trade exhibit, an educational section and a small display of vegetables. Time will be taken during the three days to visit points of special interest in Detroit and vicinity, and much is being planned for the comfort, pleasure and entertainment of the delegates. The attendance, it is believed, will exceed the usual number of more than 500. All vegetable growers are urged to attend this meeting, which is being arranged with a view to giving the greatest possible measure of pleasure, profit and satisfaction.

Those desiring a copy of the programme, to be issued later, or wishing further information, should write Samuel W. Severance, secretary, Louisville, Ky., or C. W. Waid, chairman of the convention committee, East Lansing, Mich.

Summer Lettuce.

By the term summer lettuce we mean leaf lettuce—such varieties as Grand Rapids and Simpson. Nothing in the line of head lettuce is of any value here (Ohio) in the summer. We say this with some emphasis because we have spared neither pains nor money for 10 years and we finally hoist the white flag. All signs fail in dry weather should read—all varieties fail in hot weather. Sometimes we get a cool summer and make a tolerable sucess, which tempts us to try again and the result is a half dozen miserable failures to one success. At the present cost of production, this procedure is not inviting, and we leave it to somebody else. We used to produce the spring crop excessively and cold-store one-half for summer use, but in recent years we have been unable to supply the demand fresh from the farm and cold storage has become a dream.

To return to leaf lettuce, the fundamental requirements are mechanical watering and uncovered seed. Some growers have not learned this, but the fact remains, do not cover your seed in summer. We remove the covering device on the seed drill and run the seeds into the marks made by the marker. The roller wheel will gently press this down, squeezing the seeds into place with no covering. Then we start the watering and never stop as long as the sun shines, until our seeds are fast, which will be two days. By this method failure is absent. When well up, we thin to 8 or 10 inches in the rows—and having the rows 12 to 14 inches apart. The wheel hoe can do the rest. We see to it that the land in use has some humus. Then we use sulphate ammonia, or nitrate soda or nitrate of potash as top-dressing, the latter being the best under most conditions. Without ample water, it is useless to attempt summer lettuce in most parts of this country. Some years it is a paying crop; the greater the difficulties, the greater the reward is true again. We sold large quantities last year in August at 15 cents per pound, when at Christmas before it ruled at 12½ cents.

MARKETMAN.

Vegetable Markets.

With steady shipments during the period, July 8-15, markets showed some improvement according to reports to the bureau of markets of the department of agriculture. All potato markets advanced from 50 to 75 cents, the largest gains appearing in the west. Eastern shore of Virginia Cobblers went up steadily at shipping points, closing at $6.25-$6.75 per barrel f. o. b. All markets showed advances of from $1 to $1.50, closing at $7-$7.50. New York and Philadelphia were somewhat lower. Norfolk Cobblers advanced, registering gains of $1 and closing at $5.50-$6.50. Southwestern Bliss Triumphs, sacked, showed little change, moving at $4-$4.50 in northern markets. North Carolina Cobblers showed light advances closing at $5.75-$6.25. Onion markets were stronger. Virginia yellow stock ranged higher at shipping points closing at $2.75 per 100 pounds. Consuming markets showed advances and closed at $2.75-$3.25 per bushel hamper. California yellows sold for $6.50 in northern markets. Kentucky stock showed a gradual increase at shipping points to $4.75-$5. Tomatoes made a slight advance. Tennessee 4's went to $1.70-$1.80 at shipping points, but closed a little weaker. Consuming markets showed a closing range of $1.75-$2.50 but Chicago markets were somewhat lower, Minneapolis quoted a few Mississippi 4's at $1.25-$1.75. New Jersey 4's appeared in eastern markets selling at a wide range of $1.75-$3.25. Shipments increased to 440 cars compared with 336 last week and 520 a year ago. New Jersey led with 219 cars while Tennessee shipped 148.

GOOD SUMMER TRADE.

In spite of the very hot days and the hegira to the country of large numbers of the fashionable folks, trade continues good; in fact, unusually so for the season. The clerks and salespeople in the stores are now taking advantage of the period and are enjoying vacations. Some of the trade still have good roses, a few carnations and gladioli are now coming in. Rubrum lilies also help out quite a little. Funeral work, however, forms the greater part of the demand.

NOTES.

The Joy Floral Co. is cutting a nice lot of Columbia, Russell and Killarney. All their carnations are now coming from field-grown plants, but in about 10 days, cuttings will commence from the houses on next winter's stock. It will require about two more weeks to make all repairs to the houses damaged by the recent hailstorms, which entailed an expense of about $7,000 for glass and labor in putting it in.

The McIntyre Floral Co. reports good business but stock has been limited. Roses are scarce, there are no carnations but they have enough small flowers of various sorts to take care of a very good call.

Geny Bros. are doing well in the call for funeral work and have a good supply of rubrum lilies to help out. They are also receiving fine roses and gladioli.

Miss Lillian Joy is visiting friends and relatives in Kansas City.

BUSINESS EXCEEDS EXPECTATIONS.

The usual dullness due to summer did not manifest itself this year. June ended with a rush up to the last hour and with the exception of two days, business has been better than is generally the case at this season. Continued dry weather has caused the outdoor stock to show inferiority. Indoor flowers are small. Some good Russell roses are offered, also American Beauties and few are going to waste. Gladioli are improving and are very welcome at this time. Sweet peas, larkspurs, calendulas and a few outdoor flowers are helping out in the sales. The cleaning and repairing of the greenhouses is now going on and most of the growers will be busy in this line until the call for the annual picnic and the Detroit convention, at which from all reports, there will be a large delegation from this city.

NOTES.

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress Street, Boston, Mass., Counsel; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa Treasurer.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

A HEARING on the proposed eradication of Berberis vulgaris in the state has been called by the Illinois department of agriculture at the capitol building, Springfield, August 9 at 10:00 a. m.

SEAFORD, DEL.—V. R. Allen, commenting on the "Prison Penalty Bill for Nurserymen," attention to which has been called in THE AMERICAN FLORIST, says: "The proposed bill would rob the firm which has devoted a lifetime to the business of the benefit of its years of labor and give the advantage to persons who have devoted little time to the industry. I hope the bill will not pass."

Monument to Apple Tree.

When the Ohio State Horticultural Society holds its annual summer meeting at Proctorville, Lawrence county, July 23, there will be a monument dedicated to the first Rome Beauty apple. The first tree of this variety was planted in an orchard near that city 102 years ago.

Peony Bulletin.

We are in receipt of Bulletin No. 8 of the American Peony Society, containing, among other features, "How to Make the Most Money Out of an Acre of Peonies," by Wm. A. Peterson, Chicago, and "How to Hybridize Peonies," by A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y., both important contributions to the literature of the peony.

Grape Rot Prevented by Spraying.

In many places throughout Ohio, grapes are about the only fruit that was left by the frost and now the grapes are beginning to rot, according to the news letter of the agricultural college extension service dated July 18, which says that grape rot may be controlled by spraying two or three times with Bordeaux mixture at intervals of 10 days. Small amounts of the mixture may be made as follows: Dissolve one ounce of copper sulphate, commonly known as blue stone or blue vitriol, in one-half gallon of water; dissolve one and one-half ounces of hydrated lime in another one-half gallon of water; then pour the two solutions together and spray at once.

Fruit Crop Reports.

The condition of the commercial apple crop in the United States as shown by reports to the bureau of crop estimates, July 9, indicates a yield of 24,454,000 barrels as compared with 24,584,000 in 1918. New York promises less than one-third of last year's production, the middle west shows an increase, New England has good prospects and middle Atlantic states have on a whole about 20 per cent below 1918. The total commercial pear production of the country is placed at 7,691,000 bushels, a slight increase over last year. A heavy crop in California, and the west generally, contrasts with the poor showing made by New York, Michigan, Illinois, New Jersey and Delaware. In peaches the July report indicates a total crop of 30,082,000 bushels, an increase of 45 per cent over the light crop a year ago.

The Late Theodore E Ilgenfritz.

Theodore E. Ilgenfritz for many years manager of the I. E. Ilgenfritz & Sons Co., Monroe, Mich., died suddenly at his home in that city, June 25, following an illness of only 24 hours of heart disease.

The deceased was 63 years of age. After a course in the Monroe public schools and at Albian college, he took an active interest in the affairs of the nursery company which was founded by his father a number of years previous. He was well known in the trade and was one of the leading citizens in the community in which he lived and the news of his passing was received with sincere sorrow by a host of friends in all walks of life. He is survived by a widow, one son and a daughter, and several brothers and sisters, among the former being Charles A., Wilbert F., Frank L., and Thomas I., of Monroe, and Edgar C. Ilgenfritz, of Detroit.

Injury of Fruit Trees in Winter.

The severe winter of 1917-1918 caused irreparable injury to thousands of fruit trees in Indiana, according to Circular No. 87 of the agricultural experiment station, Purdue University, Lafayette. The heaviest toll was taken of the peaches, the damage as a whole cutting the bearing acreage at least 60 per cent. In the case of the apple, the young trees from three to 14 years suffered the greatest injury. The most severe damage in both the peach and apple originated in the trunk and main branches. This was undoubtedly due to the degree of maturity as these portions of the tree would be the last to ripen. The extent of the injury was far greater in the peach than in the apple, the sapwood being invariably killed. In the apple, the frost cankers were particularly noticeable in the crotches of the main limbs and on the trunk on the southwest side of the tree. A line of demarkation soon appeared between the dead and living tissues and the trouble assumed much the same appearance as fire blight cankers, with brown sunken areas of dead bark. Indeed, there has been much confusion between the two. In late summer and fall, the dead bark began to crack and slough off from the tree and rot fungi were often present. A sparse or thin foliage on certain limbs or over the entire tree has been an indication of winter injury. This condition has occasionally been manifested without killing of the bark and in such cases the sapwood has been injured.

The cleaning out of the wound should be followed by painting the exposed wood. A white lead paint, somewhat thicker than would be used in ordinary outdoor work will answer the purpose. To each quart of paint add one ounce of finely pulverized mercuric bichloride, (corrosive sublimate) and stir thoroughly. This will increase the fungicidal value of the paint and retard the growth of wood-decaying organisms. Powdered corrosive sublimate in bulk may be purchased through any druggist. It is very poisonous if taken internally and must be handled accordingly. It is realized that the painting of wounds is not universally advocataed because of retarded healing, but under Indiana conditions where heart rot, blister canker and other diseases appear, it is felt that the painting of large wounds is advisable.

In addition to canker treatment, winter-injured trees should receive the best of care and be given every encouragment for vigorous growth. The usual winter spray should be applied. Pruning will not generally be necessary, for in treating a winter-injured tree, one and sometimes several dead limbs have to be removed and a further reduction of the leaf surface would not be desirable. However, where a thin top and small leaves with absence of bark injury indicates that the trouble is largely in the sapwood, removal of some branches may not be out of place. A good mulch of barnyard manure, at least 200 pounds for a 10-year-old tree, will assist in providing and saving moisture which will be a wonderful help to the tree. Apply not closer than two feet to the trunk and well out under the spread of branches. If manure is not available, straw or shredded corn fodder is recommended. Where cultivation has been practiced it may well be continued, but where the trees are in sod and it is impossible to apply a manure mulch, the application of two to five pounds of nitrate of soda scattered broadcast beneath the tree is suggested for the poorer soils.

BULK OF SUPPLY OUTDOOR GROWN.

Roses and a few carnations are about the only indoor cut flowers that arrive daily. The balance of stock shown is outdoor grown. This consists of everything from gladioli, sweet peas, sweet williams, gypsophilas, and in fact all other standard or commercial flowers. The others we all know as really nothing but "weeds," but some of these are rather pretty, and make up fine for baskets and bouquets and help fill in for funeral work. They usually sell for 50 cents to $1.00 per bunch of 25 sprays, which nets the grower a fair return for his labor. While roses are again arriving in good supply, the quality is of a summer basis. In carnations, the few that do arrive, are rather small and off color. Sweet peas are plentiful, but sell well. Water lilies are good stock and clean up daily. Gladioli are quite plentiful, Francis King, Hadley, and America being the principal varieties. A strike of telephone operators, July 12, is interfering with business and last Monday a one-day "car strike" also knocked the local business. New fancy fern and asparagus and adiantum are in good supply.

FERNS

Now Ready For Immediate Shipping.

8 inch BOSTONS.....$1.00 9 inch BOSTONS.....$2.00

Our stock of 6 inch and 7 inch Bostons will be ready in about a month.

PALMS

Owing to the new law prohibiting the importation of rooted plants, Palm stock will be scarce in the near future. If any one was to tell you that the country was going dry 10 years ago you would not have believed them. It has gone dry but we didn't predict it. We do predict the shortage of Palms at the present time Buy our strong, sturdy stock and avoid the shortage.

GEORGE WITTBOLD CO.

L. D. Phone: Graceland 1112. 745 Buckingham Place, CHICAGO

A good attendance was had at the July florists' club meeting. A lunch furnished by Carl Hagenburger, of West Mentor, O., was enjoyed by all. The picnic arrangements were concluded. This will take place July 23 at Willoughbeach park. Games and sports of all kinds are on the programme. A baseball game between the wholesalers and retailers promises to be the big "event". Come and bring the children.

The firm of Knoble Bros. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000, the officers of the company being as follows: H. P. Knoble, president and treasurer; Frank Ritzenthaler, vice-president; Ida M. Knoble, secretary.

Mrs. Eichoff's store, 6826 Woodland avenue, was entered by burglars July 11, and everything turned upside down by the thieves. Nothing of known value has been missed so far.

The florists have been hard hit by the "jury wheel" the past few months. Among those who have served on the jury are P. C. Hahn, W. A. Calhoon. Harry Dow and G. G. Stehn.

H. T. Miller and family, Alliance, O., visited this city July 8. They motored here from Lake Brady, where they are spending a few weeks, "camping out."

The sympathy of the trade is felt for George, Herb and Guy Bate, whose father, Richard Bate, died July 9 at the age of 70 years. C. F. B.

BALTIMORE, MD.—John Simon, 1639 Eastern avenue, has opened a branch store at 1019 South Kenwood avenue.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Alternantheras.

The propagating bed will not be full at this season, and it is one of the best times to procure a stock of that splendid carpet bedding plant, the Alternanthera paronychioides major. This plant simply refuses to grow during the winter, and it is almost impossible to procure cuttings until late, with the result that the plants are necessarily small. Any amount of cuttings can be procured now and they can be easily rooted either in flats of soil or in the propagating bed. When the cuttings are inserted give them a good watering and keep them shady for two or three weeks, and they will all root. They can then be planted in flats about one inch apart and placed in a frame outside or in the greenhouse. They can be wintered in a warm dry house on a shelf near the glass, and potted in April, and will make fine plants. The other varieties are much more vigorous and will thrive in a lower temperature. A few old plants can be lifted and propagated in the spring in the usual manner.

Mignonette.

The plants of mignonette from seed sown in July will have to be placed in their winter quarters in the bench in September. If extra large and long spikes, that are always so much admired, are wanted, the soil will have to be very rich. To ordinary compost (that is, two-thirds loam and one-third manure) add about as much manure again, making the soil about half and half. The plants should be set about 12 inches apart. Water only around the plant until the roots begin to spread in the soil. Keep the soil free from weeds, well scratched over and loose, that it may not become sour. The tops should be pinched off until six or eight branches have been formed. The cabbage worm will soon make its appearance unless this has been guarded against, and if a leaf is found eaten hunt for them at once. When they first make their appearance they are only about a quarter of an inch long. They are green, just the color of the foliage, but have a velvety appearance, and are generally found on the midrib of the leaf or on the stem. Hand picking is the only remedy, and it takes sharp eyes to find them, but they must be gotten rid of or they will soon ruin the plants.

Heaths.

During the hot weather, the ericas will demand considerable attention. The plants should be plunged in the coolest location possible, yet where they will get the full sunlight. The pots are full of the very fine roots and if these once get dry the tender roots will burn. There is no plant the florist grows that demands closer watching and more careful watering than the heaths. They are so hard wooded that they do not show neglect as quickly as the softer wooded plants, but if they get once fully dried it means absolute disaster, with no flowers the succeeding year. The grower well posted in the culture of these plants can tell at a glance when they should be watered and never neglects them. If the plants are growing unshapely they should be pinched back, so that the form will be kept. The plants that are in small pots will need repotting in September; a fine loam with but little fibre and with no manure is to be preferred for these plants, for their fine roots do not like a coarse soil, and manure of all kinds should be omitted from the soil in which they are grown.

Geranium Propagating.

It is none too early to begin the propagation of geraniums, especially if it is doubtful about there being stock enough. Any plants that have become established and made a growth that will furnish a cutting will not be injured by the taking of the growing end; in fact, they will be benefitted, for they will break more shoots for the September propagation. Many growers in making the fall propagation, after trimming the cuttings, insert them in 2½-inch pots in soil, placing the pots on shelves near the glass. This is a very economical way of handling the cuttings after cool weather has set in, but for summer propagation the bench of sand is to be preferred. In making the cuttings, trim off all the foliage except the small leaves at the tip. Be sure that the sand is pounded down hard, so that it will retain all the water possible. In inserting the cuttings use a small round stick as a dibble, making a hole just large enough in which to place the cutting. This will disturb the bed of sand much less than drawing a knife or other tool through it. After the cutting is placed in the sand, press the sand firmly and then water heavily, so that the sand will settle firmly around the cutting. The cuttings should then be shaded from the sun either by papers or by stretching cheese cloth over them. This will prevent wilting and evaporation. No further watering will be necessary until the plants begin to root. One of the greatest mistakes made by growers in the summer and fall propagation of geraniums is the continual watering which will invariably cause damping off and rot. Never mind if the surface of the sand becomes dry, if it has been properly packed there will be moisture enough below to cause them to root. If the cuttings wilt a slight syringing or placing wet papers over them will revive them. A good strike can invariably be made by following this method.

Violets.

It will soon be September and time to house the plants of the double varieties of violets that are grown in the field, the more successful growers being of the opinion that the plants should be under glass before the season of heavy dews. In preparing the beds have plenty of old leaves; it is not necessary that they be rotted; in fact, leaves gathered last fall are to be preferred, for they will generate a little heat in the soil and the violet plants seem to grow and push their roots into half-rotted leaves better than in leaf mold that is finely decomposed. A layer of three inches of leaves in the bottom of the bed will prove of great advantage in violet culture. Whatever manure is used should be thoroughly rotted. The violet will not root into fresh manure at all. An old gardener, who was very successful in violet culture, once told us how he prepared his frames. They were made in a similar manner to hotbeds, only instead of manure a foot of leaves was placed at the bottom and eight or ten inches of soil placed on them. The leaves will furnish a mild heat nearly all winter, and greatly assist in keeping the frames warm. We tried that method the following fall and, thinking that the leaves would not furnish nutriment enough, we incorporated a good quantity of half-rotted manure in the soil, the manure still being more or less lumpy. The violets grew finely and produced an excellent crop of large flowers. In the spring when we lifted the plants we found the roots had all gone into the leaves, there being no feeding roots in the soil, and in making their way through the loam had avoided all the manure, this still being in the lumps as when placed in the soil. In lifting the plants avoid allowing the roots to become dry; lift with a good clump of soil and do not keep the plants too long in the air, only lifting what can be handled expeditiously. Plant firmly, but avoid walking on the beds; water as soon as planted and water well, so that the soil will be firmed around the plants. Shade for a few days until growth starts, and then give all the air and light possible.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Gladioli as Cut Flowers.

The most important, showy and decorative of all the summer flowers is the gladioli, their strong, erect beautifully formed flowers, ranging in color from purest white through all the shades to darkest red, and from violet tinges of pink to distinct blues and purple. Yellows and orange shades are also prominent, so that the gladiolus can be truly classed as having all the colors of the rainbow.

Bridal Bouquet of White Gladioli.
By Max Schling, New York.

The past few years have seen wonderful strides in new and beautiful varieties. It is even now possible to obtain very good flowers from seed the first year. America and Mrs. Francis King were the forerunners of the forcing varieties, all of which do equally well out of doors. The standard market varieties, in addition to the above are, Niagara, Panama, Schwaben, Peace, Princeps, Europa, Mrs. Frank Pendleton, Halley, King Edward, Myrtle, Primulinus hybrids, Sunbeam, Prince of Wales, Giant White, Augusta and Brenchleyensis.

The introductions of the past five years have been wonderfully fine, notable improvements being made in the ruffled, flowered varieties, which are very distinct and exceptional in form and coloring. Growers will find it greatly to their advantage to specialize with these fine named varieties. While the first cost of the bulbs is several times more than the ordinary sorts, they are no more expensive to grow, the flowers bring a much better price, while the stock will increase rapidly and the bulbs are always in demand.

Cutting and packing are two very important matters. For shipping to market, they should be cut when the first or second flowers open. Some prefer to cut when the first bud shows color, but this is a little too soon for the choice sorts. They should be soaked over night in water, or at least for a few hours in a cool place to give them time to fill up with moisture.

Growers who sell their stock at retail will do well to allow as many as four flowers to open before cutting. The balance of the buds are then so far advanced that they will open the entire length of the spike. These must be carefully handled in packing, so as not to bruise the open flowers.

Being at their best in the hot summer months, when there is but little of value in cut flowers, save the asters, they are especially valuable to the decorator, being adapted in their form and great variety of color for all kinds of floral work.

For display, when dashing color effects are desired with plants or oak foliage, as a background, nothing is so effective as tall flower vases filled with long well flowered spikes of these brilliant flowers. They can be used in hanging or vase handle baskets, suspended in doorways, arches or along balconies. Wall pockets can be filled and placed in the center of blank wall spaces with stunning effects. Slender tin tubes, painted green, 12 inches long by one and one-half to two inches in width, with a wire hook at the top, will hold several spikes. These can be concealed in oak foliage over arches or doorways, where various colors are needed to relieve the green.

In house decorations, to give variety and better artistic effects, the flowers for each room should be of a color that will blend with the furnishings, all pink, all red, all yellow, or in some cases, two colors combined. Vases and vase baskets, filled with sprays of varying lengths, can be placed on window ledges, tops of cases, sideboards or other vantage place. Low plateaus, or well filled vases of choice well flowered spikes make suitable center pieces for the dining or buffet table. Those for the bridal party at a wedding should be white or blush. For all such decorative work, where the flowers are to be at their best for a short time, the spikes should be on hand for one day at least, placed loosely in jars to allow room to open as many flowers as possible. Sets of wedding bouquets, white for the bride, with shower effect made of selected single flowers, which resemble orchids, and spray arm bunches for the maids, of pink or yellow or other solid color, to match their costumes, will, if artistically arranged, be unanimously declared too lovely for anything. Boutonnieres and corsage bouquets, quite the equal of the winter favorites, are made of selected flowers of the choice varieties.

Seashore, and in fact all hotels, which cater to summer travelers or tourists, use gladioli in quantities for the decoration of their parlors and dining tables. Many of the farms or nurseries, where the bulbs are grown by the acre, ship large quantities daily at contract prices, during their season of bloom.

The majority of important orders for this season of the year is for funerals. The gladioli seem to be especially fitted for the making of all kinds of emblems. They are admirable for sprays; the sword-like leaves can be removed and several stemmed together for use as a background. Long and short flower spikes can be stemmed together, which will reduce the size of the handle and not make the bunch so clumsy. The cross almost the full length of the casket is a most effective design. Very handsome casket sprays or covers can be made of the white or lighter shades, by tying two long sprays together end to end at the handles, and then filling in the center with gladioli stemmed on sticks or other flowers that will combine well, such as water lilies, roses, orchids, asters, etc. After such a piece is almost finished, sprays can be added or stuck in here and there that will remain quite secure without any further fastening.

Wreaths can be made in endless variety; long spikes can be cut in two, the tips stemmed, and the lower portion sharpened and stuck in. The compact crescent, or full round wreath, is made of florets stemmed singly and set in one at a time. This is a little tedious, but shows character, and is good for variety.

Magnolia, oak or galax leaves can be beautifully decorated with sprays of gladioli. It takes but a few minutes to arrange a well made wreath on the above ground work material with well opened sprays, fancy fern leaves and ribbon.

A border for the pillow, or the whole design may be very successfully made entirely of gladioli by using separate flowers stemmed for the center.

For all standing designs, fine long spikes should be selected for use in the foot or stand where they make a conspicuous display. For the lining of a grave they are most effective and quickly arranged, being pinned to the earth on the sides with wire staples. A space a foot wide all around the top of the opening should be covered to make a good finish. The soil, if covered with hemlock or other green, can also be relieved with varicolored spikes of these flowers.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

While there is but little business at this season, the most should be made of every opportunity. While it is not necessary to carry much stock in cut flowers, there should always be a fair assortment of gladioli, asters, and other outside blossoms, as well as a few jars of the best summer roses.

The show window should be screened with curtains of mosquito bar or net to keep out the flies, as nothing looks more careless than a fly-spotted window. Since the advent of the swatter, it is comparatively easy to kill the few who somehow always manage to get in.

There is an opportunity now to dispose of some of the shallow flower bowls. These receptacles, nicely arranged with gladioli and other garden flowers, in the various styles of flower block holders, will, backed up with pots of ferns, make a nice window display, from which sales are likely to result.

Always keep the outside front of the store as attractive as possible. If the shop is on a corner, there is opportunity for a good display of pot evergreens. Some florists make a specialty of this class of stock, and have worked up quite a remunerative trade, as beds of ornamental evergreens in front of porches or centers of grass plots are now common on the small lawns of the medium sized houses of the suburbs. All kinds of pot plants that make a good showing on porches or front steps are still good stock to feature in these pavement displays.

GLADIOLI AS CUT FLOWERS.

Gladiolus America with Crested Ferns.

At this season particularly, the flower shop, on account of the showy and decorative nature of the stock, should be made the most attractive store in the block. It is good advertising for this period, as well as later, as the passerby stops to look and is impressed that this is an enterprising establishment, where at any time in the near future, he may be led to make a purchase when he finds it necessary to "Say it With Flowers."

Now is a good time to go thoroughly over the books that are behind. There are many who find this a very tedious job It would not be so, if they would give it a half hour each day, or never let it go longer than a week. Hundreds of dollars are lost in a year through careless bookkeeping, forgetting to make note of, or by making charges on slips of paper, and neglecting to enter them up. Goods sold to one customer should be charged immediately before another is acted on. Accounts are allowed to grow old before being presented, are then ofttimes disputed, and something must be taken off. Every $5 lost in this way is equivalent to $50 worth of new accounts, as very few firms can show a 10 per cent net profit on the year's business. All the old accounts that have any possibility of collection should be dug up and listed, and worked over again by letters and personal appeal, as long as there is any hope. The very best and only safe method is never to let them get old. This is an era of cash payments; all government and nearly all public utilities, require cash—30 days is now the limit for credits in almost all lines. Dealers in many perishable articles require spot cash or a settlement at least once a week. There is nothing more profitable at this time than to get in these old accounts, as every dollar collected is equivalent to $10 of new business.

If the decorative stock and fixtures, such as pedestals, pot covers, screens, floor vases and other such accessories, have not been gone over, repaired and painted, it should be attended to at once. The new coating will then have sufficient time to get good and hard before it comes into use.

The errand boys should be taught how to moss designs; it is poor business to say "I would rather do it myself." They can do it just as well as you, if you take the pains to teach them. Most boys are willing and anxious to learn, and with a little encouragement, will take pride in the work. Then much of their spare time can be turned to acount in keeping the stock of mossed wreaths and other designs up to the required number.

With samples of the various materials that are used for the make up of the Christmas wreaths, such as red and green chenille, cones of all kinds, plain silvered, gilded or whitened ruscus, artificial poinsettias, etc., something new in arrangement or design may be evolved and worked up that will be in great demand at the holidays. The manufacture of a stock of Christmas wreaths and other like goods during these summer months, shows how to prove the maxim that "Time is money," and the store that does not make or turn its labor equipment over in this way, is losing or failing to make use of one of its greatest assets.

Why every man who runs a flower shop, whether he does a $500 or $500,000 business a year, is not back of the publicity movement of the S. A. F., supporting it with all his might, both in money and energy, is hard for those who see the light, to understood. There are undisputable evidences that the advertising is pulling, and this when it is considered that only about 10 per cent of the trade have interested themselves in it, is remarkable. It is the $5, $10 and $20 subscriptions of the great number of the rank and file, together with their tying up to it, in their keeping their stores up to efficiency, using the literature and signs of the committees, which will build up the foundation of an advertising campagn in which all will be greatly benefited. Send in your check today.

Publicity Honor Roll.

The publicity committees of the Society of American Florists believe in practising what they preach, which is certainly evidenced by the publishing in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of June 28, pages 1143-1148, the honor roll, containing the names of all who have contributed to the advertising fund up to that time.

It is a grand array of names which includes nearly all of the leaders in the trade in almost every state in the Union. This approval by the progressive florists of the entire country, as shown in their liberal contributions, should wake up others, large and small, who have deferred the matter, to the importance of immediately coming forward with their share of the money necessary to influence and make a market for the greatly increased production of flowers that will surely be put on the market the coming season.

Invest, and you will become interested, then success is sure to follow. Send your check today to Secretary John Young, 1170 Broadway, New York. The larger the amount, the greater the return.

THE S. A. F.

National Publicity for Flowers.

This week, we are recording a list of contributions to the publicity fund approximating something over $1,200. This is a decided improvement over the lists of the past several weeks, but only about half of what an average list should be for every week in the year if we are to reach our goal of $100,000. As our fund stands now, we are many thousands of dollars short of half the amount aimed for, and are more than half way through the year. Next month our publicity committees will make their reports at the society's convention in Detroit, and unless contributions become more active in the intervening weeks, they will not be able to report the collection of at least half of the amount of the fund.

At the convention, the committees will meet jointly to discuss plans to continue the publicity work during the fall and winter season, the summer season having already been provided for. What amount of money are we going to place at their disposal for immediate use? It must be remembered that the production of flowers throughout next season promises to be abnormally large, consequently calling for greater effort to improve the demand for them, if we are to avoid gluts and obtain remunerative prices.

Publicity, and lots of it, is needed more than ever. To get it, we must have money. We are no longer buying "a pig in a poke." We know that we get a magnificent return for the money we spend, and the more we spend, the greater the return.

We are addressing particularly those florists who have not yet sent in subscriptions. It is beyond our conception that they do not intend to contribute, but why not send them in now, thus not only relieving the committees of uncertainty, but permitting them to make their publicity plans in the best interests of all? The plans now maturing may call for the immediate appropriation of as much as $20,000. If the committees do not find such an amount available, how are they going to finance the bills? Your good intentions will not help them any, unless you cash them in, by remitting to the secretary, without delay, your cheque for the amount you have decided to give. Keep the ball a-rolling. Do not for one moment think that because you have seen a big list of subscribers, to the amount of several thousand dollars, that amount is waiting to be expended. Our committees put the money to work as fast as it piles up. They have no thought of using the funds to produce an income which shall supply the publicity; they spend the fund itself, every penny of it. So when you hesitate you delay the game. What is $100,000 among 20,000 florists? A thousand fruit growers recently raised that amount in a few weeks.

Just take these facts to heart:

The campaign is a good thing for you and everybody else in the trade. It is doing what it was expected to do, increasing the demand for flowers. It is endorsed by all the live-wire florists of the country. It is awaiting your support, through your contribution.

GLADIOLI AS CUT FLOWERS.

White Gladioli and Palm Leaves.

San Francisco.

WEEK OF FUNERALS AND WEDDINGS.

Business has been rather quiet all week, funeral work and weddings being the only outlet for the stock coming in. New crop roses are arriving in large quantities now. The stems are short, but otherwise the quality is good. Quite a few short stemmed Mrs. Russell are coming along and sell well. Ophelia is plentiful. Columbia can be had in limited quantities. Mrs. Aaron Ward is very plentiful also. This variety seems to be popular at all seasons for corsage and basket work, owing to its attractive coloring. Gladioli are now at their best. The favorites are Panama, America and Mrs. Francis King. The market cleans up well on this stock every morning. Carnations are a drug on the market, and it has to be extra fine stock to get a buyer at all. The hucksters are getting rid of most of the supply on the street corners. Dahlias are also feeling the effect of oversupply, and it is only the best stock that reaches the stores. Prices for these flowers are very low. Sweet peas are maintaining good figures right along, due to the fact that Spencers are not over plentiful. The cool weather seems to have been of much benefit to them, as some fine stock is now being handled. Cattleyas are still hard to obtain and prices remain high. There are very few gardenias in the market. Zinnias are now coming in freely, and it must be said that the quality is very satisfactory. They bring good figures. Delphiniums are plentiful and cheap. The same is true of gaillardias and all other outdoor perennials. Pink and blue cut hydrangeas are being largely used by the different stores. Good pot plants are in demand, especially Bostons. There seems to be an adequate supply of kentias and other palms.

NOTES.

The trial grounds of the California Dahlia Society, at San Rafael, is now the mecca of all dahlia enthusiasts. The plants have all made splendid growth this season, owing to favorable weather conditions, and the guiding hand of President Burns. Here one may see everything that is good in this flower. Each novelty is carefully tested here the first season to see if it will live up to the introducer's description. When found not equal or inferior to existing varieties, they are discarded. The society expects its coming fall show to be ahead of anything previously attempted.

The monthly meeting of the California Floral Society was held at Red Men's hall, July 11. The session was largely attended to hear a lecture on "Orchids," delivered by Mrs. John Newton Merrick. The speaker has made a study of these plants for years, and her talk was both instructive and entertaining. This society is in a healthy financial condition, and its meetings are always well attended. A special effort is to be made shortly to increase the membership.

Frank R. Mills, the Palo Alto florist, is busily engaged at present in replanting his carnation house. His stock is in excellent shape and promises well for the coming season. He has nearly all of this year's novelties and intends giving them all a fair trial. He has had a large cut of Spencers all season. His nursery stock is also in fine shape. He expects a heavy trade in fruit trees this season and has already contracted for a large supply.

Victor Ferrari is busy these days at Ferrari Bros. greenhouses. Since the death of his uncle, Peter Ferrari, the management of this large business is now in his hands. His sister, Miss Anita Ferrari, is in charge of all the office work. Much attention is now being given to the orchid range, all of which appears to be in splendid condition. The rose houses are coming along nicely and promise well for the coming season.

Schwerin Bros. are sending in a heavy cut of adiantum to this market every day. The quality is very long stemmed and is especially well grown. They report a steady demand from out of town customers showing that trade is fairly good in all sections of the state. From the present outlook, they will have a large supply throughout the winter months.

C. H. Perkins, the prominent New York nurseryman, has purchased a large ranch at San Luis Obispo. It is regarded as one of the valuable ranch properties in the district. It is the intention of Mr. Perkins to plant this land to walnuts and almonds, as this locality is particularly adapted to the growing of these nut trees on a commercial scale.

The Tennyson Nurseries, of Fruitvale, have a very choice collection of chrysanthemums coming along for fall work. Nearly all the best novelties are grown here. This place will no doubt be heard from at the shows this fall. Field grown roses is another specialty with them, the greater part of which is used in landscape work.

Percy Ellings, superintendent of the Lynch Nursery Company at Menlo Park, has the large stock of chrysanthemums in the best possible condition for the coming fall season. They are growing a very large number of Louisa Pockett this year, as they consider it one of the best whites for shipping.

The Santa Rosa Improvement Society announces that it will hold its annual chrysanthemum show again this fall. Excellent stock is always displayed here and the leading chrysanthemum growers from this section show there every year.

Albert O. Stein says trade is keeping up nicely for the summer months. His force has been almost steadily engaged on wedding decorations during the week. He is showing some elegant specimens of nephroleopis, which enhance the beauty of his spacious store very much.

Manager J. A. Axell, of the E. W. McLellan Co., is receiving a large cut of roses from the firm's greenhouses. He says he finds no difficulty in disposing of the stock. This firm is also shipping gladioli in large quantities and reports a steady trade for this time of the year.

The Charles C. Navlet Company has been displaying a large assortment of named dahlias at their Market street store the past week

Charles W. Ward, of the Cottage Garden Nurseries, Eureka, is spending a few weeks here visiting the trade.

FAIRLY GOOD DEMAND FOR ALL STOCK.

Receipts of stock in this market are somewhat limited, with the result that all offerings meet with a fairly good sale. The demand is quite steady, but is not very brisk. Roses are received in fair quantities. Asters, while at present not plentiful, are becoming more of a factor from day to day and will be in good supply before long. Gladioli are proving good property and water lilies are now seen. Some Easter lilies and a fair cut of rubrums are available. Snapdragons help out well at times. New green galax and leucothoe are now on the market. The stock is excellent and it moves quite well.

NOTES.

C. J. Ohmer and wife, and son James, of West Palm Beach, Fla., after spending a fortnight at Lakeside, O., are now on their way to Detroit, Mackinac and finally Conway, Mich., where they will spend a month.

Joseph Grimes has returned from service, having been in France with the American forces.

C. E. Critchell received his new Packard touring car this week.

Visitors: Wm. Nolan, Huntington, West Va.; Ira Clark and wife, Greensburg, Ind.; Joseph Hill, Richmond, Ind., and S. M. Rosenfeld, New York.

TRADE UNUSUALLY GOOD FOR SUMMER.

Flower sales have been holding up exceptionally well for the season, weddings proving quite numerous, the call for funeral work continues brisk, and as a result, the supply is kept well cleaned up. Outdoor sweet peas are poor, but bring $1 per 100, while rubrum lilies command from $8 to $10. Rose prices are very reasonable. Poor carnations find buyers, at $3 per 100.

NOTES.

The florists' association held its first outing July 17 at Lynnfield. Covers were set for 94 at the dinner, which was followed by an excellent programme of sports. The wholesalers won the ball game, and Henry Penn carried off the honors in the fat men's race. Samuel Truckman was the speedy one in bringing the potato over the line.

C. E. Wingate, one of the veteran florists and market gardeners of Lawrence, died July 17 at the age of 71 years. A widow and six children survive.

Charles Robinson and family are enjoying a month's vacation at Cape Cod. S. K. G.

Louisville, Ky.

Nearly all of the local trade closed for the day, July 19, and enjoyed the annual outing at Blackstone Mills on Silver Creek, near New Albany, the public being duly notified that the flower shops would be closed on that day. An excellent programme had been arranged including good fishing, boating and bathing. The committee in charge of arrangements was composed of Herman Kleinstarink, chairman; L. Pleiss, George Nanz, Louis Kirch and David Walker.

August R. Baumer, president of the Kentucky Society of Florists, was remembered by the organization with a fine box of candy and a message of good will and congratulations.

Emil Walther, Lewis G. Pleiss, Leo Zoeller and A. F. Aebersold are cutting fine gladioli, which have an excellent sale in this market.

Bryant & Brady, who were in the army during the war, have received their discharges and have resumed business as wholesalers.

Herbert Raynor, with the F. Walker Co., has applied for a patent for a locking device for automobiles.

Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, is spending his vacation fishing in northern Wisconsin.

Kingsley Walker and family have returned from an auto trip to Ohio points.

Adam Heitz is cutting fine Kaiserin roses. H. G. W.

Providence, R. I.

HEAVY SUPPLY WITH PRICES LOW.

Typical midsummer dullness prevails. The supply of stock is plentiful and the growers are cutting large numbers of roses, which have been moving at greatly reduced prices. The supply of long stemmed blooms is greater than the demand. The market is never without carnations, although what few are offered lack quality and they received little attention from flower buyers. Gladioli are much more abundant than a week ago and the prices have dropped to a more popular level. Orchids have been a short item but on the other hand there has been little demand. The damp weather of the past few days has put sweet peas out of the running for the present and with no indoor stock available here, the shortage is felt.

NOTES.

Smith, the Florist, has sold his establishment on Washington street, to Joseph Black. It is understood that Bert West will remain with the business.

Eugene Seymour, of Warren, has several thousand ferns in his benches, representing several varieties and the stock is showing good form.

Several of the stores are making alterations and improving their spare time generally during the lull in business. H. A. T.

MADISON, WIS.—Louis Russos, florist at 504 East Wilson street, has purchased a confectionery store at 9 East Main street, and will conduct both establishments.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., July 9, President Joseph Adler in the chair. Floyd Browers, East Norwich, and William Waraksa, Glen Cove, were elected to membership. There was a fine display of sweet peas on the exhibition tables, with keen competition in all classes. James McDonald, William McCloud and Sam. J. Trepess were appointed judges and the awards were as follows: Twenty-five sprays white, 25 sprays pink, and 25 sprays any other color, won by William Noonan, who also was given the F. A. Bartlett special prize for the best six vases of sweet peas, William Milstead taking second honors. Upon request, Mr. Noonan gave a short talk on cultural methods which proved very interesting. Mrs. Arthur Gibb generously donated a special prize for preserved fruits and vegetables to be competed for by wives of members only at the fall show to be held October 30-31. Several other donations for this show were also announced. Edward Harris was elected secretary to fill the unexpired term of Ernest Westlake, resigned. It was decided to hold the annual outing at Appleby's Grove, August 6, or the day following in case of inclement weather. The dahlia show of the society will be held at the Matenecock neighborhood house, October 2-3. The competition for the next meeting, August 13, will be for six tomatoes, 12 mixed asters and 12 gladioli.

OBITUARY.

The Late Peter Ferrari.

It has been a long time since the trade of San Francisco, Calif., and vicinity received such a shock as was the case when the death of Peter Ferrari, one of the most prominent florists in the west, notice of which appeared in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of July 5, page 1189, was announced, July 1. He suffered from an attack of influenza last winter and never fully recovered from the effects of that disease. He spent several weeks at Byron Hot Springs a few weeks ago in company with Frank Pelicano and came back feeling much improved in health. He was taken ill shortly after his return and died in St. Mary's hospital. Mr. Ferrari was born in Italy 53 years ago and came to this country with his father and brothers when very young. His father engaged in the wholesale growing of cut flowers, and it was from him that he received the training that proved so valuable to him in later years. Upon the death of the father, the sons took up the reins of business, and it was Peter Ferrari's progressive mind and personality that developed the establishment, until it attained its present large proportions. The death of his brother, Emil, last winter was a severe blow to him, as the latter had been for years in charge of the growing end. The deceased had arrived at the stage where his nephew, Victor Ferrari, was his able assistant, and who relieved him of much responsibility in the management of the business. He had just added the well known orchid collection of Dr. Parker, of Santa Cruz, to his already immense stock, and in which he took the keenest delight. He was a prominent member of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, and many of those who attended the convention of the Society of American Florists during the exposition at San Francisco will remember his untiring efforts to make it a success. He was an enthusiastic motorist and had just completed a beautiful garage to hold his cars.

Mr. Ferrari never married. He is survived by two brothers, Louis and Joseph, and one sister, Mrs. Adaline Matson. The funeral was held at the Mission Church of Corpus Christi and interment at Holy Cross cemetery. The pallbearers were all prominent members of the trade: Frank Pelicano, Victor Podesta, M. Brown, P. Vincent Matraia, F. Benedetti, and Robert Newcomb, of Chicago. The floral tributes from the trade were particularly beautiful. The active management of the firm will now be in the hands of Victor Ferrari, his nephew. It will continue under the name of Ferrari Bros. Victor is very popular with the trade and will make an able successor to his uncle. Mr. Ferrari will always be remembered for his kindly character and sterling qualities, and his unceasing efforts for the betterment of the trade.

JAMES T. LYNCH.

George Anderson.

George Anderson, one of the prominent growers of Philadelphia, Pa., died July 18, age 70 years, as the result of a second stroke of paralysis, a previous attack, which rendered him helpless, occurring over two years ago.

Mr. Anderson was a native of Scotland, emigrating to this country about 1872. His first position was with Robert Buist, where he was foreman in the greenhouses. Several years later, he went into business with his brotner, William, building several small houses at 52nd and Woodland avenue, where they grew bedding and flowering pot plants. Buying his brother's interest he built more houses and made a specialty of Easter plants and forcing roses. With hard work and his natural business ability, he forged to the front and became a leading grower of his specialties. He was an active member of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, and often made a place on its championship bowling and gunning teams. He leaves a widow and eight married daughters. One Georgeana, named after himself, died only six weeks ago. The funeral, at which there was a profusion of flowers, was held July 23. It was largely attended by members of the trade.

Charles Meckey.

Charles Meckey, one of the old school growers of Philadelphia, Pa., passed away July 12, age 68 years. Mr. Meckey specialized in spring bedding plants, pot roses and flowering stock for Easter. By well planned succession of crops, he made a most intensive use of his greenhouse space, growing medium sized stock in quantity, which he sold at popular prices. A large range of glass at 17th and Erie avenue was crowded out, and he sold the ground for building purposes, moving to Limekiln pike 15 years ago. The city again caught up to him here, and he sold the land and houses as sites for suburban residences and retired. He was long a member of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, and much liked by all his fellows in the trade. He leaves his widow and one son.

LEAD has advanced to 5¾ cents per pound.

BALTIMORE wants the 1921 convention of the Society of American Florists.

THE first mail for Germany was dispatched from New York, July 22, connections being made at Copenhagen.

THE German potash syndicate has petitioned the government for a 100 per cent raise in the price of potash, owing to increased cost of production. The syndicate claims to have a deficit of 46,000,000 marks for the first 1919 quarter and declares it will be forced to shut down unless prices are increased.

Ladies' Society of American Florists.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT PROPOSED.

Mrs. C. H. Maynard gives notice of a proposal to amend the constitution and by-laws of the Ladies' Society of American Florists as follows:

"Article. 4, Section 4, by adding the words after president and secretary—She shall give bonds in such sum as the executive board may from time to time deem sufficient, the expense of furnishing such bond to be assumed by the society."

MRS. H. G. BERNING, Sec'y.

German Trade.

American trade with Germany may now be resumed. The military blockade has been lifted. Communication by cable and mail is permissible. It is announced the war trade board section of the state department has issued blanket licenses to resume trade, with stated exceptions, but Washington correspondents have failed to distinguish between intercourse prevented by the military acts of other countries and intercourse prohibited by the legislation of this country. Lifting of the blockade, the resumption of mail and cable communication, were military measures marking the termination of military control.

Drummers In San Francisco Fined.

San Francisco, Calif., has an ordinance that requires vendors having no fixed place of business, and who make their headquarters in hotels or other temporary places, to pay a license of $50 a day. Out-of-town dealers from all sections of the country unwittingly have had experience with this ordinance. Many have quietly left on being notified of the law. The representative of one firm refused to pay the license and, after submitting to arrest, attacked the constitutionality of the ordinance. He was tried, found guilty, sentenced to six months in the county jail and fined $500.

Indianapolis to Detroit.

According to reports received by State Vice-President Nehrling, Indiana will be well represented at the coming convention of the Society of American Florists. It is estimated about 50 from the northern part of the state alone will make the trip. Quite a number will go by automobile as the roads are reported in excellent condition.

A committee consisting of Irwin Bertermann, Adolph Baur and Oscar Carlstedt has been appointed to look after the transportation and other matters pertaining to the trip of the Indiana delegation. It has been decided to make the trip by night via the Big Four railroad, leaving Indianapolis, August 18 at 9 p. m., due in Detroit early the next morning. Information regarding rates, etc., may be had by addressing members of the committee.

Boston to Detroit.

Arrangements are being made for the transportation of the party from Boston, Mass., and vicinity, who will attend the convention of the Society of American Florists at Detroit, Mich., August 19-21. The trip will be made via Boston & Albany railroad to Buffalo, where one day will be devoted to sightseeing, thence from that city to Detroit by steamer, arriving at 8:00 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The train carrying the party will leave South station, Boston, Sunday, August 17 at 4:45 p. m.; Framingham, 5:19; Worcester, 5:55; Springfield, 7:20; Pittsfield, 9:11, and Albany at 10:40 p. m., due at Buffalo, 6:50 a. m., Monday, leaving for the convention city by boat at 6 o'clock that evening.

The fare from Boston to Buffalo is $16.11; lower berth, $2.70; boat fare, Buffalo to Detroit, $4.32; stateroom accommodating two or three people, $3.50; total, $26.63. Those wishing to go direct, may leave Boston, Monday, at 2:00 p. m., due in Detroit, 8:10 Tuesday morning. Fare, all rail, is $24.28; lower berth, $4.32.

Reservations should be made at once through E. Allen Peirce, Waltham, Mass., state vice-president for Massachusetts, East.

Detroit Hotels.

The Society of American Florist convention headquarters will be the Hotel Statler on Grand Central Park, ten minutes' ride by Woodward avenue car line from the convention hall, Arcadia Auditorium, 615 Woodward avenue. It is highly important that all intending to attend the convention, August 19-21, make reservation at the hotel as soon as possible, as two other large conventions are scheduled in Detroit during the same week. The hotel committee of the local florists' club will aid all who will make known their requirements and address same to the chairman, E. A. Fetters, 17 East Adams avenue, Detroit, Mich.

A list of the principal hotels, their room rates and distance from headquarters (Hotel Statler) is as follows:

FORDHOOK PINK AND WHITE (BURPEE'S)

Burpee's Sweet Peas

The Twenty-Two Best Winter Flowering Spencer Sweet Peas For Florists

The first Spencer Sweet Pea in existence was brought to America by W Atlee Burpee Since then the House of Burpee has introduced over two hundred distinct new varieties each an improvement on the past. And by constant hybridizing for the last ten years we have developed the new Fordhook Early Flowering strain of Spencer Sweet Peas. We can now offer you all the finest colors in the Early or Winter Flowering type of Spencers—everything offered is grown on our own Floradale Farm in California.

The House of Burpee is recognized as the American Headquarters for Sweet Peas.

3361 FORDHOOK PINK AND WHITE (BURPEE'S). This is similar to the old Blanche Ferry, having a bright, rosy-pink standard with white wings, lightly suffused rose. Pkt. 7c: oz. 60c; ¼ lb. $1.80; lb. $6.00.

3398 YARRAWA. The flowers average two and one-half inches in diameter, many are duplex or double. The color is a bright rose-pink with a clear, creamy base. Our stock of this popular Australian variety is absolutely true. Grown by us from seed procured direct from the introducer. Pkt. 7c; oz. 75c; ¼ lb. $2.25; lb. $7.50.

3375 EARLY LAVENDER KING (BURPEE'S). A first-class lavender has been much wanted in this type, therefore, we have great pleasure in offering the new Lavender King. This glorious new variety is a rich, true, deep lavender throughout. Similar in color to the summer-flowering varieties, Burpee's Orchid and R. F. Felton. The flowers are of large size, beautifully true waved form, and borne in threes and fours on stems of great length. Pkt. 7c; oz. 85c; ¼ lb. $2.50; lb. $8.50.

3399 EARLY ZEPHYR (BURPEE'S). This is a delightful shade of pale blue or lavender. It might be briefly described as a silvery-blue self. An extremely dainty and charming variety. Pkt. 7c; oz. $1.00; ¼ lb. $3.00; lb. $10.00.

3346 EARLY DAINTINESS (BURPEE'S). This has always been a favorite since it was first exhibited in 1915, when it was certificated. We have only now been able to work up a sufficient stock to offer to our friends. A strong grower, with flowers of largest size and usually produced in fours. Color pure white edged rose. Similar to Summer-flowering Dainty. Pkt. 7c; oz. 80c; ¼ lb. $2.40; lb. $8.00.

3348 EARLY DAYBREAK (BURPEE'S). The flowers are much frilled or waved, of largest size. The color is a pleasing shade of rich rose-pink on cream ground, becoming deeper toward the edge of standard and wings. The entire flower is lightly suffused with salmon. Pkt., 7c; oz., $1.00; ¼ lb., $3.00; lb., $10.00.

3351 EARLY ENCHANTRESS (BURPEE'S). It is a bright rose-pink, becoming deeper toward the edges of standard and wings, gradually softening in tone toward the center of the flower. Pkt. 7c; oz. $1.00; ¼ lb. $3.00; lb. $10.00.

3383 EARLY PINK BEAUTY (BURPEE'S). The color is soft rose-pink on white ground, richer toward the edges, gradually softening in color as it reaches the center of standard and wings. Pkt. 7c; oz. $1.00; ¼ lb. $3.00; lb. $10.00.

3344 EARLY CHERRY RIPE (BURPEE'S). A particularly bright and taking color and quite new in this section. It might be described as a glowing cherry or salmon-cerise self. Awarded Certificate of Merit at the International Spring Show, New York, March 20, 1918. Pkt. 10c; oz. $2.50; ¼ lb. $7.50; lb. $25.00.

3380 EARLY MAUVE BEAUTY (BURPEE'S). Color a pleasing shade of rosy mauve. The flowers are of immense size, often measuring two and one-half inches in diameter, yet exquisitely waved and of best Spencer form. A strong, vigorous grower and very free flowering. Charming under artificial light. Pkt. 7c; oz. 85c; ¼ lb. $2.50; lb. $8.50.

3381 EARLY ORANGE BEAUTY (BURPEE'S). Similar in color to Helen Lewis, therefore a glowing orange-scarlet with softer colored wings. Extremely free and early blooming, valuable alike for culture under glass or in the open as it withstands the sun and weather well. Pkt. 14c; oz. $3.00; ¼ lb. $9.00; lb. $30.00.

3362 FORDHOOK ROSE IMPROVED (BURPEE'S). Quite distinct from our original Fordhook Rose. The flowers are of immense size, usually borne in threes and fours on very long stiff stems. In color similar to the well-known George Herbert. A pleasing shade of rosy carmine. Pkt. 7c; oz. $1.00; ¼ lb. $3.00; lb. $10.00.

3393 EARLY SPLENDOR (BURPEE'S). A magnificent new deep rose self. The rich rose-crimson color is accentuated by the distinct white blotch at the base of standard and wings. The flowers are of great size, usually borne in fours on very long stems. Similar in color to the Summer-flowering Rosabelle. Pkt. 7c; oz. $1.00; ¼ lb. $3.00; lb. $10.00.

3374 EARLY KING (BURPEE'S). The finest early-flowering crimson. The flowers are of great size, perfect form, averaging fully two inches in diameter. Pkt. 7c; oz. 85c; ¼ lb. $2.50; lb. $8.50.

3388. EARLY ROSY MORN (BURPEE'S). Flowers grown under ordinary field culture have measured fully two inches in diameter. The flowers are usually borne in threes or fours on stiff, long stems. Color, a pleasing shade of rose with crimson-scarlet standard. Pkt. 7c; oz. 80c; ¼ lb. $2.40; lb. $8.00.

3390 EARLY SANKEY (BURPEE'S). This truly magnificent white was awarded a special Silver Medal when exhibited at the great International Show in New York, March 20, 1915, also Certificate of Merit at the Spring Show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March 23, 1915. Black seeded. Pkt. 7c; oz. 80c; ¼ lb. $2.40; lb. $8.00.

3302 IMPROVED EARLY SNOWSTORM (BURPEE'S). The result of a cross between King White and Yarrawa, it embodies the best qualities of those two varieties and easily eclipses all early-flowering white Sweet Peas to date. The flowers are of Yarrawa size, but finer form, as the standard does not reflex but is magnificently bold, though charmingly waved. A vigorous grower, the immense flowers are invariably borne in fours on very long stems. Awarded Certificate of Merit at the International Show, New York, March 20, 1918. Our improved Snowstorm is so immeasurably superior to our original Snowstorm that we have now discarded the latter. Improved Snowstorm is the last word in Early-Flowering White Sweet Peas. Pkt., 10c; oz., $1.50; ¼ lb., $4.50; lb., $15.00.

3352 EARLY EXQUISITE (BURPEE'S). The ground color is a soft shade of primrose, the edge of the standard and wings being beautifully "picoteed" with deep rose-pink. Pkt. 7c; oz. 85c; ¼ lb. $2.50; lb. $8.50.

3376 EARLY LOVELINESS (BURPEE'S). The color is white, the entire flower being suffused soft pink and the edges distinctly picoteed with rose-pink. Pkt. 7c; oz. 85c; ¼ lb. $2.50; lb. $8.50.

3357 EARLY FANTASY (BURPEE'S). Striped and marbled with rich rose-pink on a creamy white ground. Exceedingly bright and makes a telling bunch when cut. Extremely free and a continuous bloomer, the flowers usually borne in threes and fours on long stems. Pkt., 7c; oz. 80c; ¼ lb. $2.40; lb. $8.00.

3342 EARLY CANARY BIRD (BURPEE'S). This is a splendid, rich, deep cream or primrose colored self. The flowers are of great size, beautifully waved, and usually borne three or four on a stem. Pkt., 7c; oz., $1.00; ¼ lb., $3.00; lb., $10.00.

3338 EARLY BLUE-BIRD (BURPEE'S). This is a charming shade of blue. Somewhat deeper than Wedgewood, but more of a true self, especially as the flower ages. In our opinion, the best blue for indoor culture. Pkt., 7c; oz., $1.00; ¼ lb., $3.00; lb., $10.00.

The prices quoted are net for packets as well as larger quantities, f. o. b. Philadelphia, for delivery July to December. The above varieties—each the best in its class—provide a complete range of colors. We have many other desirable varieties of Early Flowering Spencers on which we shall be pleased to quote prices upon request.

DEMAND FOR FUNERAL FLOWERS.

There was a good demand for funeral flowers this week, especially for the victims of the balloon explosion, who were killed Monday, July 21. The dirigible, the speediest ever made of the army blimp type, was sailing over the city and attracted the attention of everyone, especially in the wholesale market, when it suddenly caught afire and dropped through the skylight of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, killing nine more men and women, and injuring twenty-six; total dead, 13. The daily papers were filled with news of the accident, which probably caused many to send flowers to the homes of the unfortunate, who probably would have not thought of doing so otherwise. Business for the week just past, was, as a whole, somewhat quiet, with the sales running about the same as last year. Stock is none too plentiful, but there is nearly always more than enough to go around. American Beauty roses are in strong demand at good summer prices and clean up quickly at all times. Columbia and Mrs. Chas. Russell find ready buyers, and so do all the other roses that are arriving. Reds have been exceedingly scarce the past week. Carnations are about done, and so are peonies. Gladioli are more plentiful, and command high prices, notwithstanding the fact that most of the stock is showing the effects of the dry weather. Asters are seen in larger quantities, but clean up quickly in the better grades each day. Pond lilies are featured regularly in the window displays of several of the leading stores. Gypsophila is quite a factor in the market at present and always finds ready customers. Lily of the valley and orchids are on the short side. Daisies, calendulas, cornflowers, candytuft, snapdragons, lilies and other miscellaneous stock is to be had. The Detroit convention is one of the chief topics of conversation in the market at this time, and from present indications, this vicinity will be very largely represented in the attendance as well as the trade exhibtion.

NOTES.

John Poehlmann is spending his first summer in the wholesale market and is handling the situation as efficiently as his father did before him and everyone remembers well the great success he made as head of the cut flower department of Poehlmann Bros. Co. He realizes that all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, so he is planning on leaving in a couple of weeks with a party of friends on a fishing trip to northern Wisconsin. Otto W. Freese is the picture of health since he returned on the job here after enjoying a well-earned rest.

Fred Ottenbacher, of the Zech & Mann force, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation. He will visit all his friends in this vicinity besides making an extended trip to Niles Centre. Joe Erringer and Michael Freres returned from a pleasant two weeks' outing and are back on the job here.

George Wienhoeber and A. C. Kohlbrand will leave in a couple of weeks on a fishing trip in the Soo regions. L. R. Bohannon told them how fine the brook trout were biting, so they decided to go up and enjoy the sport.

Frank Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, Mo., passed through here this week enroute to Detroit, Mich., where his family is spending the summer in a cottage nearby.

Fred Longren and William Duntemann are back with their families from a pleasant visit to the Wisconsin Dells.

I. Rosnosky, of the W. W. Barnard Co., is back from an out-of-town business trip.

Dave Ahrens, with Kennicott Bros. Co., is spending his vacation at Momence.

J. A. Vaughan and wife of Collingston, La., are the guests of A. L. Vaughan and family this week. They will leave in a few days for Rochester, Minn., after which they will spend several weeks in Colorado. The genial wholesaler is an uncle of the young Mr. Vaughan and it is needless to add that they are enjoying themselves immensely.

Wietor Bros. have had an extra heavy demand for chrysanthemums and pompons this season and the early demand for field grown carnation plants indicates a great shortage throughout the country.

Mrs. Theodore Callos, Mrs. Andrew Chronis and Mrs. Lawton left this week to visit their folks at Shawano, Wis. They are all sisters of Chris Pederson, the East Randolph street florist.

J. E. Pollworth, of Kennicott Bros. Co., is the proud owner of a six-room bungalow in Portage Park. Mrs. Pollworth is recovering from a severe attack of pneumonia.

Albert Graham, manager of the traffic department at Percy Jones, Inc., is enjoying his vacation. Walter Niessen is back on the job after being away for two weeks.

Vaughan's Seed Store reports field grown gladioli at the Homewood farm began flowering July 15. So far, the growth is short on account of drought.

The Sprague-Smith Co., glass dealers, has been changed to the Simpson-Clark Glass Co., the capital stock being increased from $25,000 to $75,000.

John Walsh, with the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, is again on duty after enjoying a well-earned vacation with his family in the country.

Teddy Vogel, with W. J. Smyth, is enjoying a three weeks' vacation. Mr. Smyth and family are spending the summer at Antioch.

Walter Walters of the Central Floral Co. is back from his vacation, part of which was spent at his old home in Milwaukee, Wis.

Peter Baumann, of the Peter Reinberg store force, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation.

John Kruchten and family will leave soon for Michigan, where they will spend their vacation. The trip will be made by auto.

Mrs. Katherine Fortmann, mother of Frank, Herman and Henry Fortmann, of Rogers Park, died July 20, age 93 years.

Michael Freres of the Zech & Mann force has taken a position as manager of the Ohio Floral Co.

There are several good openings with commission houses in the local market for capable men.

George Jung is conducting the business operated by C. Pfund & Co. at Oak Park.

M. C. Gunterberg is planning on attending the Detroit convention.

Fred Klingel, well-known to the local trade through his former connection in the wholesale market, died at his home in Des Plaines, July 22, at the age of 38 years. He was at various times in the employ of Peter Reinberg, George Reinberg, John Kruchten, and about nine years ago started in the wholesale business with Charles Erne, under the firm name of Erne & Klingel. He sold out his interest to Mr. Erne about four years later, when he retired from the florist business. He is survived by a wife and four children who have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of a loving husband and father. The funeral was held from the home in Des Plaines, Thursday afternoon, July 24.

The A. Dietsch Company is having a busy season with a strong demand for all greenhouse materials. Fred Dietsch is planning to attend the Detroit convention, and will probably make the trip by auto.

Miss Edna Frauenfelder is camping in the Rocky Mountains in Colorado, where she is having a most delightful time.

Fred Lautenschlager, with Kroeschell Bros. Co., was confined to his home several days this week with a severe cold.

Rudolph Kurowski, of the John C. Moninger Co., is back from a pleasant vacation in Wisconsin.

W. N. Rudd and wife are planning a Colorado trip early next month.

FUNERAL DEMAND INCREASES.

The only change in market conditons for the past week was a greater amount of funeral work, and probably less stock of really good quality to execute these orders. Roses, which are not quite so plentiful just now, and gladioli, are the favorites. Carnations are getting poor and scarce, and the few passable ones are moving quickly at fair prices. Plenty of green goods arrive daily. The best news to report is that this vicinity was treated to a heavy wind and rain storm on the afternoon of July 14, thus saving many crops that have been suffering for the past four weeks, but as might be expected, it did not cool off much. It has been very warm all this week.

NOTES.

C. B. Whitnall, only honorary member of the florists' club, gave a very interesting and most instructive talk on the relation of plant life, especially trees, to the human being, at the Grand Avenue M. E. church, July 13, at 8 p. m. It's a pity that only those present gained the information which ought to be taught on a larger scale.

Patrick Cudahy, proprietor of the Cudahy Floral Co., whose term as a member of the county park board expired July 1, has been re-appointed by the county board of supervisors.

Frank Sylvester reported July 20 that outdoor stock at his father's place, at Oconomowoc, Wis., was suffering severely for the lack of rain.

Miss Rose Semler, of the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., who took a four weeks' vacation, will not return until about August 1.

The daily press announced the coming convention of the International Apple Shippers' Association, August 12-15.

The famous flower terrace at Gimbel Bros. will be altered, due to changes being made in that part of the store.

Gust. Rusch, of Gust. Rusch & Co., is spending most of the time these days with his family at Cedar Lake.

J. F. Fox is taking his vacation in the form of an auto trip through the northern part of the Badger state.

VERY MEAGER SUMMER BUSINESS.

Business is very slow, with a few good sized funerals now and then. Weddings have also slowed up considerably. The birthday and sick room bouquet is about the only thing that creates any call. The choice of stock is not varied, gladioli being the bulk of the supply. Shasta daisies are not as plentiful as they were a week ago. Other outdoor stock is very limited. Carnations are through. Asters are just beginning to come in, and the quality is poor. Roses, while not plentiful, are equal to the demand with quality fair. Greens of all kinds are plentiful and low in price.

NOTES.

The florists' club picnic was held at Romona park, July 17. The attendance was gratifying, about 250 florists and their families being present. The day was ideal, just warm enough to make it enjoyable, and not a cloud in sight. There were novelty games for the ladies, for the youngsters and the misses, with lots of prizes. A tug-of-war between teams representing the growers and retailers, captained by W. J. Pilcher and Andy Hoffman, respectively, was won by the growers. The event of the day was the ball game between teams representing the wholesalers and the retailers, captained by Al. Gumz and Andy Hoffman. The final score was 14 to 11 in favor of the retailers. The feature of the playing was the pitching of Albers for the retailers, and the hitting of Geo. Keener for the wholesalers. The evening was devoted to dancing and it was voted to have been the best picnic the club ever had.

Art Beyer, with F. C. Weber, will be back from his vacation in a few days and F. C. Weber, Jr., will leave. The Webers have a summer home in Michigan, near Detroit, and F. C. Weber, Sr., and wife are there for the summer. F. C. Weber, Jr., will attend the S. A. F. convention at Detroit.

The transportation committee of the florists' club for the Detroit convention, is busy completing plans for the "presidential special" and expects to have a good-sized delegation.

FUNERAL WORK MAIN ACTIVITY.

Trade is spotty, with many dull days mixed in with good ones. The main dependence is funeral work. In matter of variety, stocks are very limited, reducing displays to an unattractive state that does not create business. Gladioli and roses are the exceptions, and comprise all but a small per cent of the flowers now being sold. Both are in volume sufficient to take care of business in the way of designs. Carnations are so poor in quality as to come in for little consideration. Sweet peas are a strong favorite, but cuttings are meagre. There is little life or glamour about any of the shops.

NOTES.

The Munk Floral Company will put in a conservatory and office building at their range on the north side, with special reference to a growing trade in Upper Arlington, a fashionable suburb consisting of 1,000 acres of territory, which is coming into prominence.

The Franklin Park Floral Company, which dismantled several of its old greenhouses because of bad condition, are replacing them with new and modern buildings.

BUSINESS SETTLES TO SUMMER DULLNESS

The market has settled down to its usual summer lassitude with now and then a good day. Vacations are now the one big subject of interest to all and many are leaving daily for the eastern resorts or the mountains.

NOTES.

An effort will be made to get the retail florists' club together again this fall. It was not successfully conducted last year, but to those who watched results, the conviction is strong that much good was accomplished. With the absence of the influenza which created such an unusual demand last year, it behooves the trade to get together and formulate plans so there will be no danger of getting out of the habit of keeping busy. What are the florists going to do to get their share of the money that formerly went into the till of the saloonkeeper? The answer is to get together and follow the example of the trade in Cleveland, Detroit, Milwaukee and other cities and make some real money.

We doubt if many local florists realize to what a large extent the Zieger Co. has developed its bird business. They have two aviaries now, each about six feet square and are building a new one. These cages are filled with probably every known house bird gathered from all over the world. Visitors from out of town are astonished at the great variety handled, and local florists would be more so, to discover an institution of this kind right in their midst.

The Ludwig Floral Co. on Federal street certainly has the appearance of a flower store when flowers are plentiful, as they make lavish displays of them on the sidewalk in front of the store. Not all firms approve of this idea, but it surely notifies the public in a striking way that it is a flower store, and the writer believes it creates many sales among a class of people who like to take home a few flowers for the table.

The McCallum Co. held its annual outing at Riverview Park, July 12 the trip being made by auto from the Seventh street store, the factory and the greenhouses. An ideal day added to the enjoyment, the main feature of the programme being a ball game between the store and greenhouse forces. The store won by a score of 18 to 5.

A. W. Smith Flower Stores Co. offered prizes to the art students in the local schools for the best street car ads. Their exhibition of the prize winners, and those of honorable mention, was viewed by thousands, and it surely is surprising the number of clever and new ideas these art students put out.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. expects to make a big bid for the supply business this year, and it is reported they are planning to add several stories to their present building and put several more men on the road.

Charley Olmer is back from France where he served in the motor transport. He resumed his old position at Mrs. E. A. Williams, and it is no secret to say they were very glad to get him back on the job.

John Kuntz recently returned from France, and took over the Grand Flower Shop. He has been making very attractive displays there ever since.

E. J. M.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

JULY BUSINESS SATISFACTORY.

The florists' business during the third week of July was more satisfactory than it has been since the passing of the June weddings. This was due to the fact that there was a very large amount of funeral work in demand throughout the week, and, in fact the call was so large that it was impossible to procure enough stock with which to fill all orders. Roses, especially, were in short supply, particularly in the better grades. A good showing of the new rose, Premier, is appearing on the market daily, and it is believed that they will become quite popular. Gladioli may be said to dominate the demand at present. A few dahlias are appearing on the market, the first of the season. There is a plentiful supply of ferns of all seasonable varieties.

NOTES.

The Flick Floral Co. is putting some good specimens of the new rose, Premier, on the market. They have a large stock of this variety, and are also specializing in Hoosier Beauty, Columbia and Russell for the coming season. Some handsome Hydrangea arborescens were noted in their downtown store, and funeral work has had a big run here.

Plans for a larger stock of roses than ever before, are being carried out at the greenhouses of the Freese-Knecht Co. Premier, Hoosier Beauty, Columbia, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Shawyer, and in fact all of the leading commercial varieties, will be cultivated here. They report an excellent summer demand for roses, the best in years.

Miss Bon Silene Doswell, of the Doswell Floral Co.'s store, is spending a week's vacation in St. Louis, Mo., where she is the guest of her sister, Mrs. H. J. Wickman, formerly Miss Rhoda Doswell. This firm had a very good call for funeral flowers, and is receiving fine cuts from the young stock, of Columbia roses, daily.

Funeral work in considerable quantity has kept the force at the A. J. Lantenier store quite busy. A number of the force are taking their vacations. Some good midsummer flowers are arriving daily from their greenhouses on Anthony boulevard.

A fine lot of summer ferns are being displayed at Ed. Wenninghoff's store, and some fine specimens of gladioli, particularly the Halley variety, were noted here. Summer trade is holding up well.

JULY CLUB MEETING FEATURE EVENT.

The most interesting event in trade circles in this city for some time past was the July meeting of the florists' club, preceded by a dinner at the Hotel Rennert, the guests of honor being Secretary John Young, of the Society of American Florists; Major P. F. O'Keefe, of the O'Keefe Advertising Agency, Boston, Mass., in charge of the national publicity campaign; Robert Kift, secretary of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia; Z. D. Blackistone, president of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C.; A. Snell, William Grillbortzer, George C. Shaffer and E. P. Rodman, also of the national capital. The congeniality of those present, and the hearty applause received by Mr. Kift, when he suggested an interchange of visits between clubs of various cities, indicated a fine spirit of co-operation that bids fair to aid in extending the hope that the trade will broaden as a whole, and make rapid strides in keeping with other industries. Every detail of the entertainment and the arrangement of the dinner was in the capable hands of William F. Ekas, and his admirable management of the occasion was fully appreciated by the 35 or more members and guests present.

At the club meeting which followed, Major O'Keefe spoke at length on the subject which interests him most, and the one his hearers were most anxious to listen to, "Advertising." The Society of American Florists is to be complimented upon having the services of so valuable a man to forward its slogan, "Say it with Flowers." The most interesting fact brought out in his talk was that "Say it with Flowers" was never intended at the start to enhance the sale of any certain flower or better the business of any one florist store or growing establishment; but rather to increase the belief in the minds of the public that they need flowers for every occasion. It was shown that this is an extremely difficult propositon, considering the florist industry has never been advertised extensively. After this demand had been created to his satisfaction, Major O'Keefe let loose an idea, which seems the biggest thing that could be carried on, that of advertising a certain flower for a certain time; if possible, to have a flower for every month in the year, and concentrate all effort to the growing, the handling, the arrangement and the sale of this certain flower. Secretary John Young then spoke, and stated that Major O'Keefe had covered the field of advertising completely, and mentioned that now was the time to secure a life membership in the S. A. F. before the fee was raised. It was found to be the consensus of opinion that the club ought to invite the S. A. F. to Baltimore in 1921, after which the meeting adjourned. Refreshments were served.

NOTE.

Whether the success of the trade in this city, or the matter of ample time to attend to such matters at present is responsible, the writer does not know, but Dan Cupid has been working overtime of late, for Robert W. Johnson, who has just returned from one year's service overseas has taken unto himself a wife, and Albert G. Fiedler is to be another matrimonial candidate in the near future. G., JR.

GLADIOLI RULE THE MARKET.

Gladioli are now the principal market offering; in fact, they are about the only flower to be seen, with quality not as good as was the case earlier in the season, owing to hot weather. Roses are fairly good, but far from being A No. 1, and are none too plentiful. Russell is about the best, as Ophelia is short stemmed and very single. Gypsophilas and larkspurs are plentiful and the quality is satisfactory. They are welcome as they work in well with other flowers. The demand is fairly good, but is confined principally to funeral orders and hospital work.

NOTES.

Samuel Murray, state vice-president of the Society of American Florists for Missouri, west, is making a vigorous campaign for subscriptions to the S. A. F. publicity fund, and should have the hearty support of everyone in his territory.

Miller E. Carter, of the William L. Rock Flower Co., is spending his vacation in camp with the Seventh Regiment. He is mess sergeant of Co. M, and in civilian life, is secretary and director of the above firm.

W. J. Barnes is making a complete cleanup at his range and everything is being put in first class condition for the fall trade. His pot ferns are showing fine form at present.

H. Kusik & Co. report good business, with stock quite plentiful. Home grown Russell and Ophelia roses and gypsophila from Colorado are included in the offerings here.

T. J. Noll & Co. report good business for the season, but stock is scarce. Some fine gypsophilas and gladioli were seen at this establishment during the past week.

James Ragan is out to beat the "high cost of heating" this year. He has a gas well that is a heavy producer, and is now drilling for oil.

Arthur Newell is very proud of his new establishment, into which he will move about July 24. He reports good summer business.

E. J. B.

Rochester, N. Y.

SUPPLY AND DEMAND WEAK.

Business has been at a standstill during the past week due to hot weather and lack of funeral work. Everything in the wholesale market, however, cleans up daily as the supply is very limited. Roses are much improved in quality, but the receipts are below requirements. Gladioli, in the several varieties have begun to arrive but in small numbers. Carnations are also a short item. A few Harrisii and Japanese lilies are seen. The summer crop of sweet peas are among the offerings and they are showing good form and bring excellent returns. Outdoor garden flowers are proving very popular.

NOTES.

A large European linden tree in front of the greenhouses of Charles Schlegel & Sons, in full bloom, is attracting much attention. The tree, one of several brought to this country from Odessa, was planted by Mr. Schlegel's father about 50 years ago. While the others have all been cut down, this particular tree has been saved through the efforts of John Dunbar, city horticulturist.

The outing of the Rochester Floral Co. was held July 16 at the home of Miss Bashford. The programme which was much enjoyed included a sausage roast, a supper and games and other amusements in various forms.

A shipment of ornamental arbor vitae has been received at George B. Hart's. His commission house is closing at 5 p. m. during July and August.

Milton Selinka, accompanied by his bride, made a business trip to this city last week. The congratulations of the trade here is extended.

Charles W. Curtis, of Irondequoit, expects to cut about 50,000 gladioli in several varieties during the next few weeks.

Hart & Vick are making a specialty of freesia bulbs of the Purity type which are finding a ready sale. Cecil Lester has returned from a business trip to a number of cities in the state.

GOOD TRADE DESPITE BAD WEATHER.

St. Swithin, Jupiter Pluvius—and all the rest of the rain makers—have been having their innings the past week, until everything, even the very atmosphere, appears to be thoroughly saturated. Considering the adverse conditions, the demand has held up very well, as the supply of stock of all kinds, extras or specials, has never been sufficient to go around. Choice roses, at least the best obtainable now in Russell, Columbia, Premier, Ophelia, Hadley and Victoria, are sold on arrival at much better prices than ever before at this season, and this holds good with gladioli, asters, or the best of the outside stock. It is the cream that is taken off first, and the skimmed milk then brings very little. It looks from the early arrivals of the dahlia, these flowers being seen in several of the stocks, as if the growers of these field flowers will be early on the job, and continuous to the finish. From all accounts, there are larger plantings than ever before. Dahlia specialists will do well to note that it is not quantity, but quality, that shows up best in the returns. Not only excellence of stock, but superior packing, as flowers must reach the market in the best possible condition early in the day. Cattleyas at all salable, find ready buyers at $1 each; even the small Harrisoniana bring 50 cents. The little Sweethearts are the best all around roses on the list, being about as good now as in winter. Asters so far, are for the most part a disappointment, most of the flowers offered being away below par.

TWO WELL KNOWN SPECIALISTS PASS.

The trade lost two important members the past week in the deaths of George Anderson and Charles Meckey, both of whom were for many years important factors in the production of plants and cut flowers. Mr. Anderson, who first grew bedding stock, later became successful with Easter plants, being very strong on hydrangeas and Easter lilies, which were in great demand by the best stores. Roses for cut flowers were taken up, and he soon became famous for his choice Jacques, Ulrich Brunner and Mrs. John Laing. He also, as his place increased, had great success with the Bridesmaids, Perles, and later, the hybrid teas. He was an active and interested member of the florists' club, fond of bowling and shooting, representing the club frequently on its championship teams. Two years ago he suffered a paralytic stroke, after which he gave up business.

Charles Meckey specialized in bedding, Easter plants and pot roses, aiming to produce them in quantity for sale at popular prices. In this, he was very successful, being able by well regulated succession of crops, to make most intensive use of his greenhouse space. He had, for many years, a large range of glass at 17th and Lehigh avenues, which becoming surrounded with residences, he sold 15 years ago and removed his houses to Limekiln pike, which in turn was sold last year to make way for suburban homes. He then retired.

VACATION TRIPS.

Harry I. Foust, and his daughter, Marion, accompanied by Robert Craig, started July 17 for an auto trip through the eastern states, destination Portland, Me., returning by way of the White Mountains. Mr. Craig, who has been recruiting his strength at his seashore home in Ocean Grove, N. J., is very much better, and expects to thoroughly enjoy this trip. Miss Marion drives the car, as the two gentlemen were born so long before autos were even thought of, that they are now too old to learn.

Edward Reid and Mark Mills spent last week in the Pocono Mountain district, fishing, and enjoying the mountain scenery of this beautiful region with the aid of Mr. Reid's car. He is a skillful driver; narrow roads along dizzy heights having no terrors for him.

Frank R. Hastings, the Chelten avenue retailer, and Mrs. Hastings, are visiting friends in the "home of the roses." Richmond, Ind. They expect to return July 24.

A. R. Jones, of S. S. Pennock Co., is enjoying his vacation, with a dip in the surf at Atlantic City, and a visit in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Pennsylvania.

Leo Niessen and family have returned from an enjoyable trip to Niagara, the Thousand Isles and Quebec.

NOTES.

It is feared by carnation men, that the continued heavy downpours of rain of the past week will injure the stock in the fields, particularly in low places. Many are now ready to put the plants in the houses, but are held up by the rain, which has made the fields so soft it will take almost a week of sunshine to dry them out.

DEMAND A LITTLE BETTER THAN IN 1918.

The business of the past week was about the average for midsummer, but a little better than the corresponding period of 1918, as relating to prices, on account of a decided falling off in the supply of stock, particularly roses. The great surplus of the previous week, caused by the hot weather, was mentioned in our notes of July 19. As nothing—excepting possibly this old earth, and some of the celestial bodies—can keep up an even speed at all times, it stands to reason that the roses had to slow down. Even with a great reduction, there has been more than enough to supply the demand, noticeably in white stock. It is well to note that excepting American Beauty and Francis Scott Key, but few of the roses have reached the special grade, which is probably better for the wholesalers, as the large retail stores are doing but little business. The supply of orchids continues light, so is the demand. Very few lilies and lily of the valley are on the market, but they do not seem to be greatly missed. While asters are not yet plentiful, there is a fair amount of stock to be had, and it came in time to supplant the carnations, which are practically finished. The supply of gladioli is on the increase. But few good sweet peas are seen. The last half of the past week brought dark and rainy weather, and if continued, the supply of stock will further decrease.

July 21.—The supply of stock is not heavy, but there is more than might have been expected after a week of dark weather. There is the usual Monday buying, for the season.

NOTES.

It is always a bore to read or write about the weather, but in the interest of historical accuracy it must be stated that it has rained here for five days in succession, and for the past two days, there has only been brief intermissions, with no signs of letting up. There are various theories as to the cause, and one guess is as good as another. The official weather forecaster says, it is the rain that makes wet weather, which nobody will deny. The superstitious people say it is because it began to rain on St. Swithin's day, July 15. Our personal theory is, that it has been caused by a cold wave from the west rushing in on the superheated atmosphere surrounding the covenant of the League of Nations at Washington, D. C., and it's spreading.

Craig Muir, and wife, as has been their custom, have gone to their Connecticut farm for the summer. Previously they had closed the store at 62 West 40th street for the time of their absence, but this year, the old saying that it's an ill wind that blows no good, was verified. On account of the building, in which he was located at Sixth avenue and 41st street, being torn down to make room for a larger one, William P. Sears had to move, and has, temporarily, taken the Muir store.

William N. Reed, of Reed & Keller, says that they are so busy that they have had little time to think of the S. A. F. convention. They are now busy on an unusually large contract, which covers a number of unique features. If you have but a hazy idea of what you want, tell it to William and he will complete it and do a good job.

Romeo M. Guido, who for the past 12 years has been with A. T. Bunyard, has resigned and is going into the retail business on his own account at Lexington avenue and 52nd street. He has shown himself an industrious and clever young man and we wish him success.

Mrs. Leikens and Fred Lantz, her manager, are now at the Newport, R. I., store. James Bruce, nephew to Mrs. Leikens, and favorably known in the trade of this city, is in charge of the Madison avenue store.

Captain Julio R. Capifali, United States Army, of San Juan, Porto Rico, who is also a florist, is spending a short leave in this city and has been calling on the trade.

Costos Sakelos, the Colonial Florist, says he is too busy to attend the convention. His family is away for the summer, and his men are taking their vacations in turn.

Miss Grace Durkin, head bookkeeper for J. S. Fenrich, has returned from her vacation, which she spent at Asbury Park, N. J., the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Fenrich.

George Hildenbrand, of John Young & Co., has returned from his vacation, spent at Freeport, L. I., where he says the fishing and bathing are good.

Miss Mollie Boxer, bookkeeper for Riedel & Meyer, has returned from her vacation and the boys in the store are glad.

Peter F. McKenney, and family, have gone to Atlantic City for a month's stay.

A. F. F.

Detroit, Mich.

BUSINESS STAGNATION IS GENERAL.

Another week of exceptionally poor business marks the condition of trade here, as reported by nearly every florist. Continued warm weather, with no funeral work of consequence, is assigned for the stagnation that all in the trade feel. Stock of many seasonable varieties is also scarce, and no item on the list in excess of the limited demand. Roses which caused a real glut 10 days ago, are now very scarce and the quality not up to summer standard. Gladioli are slow coming in, but indications point to a big supply very soon from the local growers. Nearly all of the retailers are taking advantage of the dull time and are cleaning and painting their stores to be in readiness to greet the Society of American Florists' convention vistors, August 19-21. The growers, too, are also getting their places fixed up to the limit of their ability with the extreme shortage of help felt by them all.

NOTES.

Robert Rahaley, manager of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, is enjoying an outing in the fishing district near Grayling, Mich. His brother, Henry, of the same firm, joined him there July 19 to remain a few days. Albert Sylvester, also of this firm, who has been on an extended vacation, is again "on the job" looking much improved by his well earned rest.

John Moore, manager of Breitmeyer's Woodward avenue branch store is to be married next week to Miss Ernie Voelkner, the attractive assistant at the David Whitney branch store of the same firm. A lengthy vacation will be taken by the happy couple.

Frank Holznagle is hard at work on the improvements to his new home at Birmingham, Mich. Here he has seven acres surrounding his palatial residence completed a short time ago. His son, Frank, has charge of the business on Woodward avenue.

The members of the 10 committees appointed to make preparations for the convention are working energetically and harmoniously and nothing will be left undone to extend a fitting reception to the hundreds of visitors we expect as our guests.

A. Pochelon returned for a few days from his summer outing at Lovells, Mich. He will attend the convention of the Canadian Horticultural Society at Toronto the second week in August.

Charles H. Plumb is busy on the construction of his eight new houses and enlarged boiler room. The work is in the hands of the Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., Chicago.

Jerome K. Stock, treasurer of the florists' club, with his wife, is taking a vacation of a month at Glen Lake, Mich. They plan to be back in time for the convention.

8 inch BOSTONS.....$1.00 9 inch BOSTONS.....$2.00

Our stock of 6 inch and 7 inch Bostons will be ready in about a month.

PALMS

Owing to the new law prohibiting the importation of rooted plants, Palm stock will be scarce in the near future. If any one was to tell you that the country was going dry 10 years ago you would not have believed them. It has gone dry but we didn't predict it. We do predict the shortage of Palms at the present time. Buy our strong, sturdy stock and avoid the shortage.

Lancaster County Florists' Ass'n Picnic.

On March 10, the picnic committee reported as follows: B. F. Barr, for a trip to Wild Cat; H. K. Rohrer, a trip around Lancaster and dinner at the Stevens house; A. M. Herr, a trip around Lancaster and afternoon and dinner at Rossmere. April 10, at a full meeting of the club, it was voted almost unanimously to go to Wild Cat. July 10 notices were sent out for a picnic at Wild Cat, July 13 and the committee made a trip to that point to complete the arrangements, and found that in bad weather, it was almost impossible to reach it on the York county side by machines, and the ferry facilities from the Lancaster county side were inadequate for comfortable transportation. For this reason the plans were changed to Rossmere, and we feel that on account of the publicity given to the original proposition, that this explanation is due the participants and friends of the club.

The Reading florists were invited as our guests, and the following reached Lancaster at 9 a. m., July 17: J. C. Bauder and wife, John Dounag and wife, Alfred Lunden and wife, H. C. Huesman and Miss Huesman, Fred Baer and wife, Mrs. Giles, and Harry Heck, Ferdinand Heck, Clayton Butz, Wm. Kern, A. W. Masser, W. N. Able, F. D. Lauck and some of the younger generation. In addition to these, we had with us Dennis Connor, Mr. Bates, D. J. Koehane and S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, T. J. Nolan, of the United States and Edw. Marshall, wife and mother, from Kennett Square.

The day started at 9:15 from the Reading terminal, via. automobile to the Kate Long park; to the B. F. Barr nurseries; to Geo. Wilson's who owns the former home of President Buchanan with its historic associations and its historic furniture; to Mapel Grove swimming pool; through the essential part of the city to the country club, and then to Rossmere.

The first event at Rossmere was a picnic lunch, followed by the usual picnic amusements, with W. B. Girvin of Leola, Pa., as high man in the men's bowling contest and Mrs. A. M. Herr as high lady in the ladies' score. Chas. B. Herr and Miss Lizzie Musselman, of Strasburg, carried off the honors in the card game, Dennis Connor was, it is reported, champion in the quoit pitching contest, and in the children's games, the best boy and the best girl won out, and went home with a prize.

At 4 p. m., the picnic was turned into a banquet, with Mine Host Fehl as caterer, and B. F. Barr and H. K. Rohrer as table decorators. The banquet room is a picture of beauty in itself; with the addition of the decorations, and the ladies, it became a feast for aesthetic eyes, and the banquet itself, the realization of a gourmands dream.

After the dinner, President Elmer Weaver called on M. J. Brinton, of Christiana, for an address of welcome to our visitors, which was given in his usual happy manner. The response was made by Harry Heck, president of the Reading Florists' Club, and short talks were made by Harry Huesman, and J. C. Bauder, of Reading, and H. A. Schroyer and B. F. Barr, of Lancaster. Mrs. Albert M. Herr, president of the ladies auxiliary, gave a happy little address for the ladies.

At 5:30 p. m., the guests were automobiled to the Reading terminal, and left Lancaster at 6 p. m. and the Lancaster florists and their wives and families went to their respective homes, a tired but happy party.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

DROUGHT in Idaho continued unbroken July 16.

THE price of bags at Chicago, June 23, was $62.00.

VISITED CHICAGO: W. F. Nehrling, Orlando, Fla.

CALADIUM, fancy-leaved, crop prospects are favorable.

THE well known business of Watkins & Simpson, London, Eng., was established in a small way 43 years ago.

WARRENSBURG, ILL.—The Warrensburg Canning Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000 by L. A. Sears, F. B. Demotte and W. R. Roach.

LATEST reports on seed harvest from the Pacific coast indicate that the crops are not turning out very good, but the increased acreage is making up for it.

PEARL SETS in the Chicago district are in the crates. The yield is about three to one but not many are grown. The pulling of others will begin soon, within a week.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, July 23, were as follows: Timothy $10.50 to $11.50 per 100 pounds; September $13.60; October $12.75.

HENRY & LEE, New York, received the first shipment of Harrisii lily bulbs this week, those of a number of other firms being delayed in the working of the government's new soil regulations.

SOME Dutch bulbs should be coming on the S. S. Nieuw Amsterdam, leaving Rotterdam, July 26, or the S. S. Noordam, due to sail from the same port, August 9. Both steamers stop at Brest, France, for American troops.

TOLEDO, O.—October and December clover declined July 22, with cash quoted at $28.75, October $30.50, and December $29.20. Timothy dropped five cents, cash being offered at $5.47½, September $5.85, October $5.70, December $5.75 and March $6.00.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The creditors of H. R. Whiteside, bankrupt seed and onion set dealer, at a recent meeting agreed to accept his offer to buy for $3,000, claims aggregating approximately $40,000 against railroads for claims for damage and loss, providing the Louisville National Banking Co. will withdrawn a claim against the estate for $11,000.

SABIN, MINN.—Early planted potato fields looked good July 15, according to Henry Schroeder. Those put in later, however, are poor, the stand showing only 10 to 25 per cent, due to warm weather in May, which caused the seed to dry up in the soil. The season has been very unfavorable also for grain wheat, which is badly affected with black rust and the yield will be poor, as there have been six days of hot south winds. Corn, on the other hand, looks fine as the result of these conditions.

Burpee's Business in 1919.

The W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, Pa., in a recent communication, reports that its 1919 business in a general way, was a little less than that of last year in vegetable and flower seeds, attributed to a falling off of the war garden movement. As a rule, however, trade was more satisfactory in many ways, as crops were better and seeds were received from the growers earlier in the season, making it possible to fill all orders promptly, with few instances where it was necessary to refund money to customers.

The demand in flower seeds, taken by itself, increased enormously, particularly in florist varieties, as did also the sales of flowering bulbs, it being estimated that business in these two lines was double those of any previous year. The increase in the movement of flower seeds was offset, however, by the decrease in vegetable seed sales, as in numerous cases, owing to the high prices prevailing a year ago, many planters saved their own seed in 1918.

As to conditions next year, it is rather early to make prophecies, but it is already evident that some items will be short on account of the wet weather in the spring which delayed plantings. Sweet corn is reported to be a very doubtful crop in all growing sections. Sweet peas have been practically wiped out by bad weather and attacks of the aphis in many California growing districts. Even the early-flowering varieties have suffered this year. As a consequence, this crop is liable to be in short supply and high priced. Other flower seeds will probably be about normal, with the prospect of Europe again becoming a factor in production.

Dreer's Annual Meeting.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., held at Riverton, N. J., July 19, the following directors were elected: Jacob D. Eisele, Herbert G. Tull, J. Otto Thilow, George D. Clark, George A. Strolein, James C. Clark and Charles H. MacKubbin. After the adjournment of the stockholders' meeting, the directors organized by electing the following officers: Jacob D. Eisele, president; Herbert G. Tull, vice-president and treasurer; J. Otto Thilow, secretary; James M. Vogdes, assistant treasurer.

Proposed Wheat Quarantine Not Passed.

At a meeting of the federal horticultural board, July 15, advance notice of which was given in our issue of July 12, page 1274, it was decided not to declare a quarantine at this time against wheat shipments from Illinois, Indiana, West Virginia, Virginia and Legislation.

Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass., counsel for the American Seed Trade Association, in a communication dated July 15, 1919, calls attention to the fact that since the convention of the association at Chicago in June, bills or administrative orders of interest to seedsmen have been filed or proposed as follows:

Georgia senate bill 27, affecting agricultural seeds and packages of vegetable seeds.

Texas house bill 102 (extra session of the legislature).

Illinois house bill 476 became a law, June 30, 1919.

United States wheat director, division of licenses, claims that dealers in wheat for seed purposes are required to obtain a United States wheat director's license, regardless of the amount of seed handled, or of the class to whom the seed wheat is sold.

Seeds Need Rest.

One of the most serious problems in the testing of seeds is the unsatisfactory results which are often obtained in testing such seeds as winter wheat, winter rye, and timothy seed of the current season's growth which are to be used for fall planting, according to H. L. Russell, director, agricultural experiment station, University of Wisconsin. Seeds of this type require a resting period between harvesting and the time that they are used for seeding purposes. A. L. Stone of the staff has found that the germinating power of wheat, for instance, was increased fully 60 per cent by two months' storage after harvesting. Samples of timothy tested at frequent intervals for a period of four months showed an average increase in germinability of 36 per cent. Obviously this matter is of considerable importance, as an early germination test would give unfair results in that it would not represent the conditions as they would actually develop in practice.

Newark N. J. Seed Trade.

Alexander Forbes, of Alexander Forbes & Co., who attended the meeting of the American Seed Trade Association at Chicago in June, was well pleased with the attendance and the hospitality of the local hosts. He reports business at his establishment, satisfactory, considering the summer season.

At the store of the J. J. Wilson Seed Co., business has been quite active, except in insecticides, reports being that pests have not, thus far, been destructive.

Odense, Danish Seed Center.

The Danish seed industry, according to Consul Maurice P. Dunlap in Commerce Reports, has its center in the district of Odense, where the largest seed firm in Scandinavia has its main offices, warehouses and gardens, and the dealers and seed growers there have been trained through many years to appreciate the importance of maintaining the high standard of the various strains known as Danish. The government also helps in stimulating the interest, financing control, experiment stations and awarding certificates for superior stocks, such recognition being published and healthy competition encouraged.

The climate is well suited for seed growing. The dry summer of 1918 had its effect on the seed crop, especially grass seed. Root seed, however, gave fairly satisfactory results and the acreage devoted to grass and root seed was considerably extended in that year. The increase in production during the past 10 years is shown in the following figures:

Crops.	1909 Acres.	1914 Acres.	1918 Acres.	1919 Acres.
Grass seed	3,700	4,900	7,400	7,400
Root seed	990	1,700	4,900	4,900
Vegetable seed	250	1,200	4,400	3,000
Flower seed	25	74	124	370
Total	4,965	7,874	16,824	15,670

The principal varieties of grass seed grown are orchard grass, meadow fescue, Italian rye grass, English rye grass and brome grass. The cultivation of clover seems to have been neglected, the amount used in the country annually, about 7,700,000 pounds, including other leguminous plant seeds, being for the most part imported.

Wholesale Price List for Florists and Market Gardeners

There have been doubts as to whether this supply will be available this season and the high price will also probably restrict the demand to less than normal.

The present supply of grass (excluding clover), root and vegetable seeds is more than enough for home consumption and dealers already have large quantities stored owing to trade difficulties during the past two years, preventing exporting to any extent. This does not apply, however, to vegetable seeds which cannot be raised with profit and are usually imported from the United States, among others, beans, cucumber, leek, lettuce and tomato.

The development of the flower seed industry has taken place during the past decade, and noticeably during the past year, as is shown by the foregoing table. American, English and French firms, who formerly purchased flower seed from Germany have during the past two years turned to Danish strains which seem to have proven quite as good. Among the varieties grown are: Aster, bartonia, calendula, California poppy, candytuft, chrysanthemum, clarkia, cynoglossum, forget-me-not, godetia, gypsophila, larkspur, lupinus, mignonette, nasturtium, nigella, pansy, poppy, strawflower and sweet alyssum.

Bulbs of tulip and hyacinth were first imported from Holland about 12 years ago, and the acclimated strains have proved unusually good for forcing purposes. The home market now consumes all the available supply, but it is hoped soon to have a surplus for export of a quality that will rival the Dutch originals. As the flowers are grown only for seed or bulb production there are extensive fields of them in bloom during the whole summer. The tulip fields in the spring are especially noteworthy and attract many sight-seers.

Official statistics regarding the Danish seed exports are meager, but the following figures showing the business done by the largest firm in the district (and in Scandinavia) should convey a good idea of the seed situation here, now and before the present economic unrest. In 1914, about one-third of the firm's total output was sold in Denmark and two-thirds exported. In 1918, five times as much was sold in Denmark as was exported, a large quantity being also put in storage. But only one-eighth as much was exported in 1918 as in 1914, as during the past two years seed exports have been practically prohibited, a special license being required for such seed as was sent out. The amount of seed sold by this firm in Denmark in 1914 and 1918 was as follows:

Sold in Denmark. Seed.	1914	1918
Grass	1,350,000	1,750,000

NEW EARLY-FLOWERING or WINTER-BLOOMING

GIANT PANSIES

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe Winters and to bloom right on into the Summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, eye.
15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with eye.
16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
17. CHARM OF MARCH Dark velvety blue.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress Street, Boston, Mass., Counsel; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

C. B. KNICKMAN, according to rumor, will spend the remainder of the summer in Japan.

CHERRIES in Door County, Wisconsin, are suffering seriously from brown rot, but it is thought the trouble can be greatly lessened, if not entirely eliminated, by spraying.

THE new gold medal roses at the recent show of the National Rose Society of England were Miriam, H.T., exhibited by Rev. J. H. Pemberton, Havering Atte Bower, Essex, and Mrs. C. V. Haworth, H.T., exhibited by Alex Dickson & Sons, Newtownards, Ireland.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Rudolph Klein, formerly employed by the F. Walker Co., well known florists here, and at one time prominent in the nursery business, was found in a demented condition, July 18, and his relatives notified. When taken in charge by the police, he was carrying more than $500 in cash and bank books showing deposits of nearly $10,000. He has a farm at Crestwood, this state, and owns other valuable securities.

International Apple Shippers' Association

The committee in charge of the convention of the International Apple Shippers' Association, which will be held at Milwaukee, Wis., August 12-15, is making elaborate preparations for the entertainment of the delegates and guests, among whom it is expected there will be visitors from every state in the Union and many from Canada, England, Scotland and several from Scandinavia. Many topics of trade interest will be discussed, particularly those which affect the interests of the public from a distribution viewpoint. Many speakers of wide reputation will be in attendance, one of whom, probably the best known, being Representative Julius Kahn of California, who will have for his topic, "Problems of Reconstruction."

Pacific Coast Ass'n of Nurserymen.

The annual convention of the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen, held at Portland, Ore., July 10, proved an interesting session. A feature of the meeting was lively discussion of the plant quarantine order of the federal horticultural board, the majority of the members indorsing the measure and indicating their opinion that the time was now at hand when the trade should begin growing its product and no longer depend on foreign sources of supply. The matter of educating the public to ornamentation and landscaping was another matter discussed and a committee was appointed to co-operate with the Oregon Agricultural College to this end. The shortage of stock existing and the possibility of securing a supply sufficient for requirements, and the question of higher prices, were the text of the reports of several committees. It was contended that the demand on the coast has more than doubled and that dealers cannot begin to supply present needs.

At the election of officers, the association established a precedent in the election of a woman president to guide the organization during the ensuing year. She is Mrs. R. Day, of Spokane, Wash., well known as manager of the Overman Nursery in that city. C. A. Tonneson, Tacoma, Wash., was re-elected secretary-treasurer, and vice-presidents were selected as follows: Fred W. Day, Yakima, Wash.; A. Brownell, Portland, Ore.; M. R. Jackson, Fresno, Calif.; C. A. T. Atwood, British Columbia; C. T. Hawkes, Caldwell, Ida., and B. H. Bower, Provo, Utah. Spokane, Wash., was chosen as the place of the 1920 convention.

The visitors were entertained at luncheon by H. A. Lewis of the Russellville Nurseries, after which there was a trip to Laurelhurst to inspect the evergreens, and later a visit to the pansy gardens of E. J. Steele.

American Ass'n of Park Superintendents

The twentieth annual convention of the American Association of Park Superintendents will be held at Hartford, Conn., August 26-29, with headquarters at the Allyn house, the first two days, while the third day's programme will be carried out at New Haven, with headquarters at the Hotel Garde.

The first session will be called to order at 9:00 a. m. on Tuesday, the visitors being welcomed to the city by Mayor Richard J. Kinsella with a response by President J. F. Foster. Following the business meeting the party will leave for an inspection of the Hartford parks with a sheep bake at Goodwin Park and in the afternoon Keney and Elizabeth parks will be visited, with a luncheon at the latter and addresses by Charles E. Gross on the "City Park System of Hartford," and H. H. Goodwin on "The History and Development of Keney Park." The evening will close with a visit to the dance floor at Colt park.

At 8 o'clock on the morning of the second day, the delegates will leave headquarters for New Britain, visiting Walnut Hill park in that city, thence to Meriden, where luncheon will be served at the state park on West Peak, following which an inspection will be made of Hubbard and Brookside parks and the swimming pool, then to Wharton Brook park in Wallingford, with supper at North Haven, followed by an address on "The State Parks of Connecticut," by A. M. Turner.

On Thursday, the last day of the meeting, the business session will be called to order at 9:00 a. m. headquarters being at the Hotel Garde, New Haven, to which city the visitors will be welcomed by Mayor A. D. Fitzgerald. There will be an inspection of the city park system with luncheon at the summit of East Rock. Features of the closing day's programme will be addresses by Theodore S. Woolsey, president of the park commissioners of New Haven, and by Colonel N. G. Osborn.

Gardeners' Convention at Cleveland.

The plans for the annual convention of the National Association of Gardeners to be held in Cleveland, O., August 26-28, are nearly completed. The Hollenden hotel has been selected as the association's headquarters and convention meeting place. Tuesday forenoon and afternoon, and Wednesday and Thursday forenoons, will be devoted to business. On Tuesday evening, J. Otto Thilow, Philadelphia, Pa., will deliver his lecture on "The Flora of Hawaii," to which the public will be invited. On Wednesday evening, the annual banquet will take place. The local committee comprising R. F. Brydon, W. E. Cook, J. Fisher, R. Poole, T. M. Rowe, H. P. Rapley, J. Hamilton and A. Brown, appointed by President Robert Weeks, is providing the entertainment features for the visiting members and friends.

Among the business to be brought before the convention will be the proposed co-operation between the country estate owners and the national association; the future policy and operation of the service bureau, maintained by the association; the practicability of providing examinations for members of the profession; the question of how young men can be induced to take up the gardening profession.

Among the speakers will be Sidney S. Wilson, vice president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and former president of the Cleveland Advertising Club, who will talk on "How Can the Gardener Best Advertise His Profession?", and Edwin Jenkins, of Lenox, Mass., on "How Can We Interest the Young Men In Our Profession?" Quarantine Bill No. 37 will be discussed by a speaker to be announced later.

Members should not delay in making reservations for hotel accommodations, and should apply to James Fisher, chairman, hotel reservations committee, 10504 St. Clair avenue, Cleveland, O.

Cabbage Yellows.

The disease commonly known as cabbage yellows is again raising havoc in Ohio. As far as we know today, it is hard to control, as it does not yield to external remedies. Wisconsin growers have proved that it can be avoided by breeding resistant strains. This would prove our theory, and also verify our experience, that it is a mistake to import seeds from far-away countries having entirely different climatic conditions. Some years ago, we had a very even, cool summer and the yellow never appeared. But last year and this year, we had intensely hot weather in June, which seems to bring out the malady into full effect. This season our early cabbage field is on rolling land, and on the high spots we suffered some loss, while on the lower and cooler parts, only a small fraction showed effects. Also, we have noticed that mechanical watering is a big check to the disease. We have made money on cabbage this year and last year, while others reported big losses, but we showered our fields almost constantly after plants started to head. It seems they enjoy this cooling-off process. As a preventative, we use fresh soil in the seed and plant beds and rotate crops in the fields. We also know that varieties differ greatly in resistance. Copenhagen Market is easily affected and Enkhuizen less so. Charleston Wakefield being stronger, is better than Jersey Wakefield. Some of our American early varieties are better than Copenhagen Market. Fertilizer also leaves some effect. Potash and nitrate soda stimulate rapid growth, which together with mechanical watering often will put a crop on the market that would have succumbed to slower methods. The disease, as is the case with many other things, acts as a blessing in disguise to some of us. We used to discard the early cabbage crop owing to low prices and slow sales; but now at eight cents per pound and a 90 per cent stand, we think different. We must remember the old saying, that "It's an ill wind that does not blow somebody good."

MARKETMAN.

Late Commercial Potato Crop.

The bureau of crop estimates of the United States department of agriculture, in a report based on conditions July 1, referring to the late or winter potato crop, states it is too early to make any reliable estimates on quantity but that the acreage in nearly all states is from five to 10 per cent less than in 1918. In Maine, the total commercial crop will probably be eight to 10 per cent less than last year with an estimated acreage of 100,000. The acreage in New York, from present indications, will show a decrease of eight per cent, due to high cost of and scarcity of labor at planting time. Weather conditions have not been favorable and bugs are worse than usual. The New Jersey condition is only fair with acreage less than last year. The stand is uneven and the seed germinated poorly. The acreage in Pennsylvania shows a decline in all sections. Conditions have been unfavorable, the stand is uneven and bugs plentiful. Ohio from present outlook, will have its usual acreage, with the yield about 85 per cent of normal. Michigan reports a good stand on a 95 per cent acreage, with planting not quite finished July 1. Some damage is reported from grasshoppers in the northern sections and there is a general infestation of bugs. Condition on the above date was placed at 92 per cent of normal. Almost identical conditions apply to the crop in Wisconsin. North Dakota districts are showing well above the average, as to acreage, but not quite up to normal production due to a general infestation of bugs. The Red River section will probably have an acreage equal to that of 1918. Reports from South Dakota indicate acreage about four per cent greater than last season. Minnesota also indicates a gain of seven per cent. The stand in all sections is good and growth has been excellent. Some damage from bugs is reported but the crop generally is clean and very little disease is apparent. Northwestern Nebraska, which produces 88 per cent of the commercial crop of the state, reports an estimated acreage of 44,358 as compared with 48,700 in 1918. Condition July 1 was placed at 95 per cent. The few counties in Iowa, notably Mitchell, will produce a slight excess over last year. In Indiana and Illinois, where the crop is principally sold in local markets, the acreage in the first named is estimated at 75 per cent, while the latter shows 93 per cent.

In the western states, Washington, which grows a great many commercial potatoes, especially in the Yakima valley, will have an acreage of 93 per cent, compared with last year while the state as a whole promises eight per cent less than at that time and fully that amount below the normal average. Condition and stand are very good and 90 per cent of normal yield may be expected. Idaho, another important commercial potato state, reports a normal acreage and eight per cent better than in 1918. Present conditions indicate a yield per acre of about 80 per cent of normal. Montana promises about 94 per cent of the usual acreage with a 71 per cent yield. The condition was severely damaged by drought during June and unless favored by heavy rains, there will be a considerable reduction in July. Oregon acreage is 88 per cent of last year's and 13 per cent below normal. Growing conditions have been favorable and there is a promised yield of better than 90 per cent. Wyoming appears five per cent below last year but the yield per acre will not exceed 70 per cent due to dry, hot weather and little rain. There has been considerable damage from Colorado weevil, dry rot and bugs and from grasshoppers in the higher elevations. Colorado, one of the important producing states indicates a decrease of nine per cent below 1918. In the Greeley district the acreage is not over 75 per cent and the stand poor. Pests are numerous and the condition of the crop for the state generally is very unsatisfactory.

Vegetable Markets.

Very weak conditions with declining prices marked the period, July 15-21, according to reports received by the United States department of agriculture. Potatoes held firm, however, at the previous week's prices, weakening slightly in the middle west, but closing steady. Eastern shore of Virginia Cobblers averaged from $5.50-$6.75 during the week and closed at $6.25-$6.75 at shipping stations. Eastern markets quoted $6-$7, with Boston and Pittsburgh 50 cents higher. The west closed at an average of $7-$7.50. Kentucky Cobbler shipments were light, averaging $3.40-$3.75 per 100 pounds and closed somewhat weak at shipping points at $3.10-$3.50. Consuming markets ranged $3.65-$4.35 with middle-western markets somewhat draggy. Kansas Early Ohios sold slowly at shipping points at a range of $2.50-$3.60. Norfolk Cobblers were steady at $6-$6.75 in eastern markets, but North Carolina Cobblers were weak at $5.75-$6.25. Onion conditions were dull, both in shipping and consuming markets. Kentucky stock was shipped at an average of $4.25-$5 per 100 pounds. Shipments were light. Consuming markets ranged $4.50-$6.50, and closed at $4.50-$5.50. Chicago was lower at $3.75-$4.25. Shipments of Iowa Yellow Globe began at $5-$6.25 and closed 50 cents lower. Virginia yellow varieties sold in eastern markets at $2.50-$3.25 per bushel hamper. California yellows were shipped at $2.75-$3.50 and averaged $5.50-$6.50 in middle western sections. Tomato prices at New Jersey shipping points closed at 75 cents. Tennessee shipped at 80 cents. Market quotations showed a wide range of 65 cents to $1.80.

Hackensack, N. J.

Henry Weissmann, of the House of Flowers, recently arranged a noteworthy decoration on the "historic green." The occasion was the "welcome home" celebration for the Hackensack soldiers that were "over there." There was a triumphal arch, in which thousands of natural flowers were used. Around the base of the monument to the soldiers of the civil war, there was a fine display of blooming plants. This decoration for such an occasion was particularly noteworthy as compared with "decorations" we have noticed in some other cities, where shoddy imitations of medieval art have been set up, having no possible bearing on the event at hand.

IMP SOAP SPRAY
Sure Insect Killer

IMP Soap Spray is a scientifically prepared compound that is destructive to insects without injuring plants or roots. Does not spot leaves, fruit, glass or de ace paint work. It is clean and colorless. May be used on fruit trees; shade trees; flowering shrubs; vines; garden truck; and on all sorts of plants, both under glass and out of doors.

It is most effective against rose bug; mill bug; white, black, green and rhododendron fly; red spider; thrips; aphis; fruit pests; elm leaf beetle and moths. Used in country's biggest orchards and estates. Very economical, one gallon is mixed with 25 to 40 gallons of water. Full directions on each can. Genuine can has Ivy Leaf trade mark. Your money back if Imp Soap Spray does not do as claimed. Order direct if your dealer cannot supply.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Sweet Peas.

To have sweet peas in bloom by Christmas the seed should be sown by September 1. If it is intended to grow them to follow some crop that is now in the beds they can be sown in pots, but if the beds are now ready it is better to sow them in the beds themselves. The growers of large quantities have the rows running lengthwise of the houses, two rows in each four-foot bed, one on each side, with a path in the center, but they also can be grown in rows running across the beds, the rows being about three feet apart. This distance will be found necessary or the plants will get twined together, making a bad snarl of the vines. In sowing the seed in pots, place five or six seed in a four-inch pot, and in sowing in drills in the bench, plant the seeds about an inch apart. It is very easy to thin them out if they come up too thick, and one good strong plant to a pot and about eight inches apart in the row is about what should be left to grow on. It is often difficult to get good germination during the hot weather, therefore it is well to plant enough seed. Many growers have trouble with the seed rotting and also the plants damping off after they have grown to quite a height. They must be watered very sparingly until they begin to climb on the strings. The white seeded varieties are often very difficult to start; a good way which we have found very successful is to sow the seed in the drills on top of the soil throwing a little sphagnum moss over them until they begin to grow, when they can be lightly covered with soil, and when they begin to climb, the drill can be filled in. This will prevent the seed from rotting and proper watering will remedy the damping off.

Wallflowers.

The wallflowers that were sown in the spring should now be planted in the benches that they may get a good start before the cool weather sets in. They should be planted in a house that can be held at a cool temperature to procure the best results, a house that does not have a night temperature exceeding 50 degrees, and even 45 degrees is better. They will not bloom to any extent until after the turn of the year, when they will stand a little higher temperature. The soil should be a good rich compost and the plants can be set about eight inches apart. Stake the plants as soon as they begin to grow and keep them tied up so that the spikes of bloom will not become crooked. Constant fumigation will be necessary, for they are likely to be infested with aphis unless guarded against.

Nephrolepis.

The Boston fern and its sports, which have been grown in the bench all summer, should now be potted. The bench is full of young suckers, which, if saved, will make fine stock for another year, so in lifting the old plants take a knife and cut around the plant about two inches from the center, and place a trowel under the plant, leaving the young stock in the bench. They will soon start to grow, when they can be placed close together in flats and grown on in a fairly cool house until next spring, when they will make excellent stock for planting out. The plants that are lifted should be large enough to plant in a six-inch pot. If there is a demand for larger sizes, two, three or four may be planted in seven, eight or nine-inch pots. Many of the plants have probably not made an even growth, being more or less one-sided. These should be the ones selected for doubling up in the larger pots. As soon as potted they should be kept close and warm for one or two weeks and frequently syringed; they will then have obtained a good hold in the soil, and should be given plenty of light and air. The call for these plants will begin by October 1, and it is much better to have them well established before they go into the residences, and to do this they should be potted by September. The greatest source of disappointment in these plants is in sending them out before they have become established. The Whitmani and finer leaved varieties are now growing rapidly, and should be given room enough to spread and make fine plants.

Hollyhocks.

During August and early September is the right time to sow hollyhock seed for the next season's flowering. Seed sown in the spring will not produce a plant that will flower to any great extent that year, and they will have to be carried over the winter to make good, large plants, but seeds sown now will make finer plants for next year. For the last few years the fungus that has attacked hollyhocks has made it difficult to carry the old plants over with any degree of certainty, but with late summer sowing much of this trouble is obviated. Be sure and purchase a good strain of double seed, and sow in a shaded frame, and as soon as large enough, pot up in two-inch pots. Grow them in a frame until November 1, and then pot in three-inch or four-inch pots. These can be carried over the winter in a cold greenhouse or in well protected frames, and started in the greenhouse in March and nice plants for summer blooming be assured.

Poinsettias.

The plants of poinsettias, in the northern section of the country, should be in the houses by September 1, for cool nights are apt to occur from that date on, and the successful culture of these plants requires an even temperature. The early struck cuttings should be potted into six-inch pots and properly staked. The smaller stock to be grown in pans can be grown until October in the small pots. Give the plants a light location in full sunlight, and space out sufficiently to allow a good circulation of air around the plants. In potting the plants if there are no arrangements so that they can be watered with manure water later, leave a good inch of space at the top, so that they can be given a topdressing when the bracts begin to form. An extra feeding at that time will greatly increase the size of the bracts and brilliancy of the color. Close the ventilators on all cool nights as soon as the temperature falls below 60 degrees, and as soon as the night temperatures begin to run lower than that point, a little fire heat will be necessary. The one great point in growing poinsettias is in keeping them at an even temperature and growing rapidly.

Annuals and Herbaceous Perennials.

Raised from seed, their cheapness and the simplicity of their culture combine to commend them to flower lovers. A plant that lives only one brief summer would be a poor investment of time and money if one has a permanent home, unless it has fragrance, form or color. Where a person does not own the land he lives on, but rents, and quick returns are required rather than future gain, a wealth of bloom and a pyrotechnic effect of color may be had with annuals for a small expenditure. The best results with perennials come only after the second year, or when the plants are thoroughly established; but annuals are at their best in three or four months.

Foliage in Design Work.

General effectiveness is what counts most in all floral arrangements. While the order is being considered, much stress is ofttimes laid on the flowers to be used, their quality, length of stem, quantity, etc., the final words generally taking the form of the promise, that "it will receive our personal attention and will surely be something handsome." "Just leave it to us—we are sure you will be pleased with it," is another and better expression, as it opens the way to whatever is found most advantageous at the time. Many persons, when they order, specify all roses, but when they see a piece finished, a crescent wreath, for instance, of galax, with a large, well arranged center of white, yellow or pink roses, covering about one-third, the balance of the form rounded out perfectly with the bronze foliage, they admire and accept it as being more artistic and are willing to pay the same price as for the all flower design, which would have taken twice as much stock

There is nothing new or novel to most of the trade about the use of galax leaves in design work, but the "artists" were very chary about taking hold of them at first. In the early days of their struggle for recognition prizes were offered in the advertising columns of THE AMERICAN FLORIST by those interested in their introduction, for the best methods of arranging them. Cut flowers were comparatively scarce in those early days, so that the economy, as well as the novelty of the galax gradually brought them to the front, which place they still hold with many of the trade. Prepared magnolia leaves have made a strong bid for popularity on account of their lasting qualities. Made up wreaths or other designs of the prepared magnolia will keep indefinitely, which makes them especially valuable for stock to be made up in advance of any rush period.

The prepared sago palm leaves, now so generally used, were quite a while in getting an entree. The first specimens had a very artificial look with their varnishy, painted surfaces, but by experience and gradually learning the requirements of the trade, the treatment is such that the leaf is now so almost perfect in its imitation that it is difficult to tell them apart when made up. The prepared leaf can be had in much larger sizes than that ordinarily cut from the greenhouse.

There are still a number of artists who taboo anything of an artificial nature; leucothoe sprays and galax, in both green and bronze, and the fresh green magnolia leaves form the foundation of most of their work. Well made wreaths of any of the above fresh materials, and there is an art in their making, will, with the addition of almost any flower, work up from a pleasing to a most elegant and artistic design.

There are a number of ferns that are useful; an all adiantum wreath of cuneatum, Farleyense, or the Glory fern is very satisfactory when decked with flowers. Cyrtomium falcatum, in its glossy leaf appearance, is rich looking and dresses up beautifully. There is much good material to be obtained from the highly colored foliage of such plants as the croton, pandanus, dracæna, Begonia Rex and other like plants. A wreath of croton leaves is especially showy and attractive. Sprays or branches also give color and distinction to the base of any large design. Pandanus Veitchii crowns or plants cut off from three to four-inch pots, are conspicuous in form and color for large wreaths. Dracæna Sanderii, with its spray-like stems or branches, gives much the same effect. The smaller leaves of the Rex begonias are very rich looking, while there is nothing better to add an air of dainty elegance than cut stems of Cocus Weddeliana.

Wood foliage, such as the laurel, pin oak and pine, are especially useful and could be made much more of than is the usual practice. A well made wreath of fresh laurel is effective in itself, as is also that of the green oak leaves, the latter in the fall of the year, when they acquire their glorious sunset tints, being especially suitable for the funeral of an elderly person. Ivy leaves are also not to be forgotten, as a well made wreath of leaves and short stocky sprays is very attractive. The addition of violets, pansies, irises or other purple flowers and good quality purple ribbon, make this very appropriate for the person of three score years and ten or over.

As a rule foliage, especially of the distinctive kind, is not given the importance it deserves. Considering the expense and its effectiveness, as against the same value of cut flowers, the foliage will be found the most economical as well as better, in striking effects produced. In a large cluster of almost any kind of flowers, a spray or two of crotons, a Pandanus Veitchii head or crown, a begonia leaf or two or other foliage of this character, will relieve the sameness and take the place of more expensive stock, particularly when flowers are scarce and high. Cibotium fronds make an elegant backing for a select spray, as do large fronds of Pteris argyrea, whose silvery foliage works in beautifully with flowers of any color.

A great advantage with foliage is that it can be kept in stock for quite a long time, while the life of cut flowers is so short. As a window piece for show purposes, work of this character is much less expensive than if made of all cut flowers. It is, I believe, more effective, and when the flowers are gone, much of the foliage can be used over again. Small plants of ferns, pandanuses, begonias, cocus, etc., by having the soil washed from the roots, and wrapped with a little sphagnum, are more easily handled and will keep much longer than if cut off. There is also an originality about arranging flowers in this way that gives character and distinction, making them particularly noticeable in a general collection, where they stand out and attract attention on account of these unique features.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The four weeks of August just coming in do not promise much more in the way of business, than the month just closed. The store, however, should have a cool, inviting look, with a few vases of outside foliage, such as oak branches, green and golden privet, shallow bowls filled with pond lilies and vases of bright gladioli, while the case should contain roses, asters, and a few of the other summer specialties.

Summer everlastings are worth looking into. Helichrysum, rhodanthe, acroclinium, globe amaranthus and xeranthemum all produce beautiful flowers, which when cut, can be dried, and will retain their form and color all through the winter. Quite a number of the wild grasses and others of the garden borders, such as Briza maxima, erianthus, eulalia, and zebrina, together with milk weed and other feathered seed pods, are also useful. The florist who will make a specialty of stock of this character to sell in original bunches, or make up later into baskets or bouquets, will encourage a trade worth while and quite profitable.

It is well, at this time, to look over the August business of last season, and see if there were any worth while orders of an anniversary character, that a reminder might be the means of repeating. This looking up of events that have gone before is a method of bringing in considerable business that would otherwise go by default. A little booklet on anniversaries, calling attention to birthdays, weddings, and those for which flowers are sent to place on the grave in the cemetery, should be mailed from a list, to which new names are being constantly added, just a few days before the date shows they may be required. Many church altars have flowers placed on them on certain Sundays in memory of deceased persons. When possible, it is best to have such orders made regularly to be filled year after year as the date rolls round. The calendar electros of the national publicity campaign with the inscription, "Whose birthday is in August," or other month to suit, will make a good illustration for such a circular.

Everyone remembers the October business of last year; the extraordinary demand and the great stress put on all branches of the trade. Let us hope there will be no influenza this season, but what will take its place to use up the much greater supply of the coming months? Now is the time to plan for this new business. There will be the anniversaries of these sad events, which will be remembered with flowers by many. There must, however, be more than the ordinary, everyday store offerings, if the demand of last year is to be even approached. The best news is the great number of debutantes that are to come out during October and November. These events have in former years, before the war, been the backbone of the fall business. Much can be done to encourage and secure a return of this beautiful custom. A few of these teas will no doubt be held in late September, which will place them but five to six weeks away. Put the thinking caps on, and work out in your minds, new creations, things that will make a hit and stand out among the many.

Keep the work going on the wreaths and other holiday stock. The work is apt to lag as there is no hurry. "Lots of time," say some. This is not the case in the supply houses which are stocking up for the same event. As a large manufacturer said the other day: "If we were to wait for the orders before we made up the goods, we would never be able to deliver half the work. We know the demand will be along in due time, so we work a full force, and are ready for the rush."

The best way to foster the fall trade, is to back the well planned publicity movement of the Society of American Florists. Men skilled in advertising are putting forth their greatest efforts in inducing people in all ranks, and for every sentiment in life, to "Say it with Flowers." It takes money, and it takes it right now, so as to have the advertisements pulling early in the season. It is not necessary to give a large sum; tie up with the movement with any amount you like. It is the quantity of small contributors, who if associated will take renewed interest, and each in his way, helps to put the selling of flowers on a higher plane.

Cycas Leaves.

When additional size is desired, or something appears to be wanting to break the sameness of a design, try a few cycas leaves. These are very common stock, always to be found, or at least should be at hand, ready for instant use. The various sizes from 18 up to 48 inches can all be used to good advantage. They are now so skillfully prepared as to be difficult to detect without handling, the artificial from the natural. A pair with sprays of Clematis paniculata and a few Easter lilies or white gladioli and tied with a ribbon, make a crepe spray or good door draping. A magnolia wreath, with a pair of leaves down through the center, does not require many flowers to make a finished piece.

Many standing designs do not receive proper attention at the base or foot. A full, loosely arranged base of flowers with a few cycas leaves at the back is much more complete and striking than without them. A pair of fresh cycas leaves with a spray of choice flowers on top, and tied with a good ribbon, was at one time to be seen at almost every funeral. This is still used, the prepared stock generally taking the place of the natural, although with many customers, the artificial are tabooed, the fresh leaves always being demanded.

Wreaths of cycas are, when skillfully arranged, very satisfactory; these are generally decorated with choice flowers, cattleyas, violets, and in the season, lavender and purple orchids as they are nearly always for the funeral of an aged person. Selected leaves, when used as a background for a large single or double spray, add much to its effectiveness.

The writer recalls a large spray that stood seven feet in height by five in width, made up of a number of sprays of long stemmed flowers on palm leaves, which when built up on an easel and the center filled in with stemmed flowers, made a very striking arrangement. This was quickly put together, as but few of the flowers required stemming. The more loosely arranged the various smaller sprays are, the better, as if too closely bound many of the blossoms are covered up when all are assembled.

Large, loosely tied sprays of any of the long stemmed flowers, such as gladioli, Easter lilies, American Beauty roses, etc., are much improved with a background of cycas; at least, they are made to look much larger and keep all the flowers facing to the front, increasing greatly their effectiveness.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.—The florists' society held its fifth annual picnic, July 10, about 75 members and friends enjoying the pleasant outing. K. P. Baum was chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangements, the programme including an elaborate picnic luncheon, rowing, swimming, fishing, etc.

THE S. A. F.

The Detroit Convention.

TRADE EXHIBITION SPACE GOING FAST.

While space in the trade exhibition has sold well, and most of the areas shown in the official plan have been reserved by exhibitors, there are still a few blocks for disposal, and correspondence regarding them should be addressed to Secretary Young, 153 Bates street, Detroit, Mich., which will be his mailing address until the close of the convention.

Membership cards have been sent to all the life members and to all annual members in good standing for 1919. If any member has not received his card, he should communicate at once with the New York office, 1170 Broadway. Annual members, who have not paid their 1919 dues, will have cards issued to them immediately upon receipt of arrearages.

The official programme for the convention appears in the July issue of the society's "Journal," which was mailed last week over our membership list. Under the postal laws, mailing under the second class privilege is forbidden to any member in arrears, consequently copies to such are mailed at full rates, therefore to be sure of receiving the publication regularly, members should see to it that they are in good standing on the society's books, and that their 1919 dues and arrearages, if any, are paid.

Exhibitors desiring signs, desks, etc., should write the secretary at once, in order that their requirements may be then met in good time. The following exhibitors are in addition to those previously announced: W. F. Kasting, Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.; C. S. Ford, Philadelphia, Pa.; Morehead Mfg. Co., Detroit, Mich.; Greening Nursery Co., Monroe, Mich.; W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; Florists' Exchange, New York; Raedlein Basket Co., Chicago; The Proto-Feed & Guano Co., Chicago; Chicago Printed String Co., Chicago; Spokane Concrete Flower Pot Machine Co., Spokane, Wash.; Carl Hagenburger, West Mentor, O.; Climax Mfg. Co., Castorland, N. Y.; C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; J. C. Moninger Co., Chicago.

If other prospective exhibitors close negotiations within the next few days, the exhibition space available will all be taken up prior to the week of the convention.

Prosperity and Flowers.

Having heard so much of the prosperity of our business during the past year, do you not think it a good policy to keep it up? We expect the flower-buying public to respect the attitude and stride which our business has taken in the interval mentioned, and in order to maintain that standard, we must do many things. One of the essential things towards that aim, is to practice it ourselves, and that is our publicity programme as carried out by your committees. In order to create prosperity, you should practice it also, and unless we prove it, how can we expect others to reciprocate?

Many years ago a remark was passed to me by one of my friends that I have always remembered, and that was, that no matter how much certain people said they had profited that year, he could always estimate their earning power by the way they spent their profits, in their actual mode of living, and their charitable gifts through the year, and it always struck me as being a sensible attitude.

Now, if we are to expect people to buy flowers, we ought to at least share in a general way, the same manner of advertising their merit; not a small, half-way manner, but in an honest-to-goodness way and without the spirit of being small. This we should do, and if all of us would take heed from the advice of my friend in regard to the spending habit, we should have our $100,000 fund, and our campaign would move more flowers than we can even anticipate.

I am reminded of the man who says his town never offered an opportunity to him, but what did he ever do to get the chance? So with our campaign, the opportunity is here if we will only back it up.

It is worth the chance, so try it.

HENRY PENN.
Chairman Nat'l Publicity Campaign.

National Publicity for Flowers.

Another week, and the contributions to the publicity campaign fund exceed $1,000. While this is improvement maintained, it is far from expectancy fulfilled. A total of $1,000 a week will not approximate $100,000 in a year; nothing like it. Nobody likes to be put upon half rations, but that is what it will amount to if we do not meet the quota set up by our committees and our executive board; we shall only get half of the benefit while the whole is in sight.

The complete list of subscriptions published early in July in this paper shows some disparity in the totals for some of the states. The chairman of the local committee for the state of Virginia, is in a vigorous letter, calling the attention of the florists in his state, to the very small showing they have so far made as contributors to the fund. The neighbor state, West Virginia, with little more than half the population, makes a much better showing, but neither are anywhere near the figures expected of them. The local chairmen of all the states are urged to do their utmost to increase their state totals. The national publicity is distributed equally among the states in proportion to population; in fact, it could not be otherwise.

The eyes of the many hundreds of subscribers to the fund are weekly turned to the subscription list published in these columns, with the expectancy of seeing the names of tardy would-be contributors, known to have not yet "come across." The subscription list is now recognized as a "roll of honor" in every sense of the term. That which is worth having, is worth paying for. The "venture" stage of the campaign is a long way behind us; we are now paying for results which we are absolutely sure of getting. Look upon your contribution, if you like, as a sort of return treat to your brother florists who have treated you to the benefits of the campaign already resultant. We are assuming, of course, Mr. Reader, that you are still merely on the list of prospectives. The fall season will soon be here, with a wealth of material to move. No matter whether you are a grower or retailer, the more active the movement of stock, the greater your opportunity to make your business profitable. Demand governs the situation, and, as you know, it is the purpose of the publicity campaign to stimulate and increase it. So far, we have been able to do this, so let us continue the good work. Your committees must make their contracts for space in the national magazines many weeks in advance of publication. Help them to make really worth while arrangements, by sending in your contribution at once.

Buffalo.

FLOWERS PLENTIFUL BUT DEMAND LIGHT.

This city is enjoying the usual quietness that is the rule at this season of the year. Flowers are plentiful and of good quality, and the recent rains have helped the outdoor varieties wonderfully. Some gladioli are being received, but they are not plentiful as yet. Sweet peas are decidedly scarce, although some of the indoor stock is offered for sale. Funeral work is about all that keeps the stores going, and many of the employes are now enjoying their vacations. Among those who are away at present are Edward Slattery, of W. J. Palmer & Son's; Miss Julia Henning, of S. A. Anderson's force, and Oliver Klinkenmeyer and George Vogt, of the Wm. F. Kasting Co. Miss May Kolbeck, of Anderson's, has returned from her trip, which included a visit at Madison, N. Y.

FLORISTS' CLUB ANNUAL OUTING.

The event of the season was the annual outing of the florists' club, which was held at the automobile club's grounds, July 23, about 200 being in attedance, and all enjoyed a delightful day. The committee in charge was untiring in its efforts to make the occasion one long to be pleasantly remembered. At the dinner, speeches were limited to three minutes. In the absence of President Palmer, E. C. Brucker was toastmaster, the speakers being ex-presidents of the club, Messrs. Werrick, Elbers, Neubeck and Adams, the latter introducing Howard Heston, president of the automobile club, who told of good roads and the pleasures of being a member of the club. The athletic events were much enjoyed and hotly contested. During the ball game, the captains, Krauss and Langley, were both young and active, but they could not "put anything over" the "original florists' umpire, Louis Neubeck. A wave of his right hand and—"back to the bench." In the contest of pitching the ball in the 12-inch pot, the prize being 50 feet of hose, the results were awful. There is no use having a pot near a greenhouseman unless there is also a bushel of soil; it might be possible for him to then hit the pot—with some of it at least. The ladies' race showed intensive training. Miss Eloy Pauly being first, with Miss Wilson and Miss Laura Kasting, close contenders, the latter taking second honors. The men's 100-yard race was a fast event. W. B. Scott surprised Longley and all the others. Next year, the Grever brothers will enter all of the races, and will probably do as their father did in the past, before he took on weight, that is, win everything. The ball throwing contest for the ladies was interesting, with Miss Bellanca certainly a winner, while Misses Karpinski and Rath were keen rivals, making it necessary to decide a tie, with Miss Karpinski in second place. In the candle race, it was a question of a steady hand and a slow but sure gait. Miss Alice Clark possessed both, and her light was far in the lead. William Legg, J. B. Weise, W. J. Peake, William Ehrmann, Andrew Jensen and M. Kruckhoff were present, showing that the get-together spirit is strong, and that the annual outing is the way to make each succeeding event better and more largely attended than the year before.

Rochester, N. Y.

FUNERAL AND COUNTER TRADE BETTER.

Market conditions showed some improvement during the past week with the increased demand for funeral work and better counter trade. Carnations are still scarce, and the same is true of roses in the better grades. Sweet peas, in home grown varieties, are excellent and meet with a strong demand. Summer orchids are arriving in small numbers, but the call is light. Gladioli continue in good numbers and meet with ready favor.

NOTES.

The annual outing of the florists' association will be held, August 12, at Grand View park, Lake Ontario, on the Manitou line. The affair will be a family picnic and will include employers, employes and wives and children. There will be a good programme of sports and lunch will be provided. All retail stores and commission houses will close at noon on that day. The committee in charge consists of J. F. Sproat, chairman; George B. Hart, transportation; E. P. Wilson, luncheon; J. M. Keller, sports; Charles Vick, prizes. Everyone is invited, whether members of the association or not.

George T. Boucher has a most attractive summer window showing in miniature an old-fashioned log cabin on a hillside, with vines from the roof and on the walls, while a path, bordered with a hedge of gypsophila, leads to a rustic bridge over a small stream. In the field, at a distance, is a greenhouse with real flowers and plants growing inside. The arrangement is realistic and attracts much attention. CHESTER.

Cleveland.

MODERATE DEMAND AT GOOD PRICES.

The variety of stock arriving in this market is about the same as reported last week, both indoor and outdoor. The demand has been very good, and prices are slightly better than at this season in former years. Funeral work is the big item, with an occasional wedding. Gladioli and sweet peas form the bulk of the supply. Roses are quite plentiful and meet with a fair call as the stock is good.

FLORISTS' CLUB OUTING.

The florists' picnic at Willoughbeach park was well attended and everybody reports having had a most enjoyable day. There was an excellent programme of sports, the following being among the winners in the events:

Fifty yard dash, girls under 10 years—Ruth Henry, 1st; Marie Stehn, 2nd; Viola Conrad, 3rd.

Fifty yard dash, boys under 10 years—Carroll Schoen, 1st; Richard Ralston, 2nd; Kenneth Alexander, 3rd.

One hundred yard dash, girls under 10—Ruth Henry, 1st; Marie Stehn, 2nd; Marion Fisher, 3rd.

One hundred yard dash, boys under 10 years—Carroll Schoen, 1st; Gene Merkle, 2nd; Louis Toth, 3rd.

One hundred yard dash, boys under 14 years—Edw. Stehn, 1st; John Cahill, 2nd; Chas. Martin, 3rd.

One hundred yard dash, girls under 14 years—Marion Hippler, 1st; Ruth Henry 2nd; Elinore Schoen, 3rd.

One hundred yard dash, ladies—Miss Edith Heisy, 1st; Mrs. J. C. Hippler, 2nd; Miss Dorothy Kuehn, 3rd.

One hundred yard dash, men—Chas. Macuga, 1st; J. Schumacher, 2nd; Jas. Smith, 3rd.

Ladies' nail driving contest—Miss Naomi Hahn, 1st; Mrs. J. C. Hippler, 2nd; Miss E. J. Dunn, 3rd.

Peanut race—Mrs. J. C. Hippler, 1st, Miss Naomi Hahn, 2nd.

Running broad jump, men—G. Kloeber, 1st; Adam Graham, 2nd; Jas. Smith, 3rd.

Standing broad jump—G. Kloeber, 1st; J. Schumacher, 2nd; Floyd Mink, 3rd.

One hundred yard dash, non-members—Jas. Smith, 1st; J. Schumacher, 2nd.

Shoe race—Charles Martin, 1st; John Stephen, 2nd; Nick Hayzack, 3rd.

Fat ladies' race—Mrs. J. C. Hippler, 1st; Miss D. M. Bailey, 2nd; Miss E. J. Dunn, 3rd.

Pie eating contest—Edw. Stern, 1st; Chas. Martin, 2nd; Andrew Tornko, 3rd.

Watermelon contest—Dave Cafel, 1st; John Stephen, 2nd; Nick Hayzack, 3rd.

The big event, of course, was the ball game between the retailers and wholesalers, resulting in a victory for the former, the score being 12 to 5. W. E. Cook was the umpire and Steve Berthold scorer.

Moving pictures of the races, etc., were taken by a local concern and were shown at one of the theaters during the balance of the week.

OBITUARY.

Arnold Ringier.

Arnold Ringier, for upwards of 30 years a prominent figure in the Chicago trade, was found dead in bed at the Hotel Randolph, July 25. When he came to this city as a young man, he was employed by J. Schindler, J. F. Klimmer, J. C. Vaughan and others, and finally entered the service of W. W. Barnard as a salesman. Popular and successful, he was well and favorably known from coast to coast. A man of fine appearance and talented beyond the common, he made hosts of friends everywhere. He remained with the W. W. Barnard Co. 27 years, severing the connection in March, 1917, to engage as broker in florists' and market gardens specialties, bulbs, onion sets, etc., but the war conditions were unfavorable, and for some time preceding his death, he was disheartened with the outlook. Mr. Ringier was secretary of the W. W. Barnard Co. during the latter years of his connection with the firm, enjoying the highest esteem of his business associates to the end. He was a native of Switzerland, born May 20, 1861.

Funeral services conducted by the Masons were held July 29, with interment at Memorial cemetery. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful, conspicuous among them being a handsome spray of cattleyas, Lilium auratum and gladioli, also magnolia wreath, from Samuel Murray, Kansas City, Mo., and spray of white roses and sweet peas from J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb. Mr. Murray attended in person, also G. C. Thomson, Minneapolis, Minn.

Mrs. Ringier survives and has the sincere sympathy of many friends in the trade.

Patrick Cudahy.

The sudden passing away of Patrick Cudahy, Milwaukee, Wis., July 25, was a great shock to the local community. Mr. Cudahy, among many other activities, was president of the Cudahy Floral Co., an institution having at present 100,000 square feet of glass devoted entirely to the growing of roses. The range was started in February, 1914, but a little over a year later, the firm was incorporated with the following members: Patrick Cudahy, president; John Cudahy, a son, vice-president, and George W. Scott, treasurer and superintendent.

Mr. Cudahy was born in Callan, Kilkenny county, Ireland, March 17, 1849. When three months old, he was brought to America by his parents, who settled on a farm in the town of Wauwatosa, now a part of the city of Milwaukee. He was a man with a large heart, who did a great deal for charity, but due to his modesty in discussing these matters, they were not made public.

The funeral took place at St. John's cathedral, July 28, at 9 a. m., with interment at the family mausoleum at Calvary cemetery. Besides Mrs. Cudahy, he is survived by two sons, five married daughters, and Edward Cudahy, of Chicago, a brother.

Potter Family Killed in Auto Accident.

George W. Potter, age 34 years, a member of the firm of W. Q. Potter & Co., well known wholesale florists, Cleveland, O., his wife and two children, aged two years and four months respectively, were killed July 27, when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by an interurban car near their home at North Olmsted, O. W. Q. Potter, brother of the deceased, was notified, and at once took charge of the arrangements of the funeral, at which there were many handsome floral tributes from Cleveland and other cities. Mr. Potter was well known throughout the trade in the state, and was highly respected both in business circles and the community in which he lived. He is survived by his parents, who live in Pennsylvania, while Mrs. Potter's mother resides in Painesville, O.

LIGHT DEMAND NOT BEMOANED.

It has been said that the shortened demand for flowers at this season was a good condition and most of the local trade probably endorse this as a wedding order, for instance, cannot be delivered with credit, owing to the shortage of stock required for such an arrangement together with the poor quality in even the best that can be secured. There is a variety of miscellaneous offerings and a selection of colors to blend artistically in table work, which can be handled with fair satisfaction. There are plenty of asters and gladioli available for use in spray work and wreaths for funerals. Shipments of pond lilies have also assisted the local market, supplying the need for a change from the usual box of roses or bouquet of assorted cut blooms for the sick room. If properly handled by the retailer, these bring very good returns; a few arranged in a low bowl are better than many and a sale is often made at the same time for some of the earthenware left over from last season.

NOTES.

Most of the trade are now arising later than usual and planning where to spend their vacations and all the money they made last season. With increased railroad fares and accommodations at all resort hotels doubled over former years, it should be an easy matter. Many left early in the season and are making the entire summer one long vacation.

Harry Wagner and Fred Guerth, of the S. S. Pennock Co's. force, are inseparable friends, even to taking vacations. They are now busily engaged in catching all of the fish in Bear Creek.

Robert L. Graham has torn down five of his houses which are being replaced with new structures to be devoted exclusively to roses.

Several of the local trade attended the outing of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., July 28.

Albert Fiedler, one of our prosperous florists, was married July 22 to an estimable young lady.

Highland Park Garden Show.

The annual flower and vegetable show of the Garden Club of Highland Park, Ill., will be held August 2, and from an inspection made during the past week some very fine exhibits will be made, despite the recent unfavorable weather conditions. It is also hoped that the six foot table decorations, a great attraction two years ago, will again be a prominent feature. An excellent display of baskets is already assured. All exhibits must be in place by 10:30 o'clock on the day of the show.

DELAWARE, O.—The management of the Cunningham Flower Shop is being congratulated on the attractiveness of the establishment, following its decoration with a dress of pure white with dashes of black and gold adding to the artistic. The window, with its lattice effect, and fine display of flowers and plants, is also the subject of much admiration.

ATTEMPTS will be made to make wireless messages to Germany cheaper than cables.

GERMANY recently received from Russia an $18,750,000 order for farm implements.

HILL PLANT FACTORIES—Real rose plant factories must be the verdict of all those who visit the establishments of the E. G. Hill Co. and the Joseph H. Hill Co. at Richmond, Ind. All sizes of growing plants are seen, while various cut flower crops are arranged to meet the extra demand for blooms at seasonable periods during the year, yet the underlying intention is to produce young plants and such result is plainly evident. Every florist should see the Hill plant factories.

American Gladiolus Society.

The schedule of the tenth annual exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society, which will be held in Arcadia auditorium, Detroit, Mich., August 19-21, in connection with the meeting of the Society of American Florists, has been issued and copies may be obtained by addressing Professor A. C. Beal, secretary, 212 Kelvin place, Ithaca, N. Y.

In the section open to all, cash and merchandise prizes are offered in 40 classes, including a silver cup offered by Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, for the best 25 blooms each of Margaret, Chicago Salmon and Mrs. Brewster, or 75 blooms of any one of these varieties. A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind., president of the society, offers gold, silver and bronze medals for three collections of Kunderd varieties. For non-commercial growers, there will be awards in 55 classes.

Those who cannot attend the exhibition are invited to send their flowers with necessary data attached, by express, prepaid, addressed: Exhibition American Gladiolus Society, Arcadia auditorium, Detroit, Mich., and due notice of said shipment sent to the secretary at 212 Kelvin place, Ithaca, N. Y. All such shipments will be properly staged.

Express Service Curtailed.

Warning has been sent out by the railroad administration that it is probable the express service for some time to come will be severely handicapped through the action of the war department in commandeering express cars for the purpose of transporting the equipment of troops returning to this country for demobilization. It will be remembered that a year and a half ago, a shortage of express cars made it necessary for the railroads to use box cars for the transportation of express matter and that, as a result of using cars not suitable for the purpose, the express service in many sections of the country was considerably delayed and very unsatisfactory. This condition was brought about by the demands of the war department for express cars for the transportation of the equipment of troops going overseas.

With the return of these troops, the express cars have again been taken, and already many sections of the country are suffering from the handicap given the express service by the lack of suitable equipment. There is no alleviation of the situation in sight, however, as the railroad administration declares present conditions will prevail as long as the express cars are in use by the war department.

New York to Detroit.

The New York Florists' Club, for its route to the convention of the Society of American Florists at Detroit, Mich, August 19-21, has decided upon the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad to Buffalo, then by boat to the convention city. The party will leave New York, August 17, at 8:30 p. m., Hoboken, 8:55 p. m., due in Buffalo 7:30 the following morning, spending the day in that city, and leaving on the 6:00 p. m, boat, arriving in Detroit Tuesday morning.

The railroad fare New York to Buffalo, is $12.85; berths, $2.16, including war tax. Boat fare, Buffalo to Detroit, is $4.32; stateroom accommodating two persons, $3.78.

Applications have already been received by the committee, which consists of A. L. Miller, Jamaica, N. Y., chairman; John G. Esler and P. W. Popp, to fill two cars, and it is most important that those who are going to travel with the club party notify the committee at once in order that the necessary reservations may be made. This is going to be the banner convention, so reservations should be arranged for at the earliest opportunity. Communicate with the chairman of the committee should any further information be desired.

Boston to Detroit.

Arrangements are being made for the transportation of the party from Boston, Mass., and vicinity, who will attend the convention of the Society of American Florists at Detroit, Mich., August 19-21. The trip will be made via Boston & Albany railroad to Buffalo, where one day will be devoted to sightseeing, thence from that city to Detroit by steamer, arriving at 8:00 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The train carrying the party will leave South station, Boston, Sunday, August 17 at 4:45 p. m.; Framingham, 5:19, Worcester, 5:55; Springfield, 7:20; Pittsfield, 9:11, and Albany at 10:40 p. m., due at Buffalo, 6:50 a. m. Monday, leaving for the convention city by boat at 6 o'clock that evening.

The fare from Boston to Buffalo is $16.11; lower berth, $2.70; boat fare, Buffalo to Detroit, $4.32; stateroom accommodating two or three people, $3.50; total, $26.63. Those wishing to go direct, may leave Boston, Monday, at 2:00 p. m., due in Detroit, 8:10 Tuesday morning. Fare, all rail, is $24.28; lower berth, $4.32.

Reservations should be made at once through E. Allen Peirce, Waltham, Mass., state vice-president for Massachusetts, East.

Chicago to Detroit.

The Wabash railroad has been chosen for the trip of the Chicago Florists' Club and friends to the annual convention of the Society of American Florists at Detroit, Mich., August 19-21. Special Pullman sleepers for the exclusive use of the party will be in Wabash train 12 leaving Dearborn station, Dearborn and Polk streets, Monday, August 18, at 11:25 p. m., due Detroit the following morning at 7:50 o'clock.

The fare one way, tax included, is $8.82. Pullman fares are: Lower berth, $2.16; upper berth, $1.73; seat, $1.08.

Other trains for those unable to accompany the party are as follows:

DAVEY TREE SURGEONS

Estate of Mrs. A. M. Booth, Great Neck, Long Island, New York

W. G. Woodger, Garden Superintendent, Mrs. A. M. Booth Estate

The tribute of W. G. Woodger to Davey Tree Surgery

Broad Lawns, Great Neck, Long Island, New York.

The Davey Tree Expert Co., Inc., Kent, Ohio.

Gentlemen: I felt it my duty to write you a few lines in praise of the work of your representative and men on several fine trees on the estate of Mrs. A. M. Booth, most especially the very fine work done on a grand willow tree, not quite two years ago.

My employer is most gratified with the work and thinks there is no equal to The Davey Tree Expert Company. The men are extremely keen on their work and know it thoroughly. I am very interested in their work and think them worthy of great praise.

Yours truly,
W. G. WOODGER,
Garden Superintendent.

Loss of this magnificent willow would have been irreparable. Note below how Davey methods have bound the branches together with rigid steel rods, and filled the cavities sectionally with concrete to allow for the swaying of the tree

The saving of priceless trees is a matter of first importance on every estate. Davey Tree Surgery is a fulfillment of the maximum expectations of those who love and value trees. A careful examination of your trees will be made by appointment.

EARLY ENCHANTRESS (BURPEE'S)

Burpee's Sweet Peas

The Twenty-Two Best Winter Flowering Spencer Sweet Peas For Florists

The first Spencer Sweet Pea in existence was brought to America by W. Atlee Burpee. Since then the House of Burpee has introduced over two hundred distinct new varieties each an improvement on the past. And by constant hybridizing for the last ten years we have developed the new Fordhook Early Flowering strain of Spencer Sweet Peas. We can now offer you all the finest colors in the Early or Winter Flowering type of Spencers —everything offered is grown on our own Floradale Farm in California. The House of Burpee is recognized as the American Headquarters for Sweet Peas.

3351 EARLY ENCHANTRESS (BURPEE'S). It is a bright rose-pink, becoming deeper toward the edges of standard and wings, gradually softening in tone toward the center of the flower. Pkt. 7c; oz. $1.00; ¼ lb. $3.00; lb. $10.00.

3361 FORDHOOK PINK AND WHITE (BURPEE'S). This is similar to the old Blanche Ferry, having a bright, rosy-pink standard with white wings, lightly suffused rose. Pkt. 7c; oz. 60c; ¼ lb. $1.80; lb. $6.00.

3398 YARRAWA. The flowers average two and one-half inches in diameter, many are duplex or double. The color is a bright rose-pink with a clear, creamy base. Our stock of this popular Australian variety is absolutely true. Grown by us from seed procured direct from the introducer. Pkt. 7c; oz. 75c; ¼ lb. $2.25; lb. $7.50.

3375 EARLY LAVENDER KING (BURPEE'S). A first-class lavender has been much wanted in this type, therefore, we have great pleasure in offering the new Lavender King. This glorious new variety is a rich, true, deep lavender throughout. Similar in color to the summer-flowering varieties, Burpee's Orchid and R. F. Felton. The flowers are of large size, beautifully true waved form, and borne in threes and fours on stems of great length. Pkt. 7c; oz. 85c; ¼ lb. $2.50; lb. $8.50.

3399 EARLY ZEPHYR (BURPEE'S). This is a delightful shade of pale blue or lavender. It might be briefly described as a silvery blue self. An extremely dainty and charming variety. Pkt. 7c; oz. $1.00; ¼ lb. $3.00; lb. $10.00.

3346 EARLY DAINTINESS (BURPEE'S). This has always been a favorite since it was first exhibited in 1915, when it was certificated. We have only now been able to work up a sufficient stock to offer to our friends. A strong grower, with flowers of largest size and usually produced in fours. Color pure white edged rose. Similar to Summer-flowering Dainty. Pkt. 7c; oz. 80c; ¼ lb. $2.40; lb. $8.00.

3348 EARLY DAYBREAK (BURPEE'S). The flowers are much frilled or waved, of largest size. The color is a pleasing shade of rich rose-pink on cream ground, becoming deeper toward the edge of standard and wings. The entire flower is lightly suffused with salmon. Pkt., 7c; oz., $1.00; ¼ lb., $3.00; lb., $10.00.

3383 EARLY PINK BEAUTY (BURPEE'S). The color is soft rose-pink on white ground, richer toward the edges, gradually softening in color as it reaches the center of standard and wings. Pkt. 7c; oz. $1.00; ¼ lb. $3.00; lb. $10.00.

3344 EARLY CHERRY RIPE (BURPEE'S). A particularly bright and taking color and quite new in this section. It might be described as a glowing cherry or salmon-cerise self. Awarded Certificate of Merit at the International Spring Show, New York, March 20, 1918. Pkt. 10c; oz. $2.50; ¼ lb. $7.50; lb. $25.00.

3380 EARLY MAUVE BEAUTY (BURPEE'S). Color a pleasing shade of rosy mauve. The flowers are of immense size, often measuring two and one-half inches in diameter, yet exquisitely waved and of best Spencer form. A strong, vigorous grower and very free flowering. Charming under artificial light. Pkt. 7c; oz. 85c; ¼ lb. $2.50; lb. $8.50.

3381 EARLY ORANGE BEAUTY (BURPEE'S). Similar in color to Helen Lewis, therefore a glowing orange-scarlet with softer colored wings. Extremely free and early blooming, valuable alike for culture under glass or in the open as it withstands the sun and weather well. Pkt. 14c; oz. $3.00; ¼ lb. $9.00; lb. $30.00.

3362 FORDHOOK ROSE IMPROVED (BURPEE'S). Quite distinct from our original Fordhook Rose. The flowers are of immense size, usually borne in threes and fours on very long stiff stems. In color similar to the well-known George Herbert. A pleasing shade of rosy carmine. Pkt. 7c; oz. $1.00; ¼ lb. $3.00; lb. $10.00.

3393 EARLY SPLENDOR (BURPEE'S). A magnificent new deep rose self. The rich rose-crimson color is accentuated by the distinct white blotch at the base of standard and wings. The flowers are of great size, usually borne in fours on very long stems. Similar in color to the Summer-flowering Rosabelle. Pkt. 7c; oz. $1.00; ¼ lb. $3.00; lb. $10.00.

3374 EARLY KING (BURPEE'S). The finest early-flowering crimson. The flowers are of great size, perfect form, averaging fully two inches in diameter. Pkt. 7c; oz. 85c; ¼ lb. $2.50; lb. $8.50.

3388. EARLY ROSY MORN (BURPEE'S). Flowers grown under ordinary field culture have measured fully two inches in diameter. The flowers are usually borne in threes or fours on stiff, long stems. Color, a pleasing shade of rose with crimson-scarlet standard. Pkt. 7c; oz. 80c; ¼ lb. $2.40; lb. $8.00.

3390 EARLY SANKEY (BURPEE'S). This truly magnificent white was awarded a special Silver Medal when exhibited at the great International Show in New York, March 20, 1915, also Certificate of Merit at the Spring Show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March 23, 1915. Black seeded. Pkt. 7c; oz. 80c; ¼ lb. $2.40; lb. $8.00.

3392 IMPROVED EARLY SNOWSTORM (BURPEE'S). The result of a cross between King White and Yarrawa, it embodies the best qualities of those two varieties and easily eclipses all early-flowering white Sweet Peas to date. The flowers are of Yarrawa size, but finer form, as the standard does not reflex but is magnificently bold, though charmingly waved. A vigorous grower, the immense flowers are invariably borne in fours on very long stems. Awarded Certificate of Merit at the International Show, New York, March 20, 1918. Our improved Snowstorm is so immeasurably superior to our original Snowstorm that we have now discarded the latter. Improved Snowstorm is the last word in Early-Flowering White Sweet Peas. Pkt., 10c; oz., $1.50; ¼ lb., $4.50; lb., $15.00.

3352 EARLY EXQUISITE (BURPEE'S). The ground color is a soft shade of primrose, the edge of the standard and wings being beautifully "picoteed" with deep rose-pink. Pkt. 7c; oz. 85c; ¼ lb. $2.50; lb. $8.50.

3376 EARLY LOVELINESS (BURPEE'S). The color is white, the entire flower being suffused soft pink and the edges distinctly picoteed with rose-pink. Pkt. 7c; oz. 85c; ¼ lb. $2.50; lb. $8.50.

3357 EARLY FANTASY (BURPEE'S). Striped and marbled with rich rose-pink on a creamy white ground. Exceedingly bright and makes a telling bunch when cut. Extremely free and a continuous bloomer, the flowers usually borne in threes and fours on long stems. Pkt., 7c; oz. 80c; ¼ lb. $2.40; lb. $8.00.

3342 EARLY CANARY BIRD (BURPEE'S). This is a splendid, rich, deep cream or primrose colored self. The flowers are of great size, beautifully waved, and usually borne three or four on a stem. Pkt., 7c; oz., $1.00; ¼ lb., $3.00; lb., $10.00.

3338 EARLY BLUE-BIRD (BURPEE'S). This is a charming shade of blue. Somewhat deeper than Wedgewood, but more of a true self, especially as the flower ages. In our opinion, the best blue for indoor culture. Pkt., 7c; oz., $1.00; ¼ lb., $3.00; lb., $10.00.

The prices quoted are net for packets as well as larger quantities, f. o. b. Philadelphia, for delivery July to December. The above varieties—each the best in its class—provide a complete range of colors. We have many other desirable varieties of Early Flowering Spencers on which we shall be pleased to quote prices upon request.

STOCK IS IN SHORT SUPPLY.

Stock of all kinds is in short supply and is commanding high summer prices with a complete cleanup each day. Gladioli are selling at figures ranging from $4 to $8 per 100 and even higher in some of the fancier grades. The cut of gladioli in general is showing the effects of the hot weather but is moving quickly every day owing to the scarcity of all other stock. Asters are in short supply and command high prices with very little first-class stock available. American Beauty roses are good property and are in strong demand at prices ranging from $1.50 to $5 per dozen. Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia are being disposed of every day at good figures, some ranging as high as $20 per 100 and more. Roses in general are clearing up at high summer prices with one or two of the fancier varieties commanding very attractive summer figures. Gypsophila is quite a factor in the market, but finds ready buyers. Carnations are seen in limited numbers but do not cut much of a figure in the market. A few lilies are seen. Lily of the valley and orchids are scarce. Snapdragons, daisies, calendulas, pond lilies and other miscellaneous seasonable stock are included in the regular offerings and are coming in handy this week. Business has been good the past week with a strong demand for funeral flowers. The S. A. F. convention to be held in Detroit next month is causing much comment in the wholesale district and the closer it draws near the larger the attendance promises to be.

NOTES.

Mrs. Augusta Haeger, mother of Frances L. Haeger, Mrs. Otto Stolz, Fred W. Haeger and Gertrude Haeger, died July 26. The funeral was held the following Monday at 2 p. m. from the chapel at 2216 Southport avenue with interment at Concordia cemetery. Lieutenant Fred Haeger now stationed at Camp Grant, Rockford, was formerly with the A. L. Randall Co. and his sister, Gertrude, formerly in the employ of THE AMERICAN FLORIST. The sympathy of the trade is extended to the family in the loss of a loving mother.

Miss Nettie Parker, secretary of A. T. Pyfer & Co., will leave in a few days to take in the sights at Yellowstone park. She expects to return in time to attend the Detroit convention. A. T. Pyfer will return this week from his vacation, which was spent with his family at Polo.

Samuel Murray came on from Kansas City for the funeral of Arnold Ringier One of Mr. Murray's younger brothers prominent in the building trades, died in New York last week.

Charles E. Barker, formerly on the FLORIST office staff, and many months abroad with the American troops, has returned to Camp Merritt, New Jersey.

Miss Charlotte Paradise, bookkeeper at A. L. Vaughan & Co.s store, will leave this week to enjoy a well-earned vacation at Elkhart Lake, Wis.

Mrs. Chas. A. Duerr, Newark, O., passed through the city last week on her way to Wisconsin, where she is spending her vacation.

Miss Thelma Hardaway, with Johnson's Greenhouses, Memphis, Tenn., stopped off here this week on her way to Detroit, Mich.

Louis Finnermann, of Grossberg-Tyler-Finnermann, will leave this week on a business trip to the Pacific coast.

The A. L. Randall Co. received word from Ottawa Beach, Mich., Tuesday evening, July 29, that Frank McCabe drowned there that day while in swimming. The Randall Co. immediately sent Mr. Galavan over with Mr. McCabe's brother to bring the body back home. Mr. McCabe was 29 years old and had been in the employ of the A. L. Randall Co. for over 13 years. He was one of the cleanest cut, most obliging and popular young men in the trade which had much to do in securing him the position of city salesmanager for his firm. He is survived by his mother, four sisters and a brother. No arrangements had been made for the funeral up to the time of going to press, Wednesday, July 30.

C. F. Claussen, wife and family, are Oldsmobiling eastward. They were reported Sunday at Kunderd's, Goshen, Ind. They will make Washington, D. C., and other cities.

Chas. Erne, Frank Hagen and Henry Kruchten attended the Klingel funeral at Des Plaines, July 24. The floral offerings from the trade were many and beautiful.

Wilbur Gullett, of Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, stopped off here for a few days this week on his way home from an eastern business and pleasure trip.

Bahr Resigns Commissionership.

Fritz Bahr, well-known grower of Highland Park, Ill., has tendered his resignation as commissioner of streets and public improvements of that city, the action made necessary by eye trouble which makes it difficult to give the office the attention necessary. Commissioner Bahr has rendered excellent service, and it was with sincere regret that that community hears of his inability to serve longer.

JOLIET, ILL.—The Labo establishment here was badly damaged by fire last Sunday, July 27. The office, garage, potting shed and some of the greenhouses were almost totally destroyed.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Baynes & McDonald have opened a flower stand in the Lexington Market, in the location formerly occupied by James Glass, who is now devoting his entire time to his range.

FAIR SUMMER BUSINESS.

While there is a perceptible improvement in business, the dull summer conditions remain with us, and no one can claim more than fair trade. The supply of flowers seems to be in keeping with the slow demand, and it is thought that if more and better stock were available, it would stimulate the demand to some extent. Gladioli are slow coming in, and asters are in meager supply and of poor quality. A few carnations, notably white, can be had, but roses are in short supply and ordinary summer quality prevails. Gypsophia is plentiful and of good quality and may be said to be used quite generally to conceal the defects in work that poor quality of other flowers make unavoidable. Many retailers are on their vacations, but the growers are obliged to remain "on the job," because of the general shortage of help, which is, if possible, becoming more acute as the factories keep increasing their already attractive wages.

CONVENTION PLANS PROGRESSING WELL.

Local preparations for the Society of American Florists convention are progressing in splendid shape. Advance hotel reservations already made, indicate a record breaking attendance. E. A. Fetters, who has in hand the work of securing these accommodations, again gives notice to all, not to delay requests for their hotel requirements, addressing him at 17 East Adams avenue, this city. A big meeting of the club, with the ladies' auxiliary, is called for August 1, at the Hotel Statler.

LOCAL PUBLICITY HONOR ROLL.

In the interests of the publicity campaign of the Society of American Florists, M. A. Vinson has placed a large banner on the wall at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, showing a complete list of Michigan contributors to the fund. He is touring the state soliciting subscriptions, and the new names and amounts contributed are added to the list as secured, and is an inspiration and strong argument in support of the cause, "Say It With Flowers."

NOTES.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange has acquired the property on the south side of their wholesale house on Randolph street and will soon erect thereon a building for the extension of their business. The new addition will be 30x100 feet and four stories high. One department will be arranged with the maximum of light to provide for the better handling of their plant trade which is becoming a big factor.

Robert Klegge, the well known grower of Mt. Clemens, Mich., who recently sold his establishment to the Doemling, Schimmel Co., has retired to his future home on the shore of Lake St. Clair, 15 miles from Detroit. Here he has two and a half acres of ground with 150 feet of lake frontage, and is building a fine residence, where he and his family will take a well earned rest.

Vice-President E. A. Fetters is home again after his trip to St. Cloud, Minn., where he spent his vacation. He made the entire trip in his Winton car with no serious mishaps. The round trip covered 2,000 miles.

Secretary John Young has taken desk room at the Bemb Floral Co., 153 Bates street, until convention time. Here he will be in close touch with affairs in connection with the trade exhibit.

Adam Bezemer, who joined the colors some time ago, has returned after seeing service, and will re-enter the employ of E. A. Fetters.

MARKET CONDITIONS GENERALLY GOOD.

Trade is reported very good for this season of the year. There is an unusually strong demand for decorations, especially weddings. Funeral work, also, keeps us steadily, thereby cleaning up the market in good shape every day. There is not a heavy supply of roses, but the selection of varieties offered is limited to Ophelia, Hadley and Ulrich Brunner. Very few Russell are to be had, and no American Beauties. Aaron Ward can be seen on some days. Cecile Brunner is off crop just now, and stock that arrives sells readily. The first chrysanthemums of the season came in during the week from the Japanese growers along the peninsula. Golden Glow is the yellow, and Early Frost are those arriving. The latter is very good: in fact, about as good as it is possible to grow it. Golden Glow is somewhat weak necked, and is not in much favor. Some of the growers are promising Monrovia by the first of the month. Very fair prices are being received as the public is always looking for something new. Asters, also, were brought into the market for the first time this week. Pink and white are the only colors offered. They sold quickly at splendid figures. The Chinese are the only growers of this flower, and we understand they will have a large acreage to offer this season. The gladioli season is now at its height, and large shipments are arriving at the market every morning. At the present time, the Santa Cruz growers are sending in the best stock. Some beautiful pink, red and white varieties of high grade quality can always be had. The carnation is about the only flower that is a glut on the market. It drags, with no reasonable offer refused. Sweet peas have come into their own again and a splendid supply of Spencers is available. The quality is of the best and very handsome returns are being made to the growers. Large quantities of hydrangeas are used here for basket work and decorations of all kinds. There is also an ample supply of blue hydrangeas at all times. Some good delphiniums and scabiosa are to be had. There are practically no cattleyas or any other orchids in the market. The call for them keeps up, however. The supply of gardenias is very short. There is a never ending inquiry for lily of the valley from the buying public, but it has been a long time since there has been anything like a supply in the market. Occassionally one comes across a small lot of violets in some of the stores. The flowers are very small, but decidedly fragrant. Buddleia magnifica is very popular for basket work. There is the usual large supply of outdoor stock of all kinds which gives quite a dash of color to the store windows. The demand for nephrolepis is very good and stock cleans up in fine shape. Small ferns in variety are also much sought after. Altogether, we may say the market is in a healthy conditon.

NOTES.

J. A. Axell, who resigned from the E. W. McLellan Company to engage in the wholesale shipping trade on his own account, has leased large quarters adjoining those of the Western Evergreen Co. He is having them fitted up with every modern convenience, suitable for the wholesale handling and shipping of cut flowers. He hopes to have them ready for occupancy at the opening of the shipping season. At present, he is visiting the different growers throughout this section, arranging for the handling of their cut this season. Mr. Axell is, without question, the best informed man on this coast in the wholesale business, and he has the best wishes of the trade in his new venture.

The Shibley Floral Co., of which Frank Shibley was owner, has sold out to the Nelligan Sisters, of Santa Rosa, who will conduct the business at the present location. The three young ladies who comprise the firm are planning great improvements in their store, and hope to make it one of the most attractive in the neighborhood. Frank Shibley has been in the business here since early days, and is going to retire for good. He expects to make a pleasure trip through the eastern states soon, accompanied by his wife.

On the first of the coming month, Ricardie Lee Murray will dispose of her flower stores on Geary street and in the Clift hotel. She has been in business here for quite a few years, and her many friends will regret to hear that ill health compels her to retire. At present, she has no immediate plans for the future, other than trying to restore her failing health. Her successors will continue the business under the old trade name of Ricardie Lee Murray.

The Art Floral Company is again making improvements in the appearance of its Powell street store. Large plate glass mirrors are being installed everywhere throughout. The most expensive quality obtainable is being used, and when completed, Manager P. Vincent Matraia will have one of the handsomest stores on the coast. This firm expects to make an announcement in the near future that will prove of great interest to the trade in this vicinity.

Charles Matraia, after being associated with the well known firm of Podesta & Baldocchi, for 20 years, has retired from that company. He entered the employ of this firm when a boy and has worked himself up to being a large stockholder in the firm by his industry and integrity. He is taking a rest now in the Yosemite valley, and upon his return, it is said he is to enter one of the largest stores in this city as a member of the firm.

Joseph Logarinossino, who is probably our largest violet grower, has over eight acres of the giant violet growing at his place for the coming season. This is the best shipper among the different varieties. It is said that the entire crop is already contracted for, and will be used by the shipping trade. He

The Thorsted Floral Co., of Oakland, has decided to go into the wholesale florists' supply business. They are putting in a large stock of everything suitable for the retail trade, and have a representative now calling upon the stores in this city. Mr. Thorsted is greatly pleased over the success of his new venture.

Henry Avensino, who has become the new manager of the wholesale department of the E. W. McLellan Company, on Bush street, has disposed of his stock in the firm of Avensino Bros. to J. Lavenzallo. The latter has been prominent in the trade here for many years, and will be a welcome addition to the firm.

Patrick Orr, manager of the A. O. Stein store, on Sutter street, has resumed his post after an enjoyable vacation among the mountains of northern California. His firm was very busy all week on weddings, and has several large decorations booked for next week.

The Jessie Seal Dahlia Gardens are now shipping a large lot of the newest commercial dahlias to this market. Only the best varieties are grown at this place. Some excellent Spencer sweet peas are also being sent in, all of which are finding a ready market.

The E. W. McLellan Company is handling the bulk of the cut of the Santa Cruz gladioli growers. Manager Avensino reports an active market for this stock. They are also shipping a lot of stock to distant points.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co. of Philadelphia, Pa., is calling on the trade in the interest of his firm. He says business has been excellent all along the coast.

Luke J. Uzick, manager of the J. B. Boland store, on Lick place, has severed his connection with this firm, and will take a month's vacation before resuming up work again.

FAIR BUSINESS BUT SUPPLY LIGHT.

Business is fair, confined principally to funeral work and bouquets for the hospitals. Stock is scarce and of poor quality, due to the long, dry spell, there having been no rain in this section in several weeks. Pot plants are now almost a thing of the past, very few being offered. Gladioli are very plentiful, but the quality is none to good, and the wholesale price runs from eight to 12 cents. Summer roses in Ophelia, Columbia and Russsell are good for the first crop.

SUPPLY OF SALABLE STOCK LIMITED.

The extreme heat of the past several weeks is having a telling effect upon the cut flowers on this market, both the greenhouse-grown, and outdoors varieties and the gladioli crop, many of which are almost unsalable. Roses are showing some improvement in size since last week, but the weather has been hard on them. Russell is leading in the summer varieties, both as a good keeper, and as a colorful rose. Carnations are still being offered, although prices are low, and the stock is not worthy of being handled by a boni fide florist. Rubrum lilies are very scarce this season. The arrival of asters on the market is being eagerly anticipated by the retailers, as they will fill a long-felt want in the market. Outdoor snapdragons are of fairly good quality, and there is a large quantity of other outdoor flowers on the market, with Shasta daisies in the lead. Greens of all kinds are plentiful, and equal to the demand.

NOTES.

Miss Marguerite Flick has returned home after a month's vacation at Toledo Beach, where she was the guest of her aunt, Miss Helen F. Patten, of the Patten Flower Shop. She was accompanied by her two brothers, George and Joe Flick. The Flick Floral Co. sent out several handsome casket blankets of Russell roses last week.

A splendid display of foliage plants was noted in Ed. Wenninghoff's window last week. This firm was obliged to work all day last Sunday, in order to execute the funeral work.

The new Irene Byron tuberculosis hospital will be dedicated the coming week. It is expected that a large number of flowers will be used for the dedication.

GOOD DEMAND AT FAIR PRICES.

The deluge of rain is over, and there have been several successive days of sunshine. The precipitation for July broke all records of the local weather bureau, and in addition destroyed hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of wheat. Fifteen acres of very fine quality on the farm of James Griffin, the orchid grower of Torresdale, was totally ruined, causing a loss of $1,800. Alfred Green, at Glenside, lost a large field of corn, cantaloupes and asters, the latter just coming into flower. A cloudburst of excessive rain, washed away the entire top soil, carrying off the crops, and burying them in the mud at the bottom of the field. There has been a good summer market the past week, all cut flowers of quality selling up close at very fair prices. Ophelia, Premier, Columbia, Victoria and Hadley are the leading roses. Double and Single White Killarneys are also in evidence. Just a few of the new crop of American Beauties are showing, but have no quality as yet. There are still a few carnations, which are doomed to go in a week or so, as now that the ground is drying out, a number of the growers are ready to throw out and replant. Gladioli are now the greatest factor in the market. Some very fine varieties are offered, but the really good stock is limited, at least 50 per cent of the shipments being just ordinary, which clean up or go over, depending on the scarcity of other flowers. Asters are in, some of quality, but the great majority are half-opened, runty looking flowers with many undeveloped buds, which looked as if they had been cut too soon. Shasta daisies are showy and in demand. The first of the Hydrangea paniculata was offered last week. Lilium speciosum Henryii, the orange Japanese lily, is a novelty. Cattleyas are scarce, and according to certain growers, will never be plentiful again.

COMMISSION LICENSE MEASURE ENFORCED.

When it is not one thing its another. The commission cut flower dealers are mad as March hares. It appears that some 18 months ago, when Uncle Sam's finance committee was looking around for more revenue, they sighted the men who sell vegetables, fruit and cut flowers on commission. Aha! We will charge these fellows $75 per year license fee, and $6.25 penalty if it is not paid by July 1 each year. They put this through congress with some other revenue matters, and there the measure rested, as far as the cut flower commission men of this city were concerned, until one day last week, when a very suave revenue officer with bills, all of them delinquent, and subject to the $6.25 penalty, put in his appearance, and all had to produce the license fee, which they did, and the delinquent penalty, the latter under protest. One dealer said: "The worst of it is, we cannot pass it along; it is just another expense, something that each individual dealer will have to grin and bear."

NOTES.

One of the large commission dealers, in speaking of the great quanity of inferior stock in the market, that constantly keeps down the average in returns, in commenting on the gladioli that are now so plentiful, said there is a good demand for all the choice varieties at better prices than ever before. Many growers, however, keep on planting the old, back numbers, that cost just as much to cultivate, are as much trouble to pack and ship, with higher express rates and much more expensive boxes, but do not bring one half the price of the improved sorts. They had much better grow one-fourth as many, but all of the choice up-to-date varieties, when they would have less work and get just as good returns.

Alfred M. Campbell, in one of his philosophic musings, said recently: "It takes a lot of men working together to boost prices, but mighty few to bring them down." Right you are, Alfred, but let us see to it that the few do not get their work in the coming season.

Dennis Koehane, of the H. F. Michell Co.'s force, is optomistic plus over the florist business of the coming season. He finds the trade anxious to buy all the staples. In the item of field carnations, they have had to turn down orders for over 300,000 plants.

Carl Corts, of the Jos. Heacock Co., says work on the new houses at Roelofs is now under way. The roses in the old houses are coming away fine, especially Premier.

James Griffin declares the day of the $1 cattleya is past; next winter they will be sure to bring at least double the price, as the supply will be much curtailed.

Robert Craig, Harry Faust, and his daughter, Dorothy, who are motoring to Maine, spent July 23-24 in Boston, Mass. They report a delightful time.

Gladioli are the feature with the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange. Cut roses and early dahlias are also prominent.

Very choice gladioli are the feature of the Berger Bros. stock. Carnations, sweet peas and roses are also leaders.

The S. S. Pennock Co. had such a wonderful season's business that the floor of the store has had to be renewed.

LIGHT SUPPLY ESPECIALLY ROSES.

As befitting the time and season, business was quiet during the past week. On account of weather conditions, the supply of roses has been lighter, and everything approaching good quality in tea roses brought fair prices, for the season. Aside from the fact that the city is practically deserted by society people, the call for fine stock is light. Funeral work, and an occasional box or bunch of flowers make up the largest part of the trade. A few steamer orders have been reported, and from this time on, there is likely to be an increase in that branch of trade. The asters are now leading factors in the wholesale district, and much good stock is arriving with an inevitable decline in prices from what was paid for the first scattering lots. There is also a heavy stock of gladioli, which for inferior stock, sells cheap, though the choice varieties bring better prices. The supply of orchids, lilies and lily of the valley is light.

July 28.—The market is not a particularly cheerful subject on which to write. Many of the roses arriving are so open as to be practically worthless. Necessarily there is some activity on Monday morning, but most of the buyers are satisfied with cheap stock—the cheaper the better it suits them. There is an exception in orchids, as so few are about that most any kind of a cattleyea brings all that it is worth. The weather is hot, with a high percentage of humidity and any kind of a cooling drink costs three times what it did "befo de wah," so conditions are not particularly satisfactory.

NOTES.

On July 24, Stephen Masur, the Brooklyn retailer, and several friends, journeyed by automobile to the Rowayton Greenhouses, Rowayton, Conn., of which the well known firm of Traendly & Schenck are the proprietors. As Partner Traendly is summering there, he was right on hand to dispense hospitality of the well known Traendly heartiness and liberality. The stock in the greenhouses was inspected, and the visitors report an exceptionally fine crop of the leading varieties of roses coming on.

Louis E. Canstant, formerly a florist of this city, has returned safe and sound from the great war. He went through the memorable Verdun campaign and other desperate engagements in the French army, and was later transferred to the American forces. He is a Frenchman by birth, but likes the United States.

Maurice Kleinmann, manager for Myer, Madison avenue and 58th street, is receiving congratulations on the arrival, July 26, of an eight pound son at his home. Mrs. Kleinmann is also well known in the trade, as before her marriage she was bookkeeper for Fulterman Bros., wholesalers.

The florists of this and neighboring cities, are warned against a crook who represents himself as manager for some leading house, leaves an order for funeral work and collects a commission. That scheme is so old that we hope but few of them will be taken in.

Miss Ethel Frankel, bookkeeper for Mrs. Leikens, recently gave a party at which her engagement to Jack Shink, a commercial traveler, was announced. The date of the wedding will be made public later.

A force of men have been busy for the past week repainting and decorating the interior of the Dards store, Madison avenue and 44th street.

Extensive improvements are being carried out in the flower department of the Bloomingdale Bros.' store, Lexington avenue and 59th street.

Sam Gilbert, the "Traveling Wholesale Florist, Inc.," of 133 West 28th street, is receiving exceptionally fine asters.

Myer, the retailer of Madison avenue and 58th street, is on a western tour and will take in the Detroit convention.

Mrs. J. A. Snyder and daughter, Miss Loretta, of 423 Ninth avenue, are spending the month at Elberon, N. J.

J. K. Allen's family is summering at Ocean Grove, and he makes frequent trips there to visit them.

Leo Klein and wife, of Lexington avenue and 60th street, will join the party going to Detroit.

Late reports indicate that a large party will go from here to Detroit.

John Curry has taken a house at Caldwell, N. J., for the summer.

E. J. Hession and family are at Atlantic City. A. F. F.

Baltimore Notes.

BUSINESS MAINTAINS GOOD SUMMER TONE.

Business in this city in both retail and wholesale lines, is reported very satisfactory for the summer season. There is a better assortment of stock than ever before seen during the third week in July. The rose offerings include Russell, Prima Donna, Radiance, Double White Killarney, Sweetheart and a few others. Gladioli, of which there is a good assortment, are next in importance. Astermums are seen in quantity, mostly pink and lavvender. A number of the growers complain that asters are badly affected by stem rot. There is an assortment of dahlias which find ready buyers.

WITH THE GROWERS.

This market is now well supplied with roses by local growers, who find a very good demand. Stevenson Brothers, at Towson, about eight miles out in the suburbs, have an up-to-date and beautifully located range of glass, devoted entirely to roses with the exception of two tables, or about one-half of one house. All stock is grown in ground beds with cement borders. Heating is with steam, condensation going back to boilers by gravity. There is also an auxiliary hot water boiler with a pipe or two in several of the houses, which prevents a too sudden change in the temperature when the steam boiler fires are banked in the morning. They believe this to be of considerable importance in keeping their plants always in condition. They find that air slaked lime dusted underneath the plants just below the foliage, together with additional watering, is good at the first sign of mildew.

One large house was planted with Ward, Double White Killarney and Shawyer. It is aimed to keep this at 62-65 degrees at night, as all of these varieties appear to like this higher temperature. Mrs. Shawyer, which with many is so subject to mildew, is, under this treatment, entirely free and one of their best producers. Sunburst has done well; the first two years it is grown on tables, then transferred to the ground, when the plants take hold at once with scarcely any check. Keeping beds well saturated with water is the practice here. They have followed the Budling method of superwatering, which Mr. Budlong had learned from nature, as he had noticed wild or native roses always did best in low, swampy situations. Higher temperature, without more water, is almost certain to produce mildew. They believe, however, there is still room for improvement in greenhouse construction. While none of the present houses were so built, they have had experience with one with a nearly straight span to the south which caught the winter sun almost at right angles, this proving most beneficial to the stock. Ventilators should be larger in wide houses, but appeared to be one standard size, not graduated to meet the larger areas covered. Sweetheart has been one of their best roses. It is planted in ground beds in a corridor house and kept growing all the year round. The first bud of the cluster, when well advanced, is pinched, which generally brings the others all in at one time. Columbia has been a success here, and the stock has been increased to 3000 plants. Five hundred Premier were coming along, growing freely, and looked very promising. The Stevenson Bros. have the distinction of being the first to grade and tie roses in bundles of 25 and wrap with paper which projects beyond the buds to protect them, but open so they can be seen. The idea occurred to them when shipping to the Growers' Exchance, in Baltimore, 14 years ago, where their carefully grown flowers were, at times, tossed about in the handling, and many of the buds broken. Returns were immediately better, and this method is now the practice in nearly all the large markets of the country. An old time kiln on the place has been made into an excellent storage cellar, never going below 45 degrees in winter or above 60 degrees in summer.

W. G. Lehr, Brooklyn, Md., has the largest range of glass devoted to rose growing, forcing something over 22,000 plants. His best producer is Double White Killarney, which is kept growing with the exception of two weeks in early August, when they are not watered. They are not cut back, except that some of the summer buds have a trifle more of the old wood with them. Prima Donna has been a winner, bringing $2 per plant the first year or two. There are quite a few Russell, which make a better flower, but do not seem to do so well in this section. Ophelia, Killarney, Maryland, Columbia and Premier, of which new varieties he has several promising beds are the principal sorts. The question of space between plants had been a matter he had looked into. He had seen them elsewhere doing wonderfully well 12 inches apart each way, but had brought his down from 14-16 inches to 13 inches each way, which had been found more profitable, but this he felt was as close as he could put them. As near 60 as possible, is his best night temperature. He graded and tied his roses in bundles of 25 as soon as cut, but does not wrap in paper until the next morning, when being packed for market, for if the bottoms of the papers were wet buyers thought they were a day old. The best bituminous coal costs $5.40 on siding, and with 90 cents per ton for hauling. K.

Boston.

SUMMER BUSINESS IS QUITE GOOD.

Business holds up quite well, despite the hot weather and the fact that flowers are showing the effect of summer conditions. Roses took a jump from two cents to four cents during the last few days and the demand is greater than the supply. Sweet peas are scarce and bring 75 cents per 100, Rubrum lilies move fast and go as high as $2 a dozen. Gladioli are very plentiful and sell slowly.

NOTES.

Max Truckman, buyer for H. M. Robinson & Co., will leave soon, accompanied by his family, for a vacation at Oak Bluff, Mass.

George Hamer, assistant manager at the flower market, is taking a two-weeks' vacation in the White Mountains.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

THE price of bags at Chicago, July 30, was $62.00.

MANY onion seed fields in the Sacramento delta, are reported damaged 80 per cent.

THE death of Arnold Ringier, Chicago, is recorded in our obituary column this week.

COMMISSION box seedsmen will abandon the 10-cent packet in 1920, returning to the 5-cent packet.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. — Edwin B. Northrup, of Northrup, King & Co., and wife, are making a lake trip from Duluth to Buffalo.

J. C. VAUGHAN, Chicago, has returned from Indiana, where he visited Richmond and other points with S. W. Pike, St. Charles, Ill.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.—T. C. Young and Mrs. M. C. Waid, formerly with the Harris Seed Co., have purchased the business of the Nearpass Seed Co., 522 Sixth street.

VISITED CHICAGO: George H. Dicks and F. B. Dawson, representing Cooper, Taber & Co., London, Eng.; George C. Thomson, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

NORTH CAROLINA growers of tuberoses and caladiums report the severest drought for many years, but recently broken by a flood. The latter will benefit cannas.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade, July 30, were as follows: Timothy $10.50 to $11.50 per 100 pounds; September $13.60; October $12.75.

NAPLES, ITALY.—Allesandro Squadrilli has issued a disclaimer stating that all rumors that he is planning to dispose of his (M. Herb) establishment are without foundation.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The National Seed Co., is planning to enlarge its present quarters by purchasing the adjoining building at First and Main streets. The Louisville Seed Co. will also make improvements costing $2,000.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—James Vick's Sons report a record-breaking season's business, both in seeds and plants. The acreage of asters is smaller than in former years due to storms, but about 70 acres are in splendid condition.

FLORENCE, ALA.—The North Alabama Seed Co., recently organized with a capital stock of $20,000, has elected the following officers: W. J. Blankenship, president; W. L. Holland, treasurer; D. P. Durban, secretary and manager.

TOLEDO, O.—December clover opened 10 cents higher and October advanced 25 cents, July 29, with cash holding firm at $29.50, a gain of 75 cents during the week. Timothy suffered no change, cash being offered at $5.40, September $5.80, October $5.70, December $5.80 and March $6.00.

French Bulbs.

French advices indicate that government inspection of narcissus and other similar bulbs is much more strict than usual, each case being examined. No hyacinths were passed for the first steamer, but it is thought they will come later. Many bulbs are aboard the S. S. Patria.

It is reported some dealers are packing Paper Whites as small as eleven centimeters. Florists will do well to get their grading measures ready for use.

Package Mail Return Plan Proposed.

Under the terms of a bill which has been introduced in Congress by Representative Steenerson, of the committee on the postoffice, mail matter of the second, third and fourth classes will be accorded the same privileges of forwarding and return as is mail matter of the first class, with the exception that the forwarding or return of such matter will require the payment of additional postage.

Bodger's Tractor Cultivator.
This is One of the Cultivators Employed by the John Bodger & Sons Co. on Their California Seed Farms. Capacity 20 Acres Per Day, Taking Four Rows at Once.

The bill provides that the sender may place on his packages a request for the return thereof if undeliverable for any reason, accompanied by his pledge that the postage cost thereof will be paid upon delivery. This system would eliminate the present necessity for the sending of a report by the postmaster to the addressor of a parcel remaining undelivered, asking for instructions as to its disposition, which requires several days for an answer, and in many businesses renders the contents of the package unfit for further use.

This privilege would be of inestimable value to florists, who claim they have been unable to avail themselves of the parcel post service because of the delay attendant upon undelivered packages. Shipments made by express, it is declared, can be forwarded or returned without delay, but this privilege has never been accorded matter sent by parcel post and, it is claimed, has operated to prevent the maximum growth of that service.

Philadelphia Seed Trade.

The H. F. Michell Co., reports an unusually heavy demand for seeds of cyclamens, pansies and winter flowering sweet peas, also perennials. All flower seeds are reported scarce and higher in price. Nothing from Germany has been offered as yet, but such stock is likely to appear in the American market before long. The Harrisii lilies are in from Bermuda, but the shipment is so small as to be almost negligible.

The Henry A. Dreer Co., Inc., expects to have their order for French bulbs filled in full. Manager Clark, of this department, states people who want bulbs this year will have to pay well for them, as prices are much higher, at least twice as much as before the war. Flower seeds were in great demand, and are bound to advance, although it was a little early to talk about next winter's prices. There were the usual rumors pro and con from the seed centers of California, but he expects these to even up, and that production will be normal. K.

Lily of the Valley Import Regulation.

The federal horticultural board in a communication dated July 14, 1919, calls attention to Regulation 3 of the rules and regulations supplemental to Plant Quarantine No. 37, which provides that nursery stock and other plants and seeds specifically mentioned therein, including lily of the valley, may be imported under permit when free from sand, soil or earth.

Since lily of the valley clumps practically always carry more or less sand, soil or earth, importers are warned by the board that such clumps imported under the provisions of this regulation will be thoroughly inspected upon arrival in this country, and if sand, soil or earth is found adhering to the roots, the shipment may be refused entry. It is suggested that lily of the valley be imported in the form of pips rather than clumps, and that they be throughly cleaned by washing, so as to insure their freedom from sand, soil or earth.

Seed Potato Selection at Harvest.

The custom of using as seed, potatoes left from the previous season's crop, after having disposed of the best, must be discontinued if the present quality and yield of the crop is to be materially improved, say specialists of the United States department of agriculture. The grower can not expect to get maximum yields from inferior seed stock any more than the dairyman can expect to get maximum milk yields from scrub cows. The best time to select seed potatoes, according to the specialists, is in the fall when the crop is being harvested. Then the yield of the individual plant and the quality of the tubers can be considered.

Good seed is pure in respect to the variety; is produced by healthy, vigorous, heavy-yielding plants grown under favorable climatic conditions; is somewhat immature; reasonably uniform in size and shape; firm and sound. The first sprouts should begin to develop at planting time.

Imports at New York.

Imports were received during the week ending July 26 as follows:

From Hamilton, Bermuda, via S. S. Charybdis—

Henry & Lee, 213 cases and 14 crates bulbs.

From Rotterdam, Holland, via S. S. Rotterdam—

F. B. Vandergrift & Co., five bags vegetable seed.

G. Fait & Sons, 16 bags vegetable seed.

Hirsch Bros., 42 bags vegetable seed.

NEW EARLY-FLOWERING or WINTER-BLOOMING

GIANT PANSIES

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe Winters and to bloom right on into the Summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, eye.
15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with eye.
16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
17. CHARM OF MARCH Dark velvety blue.
18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations. 500 seeds, 25c; 1000 seeds, 40c; ⅛ oz., $1.10; ¼ oz., $2.00; oz., $7.50.

10. KENILWORTH GIANT EXHIBITION is the very finest complete mixture ever sent out. Seed carefully saved only from marked plants of all varieties, with the largest and best shaped flowers and richest coloring. It is impossible to convey an adequate idea of the delightful variations in color and markings of this unrivalled mixture. 500 seeds, 30c; 1000 seeds, 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.35; ¼ oz., $2.50; oz., $10.00.

12. KENILWORTH GIANT PRIZE is undoubtedly the largest flower and longest stemmed Pansy in the world The enormous flowers are of perfect form and of great substance. Petals overlapped and undulating. The rich colorings and markings are widely varied, some flowers being almost self-colored. 500 seeds, 30c; 1000 seeds, 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.35; ¼ oz., $2.50; oz., $10.

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress Street, Boston, Mass., Counsel; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa Treasurer.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

TITUSVILLE, N. J.—C. Ely Blackwell, a veteran nurseryman of this city, died July 9, age 78 years.

Quarantine on Gypsy and Browntail Moth.

The secretary of agriculture has announced a quarantine, effective on and after July 1, and placed restrictions on the movement of coniferous trees, forest-plant products, field-grown florists' stocks, including trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings and other plants and plant products for planting or propagating, excepting fruit pits, seeds of ornamental trees and shrubs, field, vegetable and flower seeds, and other herbaceous plants and roots, in sections of Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, it having been determined that the gypsy moth and the brown-tail moth exist in the towns and territory in such states shown in Notice of Quarantine No. 33.

Box-Barberry Supply Short.

The question whether the liberal investment of money for publicity in introducing a horticultural novelty pays, arises perennially in the commercial field, according to the Elm City Nursery Co., New Haven, Conn., in a recent communication telling of experiences in introducing box-barberry to the public during the past three or four years, which may prove of interest. The company was firm in its conviction that a large portion of the country had experienced for years the need of a plant especially adapted to dwarf hedge and edging purposes, and with the general knowledge of its existence known, the demand would be, without doubt, heavy.

The nursery trade was first appealed to, a limited amount of stock being offered for propagating purposes, and attention called to the fact that as soon as the general public realized what it really was, the demand would be assured. Later, the garden-loving public were told in a comparatively moderate way of the advantages of the shrub. While the trade accepted the introduction of box-barberry at the firm valuation, and bought rather freely for propagating, the results, as a whole, brought the conviction that the nurserymen, as a body, required to be shown by actual inquiries that there would be an assured demand before they were willing to invest any considerable amount of time or money in the proposition. As a result, however of last spring's publicity campaign to interest the retail buyer, the firm found this field seemingly just waiting for a plant such as the box-barberry and the liberal purchases practically cleaned up its entire available stock of sizes suitable for hedge and border purposes, while orders which continue to arrive, together with inquiries, indicate proposed liberal plantings during the coming fall and spring garden activities.

The superintendent of one of the largest estates in the vicinity of Chicago, recently told a representative of the Elm City Nursery Co., that it was his intention to discard practically all of the edging stock now planted, and replace them with box-barberry next spring, being fully convinced of its merit for this purpose. On being asked where he intended to get this supply, he replied that he would buy them. This leads to the question as to where the stock for the ensuing spring's demand is coming from, as a reasonably careful canvass of the trade warrants the statement, according to a representative of the firm, that there is comparatively little stock in field grown sizes, which will be available at that time with the exception of what is owned by two concerns, and from present indicatons, many who would like to use box-barberry for various purposes during the coming year, at least, will be unable to secure their requirements on account of the limited supply. The introducers express regret that the nursery trade generally, were not able a few years ago to visualize the immense demand that is now rapidly taking shape following its introduction, for had it been propagated as freely as possible, all would have profited. The other extreme of over-production may be possible in a few years, but not nrobable. As far as the company is concerned, however, its investment up to the present time, has been a profitable one, with assured prospects of further satisfactory returns from this plant for several years to come.

In the matter of the new hardy privet, Ibolium, which the Elm City Nursery Co. is at present introducing, it hopes that history will not repeat itself, as in the case with box-barberry. Ibolium is hardy over an extended range of country, and as it resembles California privet very closely in general habit, a very heavy demand is predicted following its introductoin, as soon as sufficient stock can be worked up.

Summer Flowering Shrubs.

Many shrubs with conspicuous flowers bloom in the Arboretum during the summer months. The list includes the heathers (Calluna vulgaris), and several species of genista and cytisus. Of this European group the handsomest which can be grown here is the bright yellow-flowered Cytisus nigricans, the yellow-flowered C. capitatus, the white-flowered C. leucanthus and the yellow-flowered Woad wax and its varieties (Genista tinctoria), too well known in Essex county, Massachusetts, where escaped from cultivation it has ruined many hundred acres of hillside pastures. The lespedezas with their abundant purple, pea-shaped flowers, and the handsomest of the Chinese buddleias are still to bloom, as is the very hardy Acanthopanax sessiliflorum, a vigorous shrub of eastern Siberia, most conspicuous in winter when the compact, round clusters of the shining black fruits are on the ends of the branches. The Japanese Hydrangea paniculata and its varieties, and the hydrangeas of North America produce here the showiest July and August flowers. The early-flowered forms of Hydrangea paniculata (var. praecox) which is the handsomest of the group, is already in flower; and all the American species are blooming or just opening their flower-buds. The most popular of these American plants is the form of H. arborescens (var. grandiflora) with snow-ball-like heads of white sterile flowers. There is a similar abnormal form of another of the American species, H. cinerea. More beautiful, and one of the handsomest of the genus, H. quercifolia will flower this month in the shrub collection. This is an unusual event for this shrub, which is a native of the southern states, it being frequently killed to the ground here. In the middle and southern states it is an important and valued garden ornament. Of the American hydrangeas which are perfectly hardy in the north, the handsomest is H. radiata, a native of mountain slopes in North and South Carolina, once a popular garden plant but now rarely cultivated. It is a broad, round-topped shrub with leaves of ample size, dark green above and silvery white below, and broad flat heads of flowers surrounded by a ring of white neutral flowers.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, July 17, 1919.

SUPPLY IS VERY LIMITED.

Market conditions remained unchanged the past week; not much doing, and rather difficult to obtain sufficient good stock to fill what orders there were. Most of the outdoor stock showed the effects of the unfavorable growing weather. While a few asters are coming in, plenty more would be welcome at this time.

NOTES.

Nic Zweifel, as state vice-president of the Society of American Florists, with Wm. R. Schroeder and the writer, as guests, paid the growers on the north end a visit, July 24. Most of them are members of the mother society, but after the interview, became life members. Those of the growers who specialize in carnations, were busy changing the soil. Plants in the field, due to the extreme heat and lack of rain, are not as large as in former seasons, with touches of red spider here and there.

At the Holton & Hunkel Co.'s Brown Deer range, they ran short of water last week, and had to lay a pipe line to a nearby creek during the emergency. This firm has about 25,000 cyclamen, which are being shifted into large pots. They are all being grown indoors, and are the picture of health. Mr. Hunkel, who, accompanied by Mrs. Hunkel and family, is east on an auto trip, is expected back by the first of August.

Although the notice to kindly omit flowers at the Cudahy funeral was printed, the funeral offerings were many and very elaborate. Nearly all the downtown florists had their share of the work. The family order was in form of a casket cover made of orchids, Ophelia roses and adiantum, made by J. M. Fox & Son.

The next regular meeting of the florists' club will be held August 7. A large attendance is desired, as the committee in charge of the Detroit convention plans, will report and complete details. A strong delegation is assured from present indications.

The climax of the heat wave was recorded, July 26-27, when the thermometer nearly reached the 100-in-the-shade mark. On July 27, at 5 p. m., the wind shifted to the northeast, and accompanied by rain, gave us the longed for relief.

Rud Preuss is building a new dwelling house at his North Milwaukee place. As the two sons who conduct this plant under the name of Rud Preuss & Sons are both eligible, we may soon hear the wedding bells ringing.

Little did we realize, that in announcing the reappointment of Patrick Cudahy, president of the Cudahy Floral Co., as a member of the county park board, that this week's issue would contain his obituary.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. just closed a good season in the sale of young chrysanthemum stock. The past week, they were busy filling shipping orders for cyclamens out of three and four inch pots.

The suburb of Wauwatosa has appointed its first park board, consisting of five, and Alexander Klokner has been chosen for a term of five years.

DES MOINES, IA.—Dominick Eposeto, a truck gardener, was shot to death by an unknown assailant while driving his truck wagon to the city market, July 22. Police believe he was a black-hand victim.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, July 29.—Cucumbers, Climax baskets, 25 to 75 cents; celery, Michigan, crate, 50 to 75 cents; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 15 to 25 cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50; tomatoes, 4 baskets, 50 cents to $1.00.

New York, July 28.—Celery, per doz. roots, 25 to 85 cents; cucumbers, 40 to 65 cents per dozen; mushrooms, $2.50 to $4.50 per two-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 10 to 30 cents; lettuce, per package, 50 cents to $1.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.50.

Consumers Offered Gov't Food Surplus.

Bids for the purchase of the surplus army supply of canned tomatoes in carlots were received from a number of employe groups of Chicago corporations, including the American Railway Express, the Chicago Telephone Co., and others, by the quartermaster's department in that city, July 21, in accordance with a plan of the government to allow the consumer to take advantage of the lowered prices on the huge stocks of government foods. While tomatoes are the only product offered for sale at Chicago in this manner at present, employe groups are making an effort to have restrictions on other foods, both meats and vegetables, removed. The bids which were opened and forwarded to Washington for approval covered 850,000 one-pound cans of tomatoes, the price range being from 11 to 12 cents.

Acting on authority from Washington, the quartermaster's department at Chicago has sent letters to municipalites in the eight states represented in the Chicago zone, offering canned corn beef, roast beef, corned beef hash and bacon, in carlots, at greatly reduced prices, a credit of 10 days being allowed where orders are signed by the mayor of the city or a constituted official.

Truck Crops Acreage and Production.

The monthly Crop Reporter of the United States department of agriculture for July gives comparison of acreage and production of truck crops in the United States for 1918-1919 as follows:

	Acreage		Production
	1918	1919	1918	1919
Cabbage, (early) tons	39,800	23,100	142,900	92,500
Cantaloupes, cars	42,400	62,400	16,500	28,200
Celery	14,400	10,400
Lettuce	13,633	10,917
Onions, bus.	35,800	35,000	13,438,200
Peppers	9,827	9,390
Potatoes, cars	255,000	187,500
Strawberries, cars	88,500	62,000	11,500	9,500
Spinach, bus.	12,500	10,600	1,585,000	1,175,000
Watermelons, cars	75,697	114,200	27,500	39,500

Canteloupe Movement and Markets.

From reports received by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, published in a report dated July 22, California has an enormous cantaloupe crop of good quality which will probably exceed the early estimated which indicated a production of about 7,000 carloads, compared with between 7,000 and 8,000 carlaods in each of three preceding seasons. Notwithstanding the heavy yield, prices have sustained a fairly high level. Arizona forecasts double its production in 1918, which will be about one-third of the California crop. Prices early in July ranged somewhat lower than for California stock. Colorado has, in recent years, produced from 1,700 to 2,000 cars annually. One of the leading varieties, known commercially as the Colorado Green Meat followed a general jobbing range of $2-$3.25 in 1918, declining in September to $2.25-$2.75. The Georgia estimate for this year exceeds 1,000 cars as compared with 485 last year, but this state approached 3,000 cars in 1917 and 2,000 cars in 1916. The Georgia Green Meat may be considered the representative eastern variety. The early range in 1918 was $2-$3.25 per standard crate 45's and the low price of the season, $1.50-$2 was reached in July. South Carolina should produce about 425 cars this year, about the average as compared with 1916 and 1917. Most eastern and middlewest sections have declined in production in recent seasons. Shipments to July 7 from all sections of the country were 8,640 cars, with Imperial valley, Calif., far in the lead. This stock early in the season reached top prices in New York at $7-$12 per standard crate 45's compared with $6-$12 in Philadelphia, $7.50-$10 in Pittsburgh, $6-$8.50 in Chicago and $7.50-9.50 in Boston. Prices were sustained at a fairly high level throughout June but declined sharply in July.

Vegetable Markets.

The price trend of vegetable markets was irregular and generally downward during the period July 22-29, according to reports to the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture. In potatoes, prices moved unevenly and closed with the average somewhat low, with middle-western markets stronger than eastern and showing some gains. Eastern shore of Virginia Cobblers closed about 25 cents lower than the previous week at $6-$6.50 per barrel f. o. b. shipping points and followed a wide range in the eastern markets. Norfolk stock was dull and weak at $5.75 top per barrel to consuming markets. New Jersey Cobblers were quoted $3-3.15 per 100 pounds from wagon and ranged $3.25-$3.50 sacked in New York. North Carolina Cobblers weakened to $7.15-$7.50 per barrel in Cincinnati but strengthened at $5-$7.50 in Detroit. Onion prices were lower. Supplies were liberal in New York but moderate in other markets. New Jersey yellow stock declined in New York about 50 cents, closing at $2.65-$2.75 per hamper, but strengthened to $2.25-$3 in Pittsburgh. Virginia yellow varieties weakened about 25 cents in eastern markets, but reached $3-$3.50 in Boston. Kentucky stock weakened to a range of $3.25-$4 in consuming markets. Iowa Yellow Globe continued to decline, closing at $4.40-$4.95 at shipping points and $4-$4.25 per 100 pounds at Chicago, but ranged $5.25-$5.50 in most other middle-western markets. California yellow varieties were steady at $2.75-$3.50 per 100 pounds, but weakened about $1 in the middle-west, closing $4.75-$5.25 at Chicago. Tomato shipments decreased in volume.

Sweet Potato Storage Houses.

As a result of the introduction of modern sweet-potato storage houses in many parts of the south, farmers have become more interested in increasing their sweet potato acreage this year, according to the United States department of agriculture. Particularly is this true in Louisiana, according to a number of reports received from agricultural agents in that state. The agent in Quachita parish writes that 38,000 sweet potato plants were received on a co-operative order in lots ranging from 500 to 5,000 to the individual. Additional orders have been secured from growers who intend to use a total of 200,000 plants. A local concern in Caddo parish has completed plans to erect a 30,000 bushel sweet-potato curing house according to plans recommended by the department. In Allen parish a number of farmers are considering installing small curing houses for their own use. Already 10 or 12 growers have planned to build these houses, which will have a capacity of from 500 to 1,000 bushels each. Members of the Lafourche Parish Truck Growers' Association each will plant an acre of sweet potatoes, several thousand slips of the same variety having been ordered co-operatively. This crop, reports the agent, has been very much neglected in this section.

Cincinnati.

GOOD DEMAND WOULD CLEAN MARKET.

Business is inclined to be somewhat slow and is running in spurts. The supply of stock is fair, but with any kind of a brisk demand there would be a decided shortage. Rose receipts are somewhat limited, but the few that come into this market are of an excellent quality. The aster supply is fairly good, but not as large as it might be. Gladioli are fairly plentiful. Easter lilies and rubrum meet with a good demand. Water lilies have been meeting with an active market. Snapdragons have been selling fairly well.

NOTES.

William C. Schaefer, who has been operating the Hoffmeister Floral Company's greenhouses for the past year, has purchased Henry Koester's range and will take possession at once.

Gus Adrian and wife have gone to their cottage at Les Chenaux, Mich., for the summer.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in many fine gladioli.

Greenhouse Construction

BY PROF. L. R. TAFT.

It tells the whole story about how to build and heat a greenhouse, be it large or small, and that, too, in a plain, easily understood, practical way. It has 210 pages and 118 illustrations. PRICE, $1.75.

Greenhouse Management

By the same author. Covers the subject completely. 382 pages. PRICE, $1.75.

American Florist Co., 440 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

Practical Greenhouse Work

calls for the best equipment obtainable to gain the most profitable results. Ordinary make-shift greenhouses may answer the purpose, but harder work is required of the owner and smaller returns for his labor and investment.

Every piece of material that enters into the construction of Callahan Cut-to-Fit Greenhouses is the result of much experience on the part of our detail men. The members are cut to exact measure and shipped to you with the plans; all so simple that any man with an ordinary knowledge of greenhouse construction can set them up perfectly.

Callahan Cut-to-Fit Greenhouses

are made of selected Louisiana Red Gulf Cypress, to best withstand the heat and moisture required in greenhouse work.

The Callahan Cut-to-Fit Greenhouse is a practical answer to the market grower's needs, and will give you a lifetime of service at a small expenditure.

No frills no fancy work; just solid, useful, up-to-date construction at low prices.

Write for booklet and state size of house you are interested in building.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Marguerites.

The marguerites for winter flowering will soon have to be potted in their blooming pots. This can be done now at any time, and if they are becoming pot-bound the sooner the better. Nine and ten-inch pots are none too large if good flowers are to be grown, and the soil should be good and rich. Pot firmly, using a rammer that the soil can be made solid, and use good drainage and keep the buds picked off until cool weather sets in; the blooms that are made during the warm weather are of inferior quality and no good flowers will be produced until the plants get a good hold in the new soil. The plants are far better plunged in frames for some time yet than in the houses, for they may become infested with red spider under the glass. The plants in the benches will need to be frequently sprayed to keep them free from insects and the blooms should be kept picked off of them for some time yet. When cool weather approaches, allow the flowers to come along. Cuttings can be made at this time, which will make nice flowering plants about the turn of the year, at a time when the large plants seem to take a rest and do not bloom profusely. This will insure a cut throughout the season.

Decorative Plants.

The return of the customers from their country and seaside summer homes will create an immediate demand for palms, ferns and other decorative stock, and the retailer or grower who has not already prepared himself, should do so at once. Plants can be purchased at this time and shipped safely, and in order to save expense they should be purchased at once before colder weather sets in, for they can be transported by freight now and after freezing weather it will be necessary that they be forwarded by express and the difference in the charges of these two methods is considerable, adding materially to the cost of the plant shipped by express. A fine assortment of palms is a necessity at this season and should be obtained at once in the salable sizes as befits the trade. Kentias and arecas from two to four feet high can be bought from $1 to $5 each, and are the sizes most in demand. Phoenix Roebelenii is a very decorative palm, and in the smaller sizes finds a good sale, but the larger sizes are still quite expensive, and can be handled only by high class trade. Ferns of the nephrolepis family and dracænas will be in demand; in fact, a full line of good decorative stock is a necessity at this time in any up-to-date establishment having a retail trade. The stock on hand should now be in active growth and should not receive any check. It is well to be prepared to give these plants a little fire heat as soon as the nights become so cool that the temperature in the houses drops much below 60 degrees.

Geraniums.

All the cuttings that can be taken should be secured now, for a frost that will cut everything down may be expected before many weeks in the northern part of the country at least. In making the cutting all the large leaves should be removed, leaving only the small leaves and the top. The most economical way to propagate these fall cuttings is to insert the cuttings in 2½-inch pots filled with sifted soil, into which a liberal amount of sand has been mixed. After the cuttings have been placed in the pot, they should be given a good watering and placed on shelves, preferably near the glass, and shaded with papers for a couple of weeks. The papers will prevent too rapid evaporation, and consequently continual watering, as the stem is likely to rot if the cuttings are kept too wet. It is much better not to wet the cuttings, after the first watering, until they show signs of wilting. A sprinkling of the foliage in the morning will carry the plants along for some time before watering the pots will be required. If cuttings enough cannot be secured the plants should be lifted and potted that a good supply of cuttings may be secured early in the winter.

Stevia.

All stopping of stevia should cease by the middle of August and the tall-growing varieties should be potted in their blooming pots, or if to be grown in a bench, planted out. The potting of these plants should be done carefully, for the plant is very brittle where the branches break from the main stem and are easily broken. The better way is to tie a piece of raffia around the plant, and if it is very large two or three pieces before removing the plant. As soon as potted or benched place a stake in the center to keep the plant erect. Pot firmly, ramming the soil down hard with a stick or other tool. After potting, water thoroughly, any place in a shady location; the plants will wilt more or less and a light syringing will help them to recover from this, but do not keep the soil soaked, yet daily watering for those in pots will be required. As soon as the plants begin to grow, remove all shade and the pots can be plunged again outside in a frame. The dwarf varieties will not require to be potted outside until early in September if planted outside, but if grown in pots should be shifted in their blooming pots, generally 6-inch, before becoming badly pot-bound.

Winter-Blooming Geraniums.

The late cuttings that were saved for plants for winter blooming should now be thrifty, well-branched plants in 3-inch or 4-inch pots, and should be shifted to 5-inch pots. If they have been kept disbudded, as soon as they become well established in the 5-inch pots they will come into flower. There will be a demand for these plants as soon as the first frosts kill the outside stock and a few with flowers on them at that time will be wanted. The larger number of the plants will not be in demand until later, and by that time the pots will be full of roots and a constant blooming plant will be assured. There may be some small shapely plants in the field that will do for winter blooming; if so, they should be lifted and potted, but they will not bloom as well as the pot plants grown for this purpose.

Peonies.

Now is the best time to move or divide peony roots. Plants that have been in one location for a number of years grow too thick, and will not produce either so many or so good flowers as younger plants, although the peony does not produce the best quality flowers the year after transplanting. The ground on which peonies are to be planted should be well enriched and deeply spaded in preparing it for the young plants. In digging the plants, dig all around the plants, and then carefully insert the spade underneath and lift the plant, taking pains that the large roots are not broken, for these pieces of root if left in the soil sometimes start new growths and if other varieties are later planted in the ground, cause a mixture. The roots can be cut up into quite small pieces, but it is better to leave three strong eyes to each piece and not divide into too small plants. Set the plant good and deep and firm and if the ground is dry, give it a good watering.

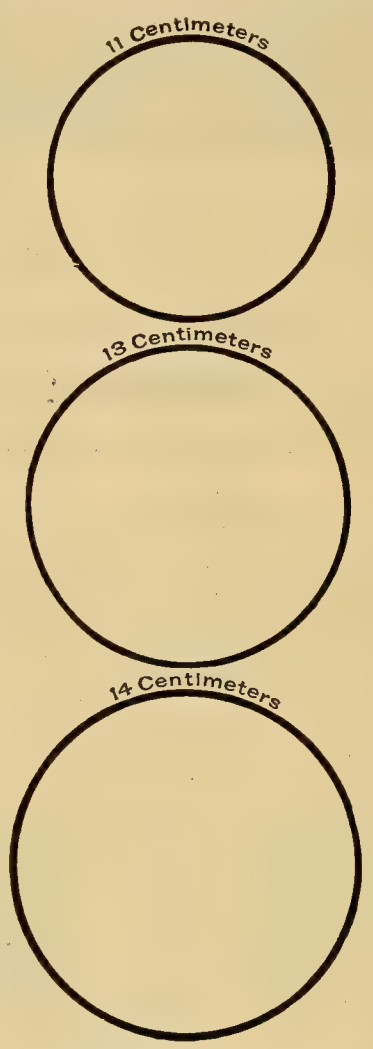
THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

When the shop is opened up these summer mornings, there is often a close, musty smell that requires the admission of all the air or draft possible to change the atmosphere and freshen things at once. Frequently, a jar or two have been overlooked, which if filled with soft stemmed flowers, such as zinnias, asters, rudbeckias, etc., in which the water fouls very quickly, the odor is then very objectionable. It is always best to look over all cut flowers or foliage in jars of water the last thing before closing time. All should be emptied, and those necessary for the stock refilled. The flower stems should be clipped and bad foliage removed. All empty jars should be placed right end up outside the case to air. A few drops of formaldehyde, from a dash bottle, containing one tablespoonful of formaldehyde to a pint of water, will prevent fouling of the foliage in any jar.

The first job in the morning is to set the store to rights. After putting out the pavement display, give the few decorative features a look over, and rearrange, if necessary. Learn to do these things quickly; the effect is likely to be as good, or better, than if a half hour is spent on the job. But do it, somehow. It will have its effect on the first customer.



French Bulb Measurements.

Paste on Heavy Cardboard and Cut Out the Holes With a Sharp Knife, Then Pass the Bulbs Through.

The principal work at this season is for funerals, and the spare time between customers or other store duties, can be well employed in preliminary preparations for this class of business. There should always be a full line of made up wreaths of magnolia or oak leaves, which are then ready at a moment's notice to be decorated. A few fancy pieces, such as a casket cross with short arms to fit the ordinary sized case, can often be sold if it is there to be shown, as can the extra sized wreath to be brought out when the committee calls who want something larger than the usual. A good salesman can make these pieces look very important by the addition of a few flowers and green quickly laid on, together with a bow of ribbon. How much better it is to be thus prepared than to have to try and describe them to the customers?

If the store is in a shopping center, do not neglect the windows. A successful retailer stated to the writer recently, that he always kept his window up to standard the year round. Each of the summer flowers, as they came along, were always featured. He did not believe in a vase of something and a few palms and ferns, just to relieve the bareness. He always found people were interested in water lilies, lotus flowers, choice gladioli, and other of the summer flowers, and when they came in, he had the best roses in the case, to show them. Some of his finest trade had originated from inquiries about the window display.

In all stores where there is a plant and decorative department, a part of whose work is the filling of window boxes, now is the time to look out for the fall business in this line, which is that of renewing the summer flowers with winter evergreens. In addition to the work of the firm's own customers, a record can be made of all other boxes, their size and position, what evergreens would look best in them, and the manner of filling best suited to the location. A visit to the nurseries will then give a line on the best stock suitable for this work, quantities, varieties and prices. Letters and descriptions are then to be written, accompanied with estimates of the cost of the work to be done. Dates are left open to be filled in, when the time comes for sending them out. If this matter is taken up and carried out with any degree of enthusiasm, it is sure to land some worth while orders, and gradually establish and extend the trade of the house in this line. A strong feature in exploiting these boxes is that every new one that goes into place, encourages this form of house or porch decoration. People do many things because they see others do them. The boxes that "Mrs. Brown" has just put in place, have added so to the front of the house, that "Mrs. Smith," across the street, calls up to inquire what they cost, which likely results in another sale.

If a certain line of boxes is determined on, they can be made at the factory in quantity at this season at quite a reduction. Made in units of two and three feet, they will, by fitting end to end, fill almost any space. A circular, illustrated with photos of filled boxes, should also be prepared now. All this preliminary work adds to the earning power of the store, creating new and profitable business, that without these efforts, would be lost.

Keep Your Customers Posted.

A weekly card telling of the various new stocks as they come along is good advertising. In the early fall season, as soon as the house is opened, the fernery is first to receive attention.

A line or two regarding the best ferns for the purpose, the good assortment on hand, as well as a few words about the care of the dish in the house, is timely and sure to be interesting.

The best plants for the house, a word or two about their care, and the good assortment in stock follows later.

News of the first chrysanthemums will be well received, together with something of the other cut flowers in season.

Window boxes and the fine stock on hand to fill them furnish an interesting item for another card.

Little live matters of store news, such as those calling attention to the various seasonable plants and cut flowers as they appear, is sure to be appreciated by customers and can be extended to a selected list of people whose trade would be desirable and new patrons obtained in this way. All printers can furnish cards a trifle larger than the stock postal, square or any desired shape, and in a great variety of colors. These require but a penny stamp, are sure to be read and form one of the cheapest and most effective methods of keeping customers in touch with the store.

Cyclamen Seed.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, O., the noted cyclamen grower, who also makes a specialty of cyclamen seed, has been successful after years of selection in securing an improved strain of this valuable flowering plant. Mr. Peterson says that growers who desire to save their own seed should exercise the greatest care in the selection of the plants, setting aside only those showing a good and robust growth. The flowers should be borne on erect stems of good length, which open out well above the foliage in the center of the plant. Long, broad-petaled flowers of distinct shades of color are most desired. The fancy frilled or butterfly varieties, while good for the exhibition table, are not desirable commercial varieties. Best results are obtained by hand fertilization. There are from 2,000 to 2,500 seed to an ounce, about 35,000 to a pound.

THE S. A. F.

Secretary in Convention City.

The secretary duly arrived in the convention city, and reported "ready" to the advisory committee, Vice-President E. A. Fetters, Philip Breitmeyer and Wm. Dilger, who were not only anxious to advise, but to lend material assistance, making the work of preparing for the big trade exhibition comparatively easy.

The secretary's first day was spent in Arcadia auditorium, making final decisions as to extra space. The unprecedented demand for space in the trade exhibition made it necessary to amend the preliminary plans somewhat. It has been decided to hold the convention sessions on the second, or balcony floor, where permanent seats are arranged to accommodate 1,000.

The exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society will be held on the same floor, two long tables being provided to extend the full length of the balcony on both sides. A good supply of water is handy for use of the exhibitors in this organization.

As the auditorium opens its regular season for dancing on the Saturday following the convention, August 23, exhibits must all be removed from the exhibition hall on Friday, as per our lease and contract. This being the case, the local interests have decided to comply with the wishes of exhibitors that the entertainment on Friday, the fourth day, be curtailed, so there will be very little doing on that day. In addition, many of those who will attend have signified their intention of leaving for home on Thursday night, so the entertainment features will be allowed to take up whatever time may be available during the three days of the convention.

The changes outlined above permit of a little more space being given to the trade exhibition, so there is still time, if orders are sent in at once, to obtain a favorable location.

It is most impressive to see the slogan, "Say it with Flowers," displayed in every flower store in the city, and also on the windshields of the florists' automobiles and delivery cars. This is the result of the good work of the special publicity representative for Michigan, M. A. Vinson.

In the evening the secretary had the pleasure of attending a meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club, presided over by President J. F. Sullivan, at which the ladies of the local S. A. F. auxiliary were present. There was a good attendance and the meeting was most enthusiastic. The reports of the chairmen of the different committees showed that all arrangements were well in hand, and that every visitor will be well taken care of; therefore, if everyone does not have an enjoyable time it will not be the fault of the Detroit Florists' Club.

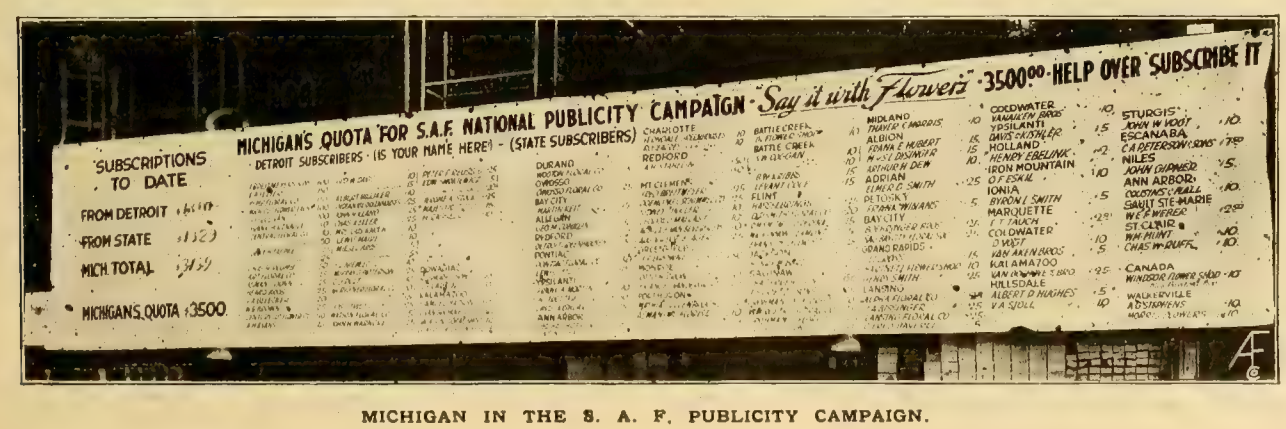
Henry Goetz, a member of the club, journeyed from Saginaw, a distance of 96 miles to show that there was much interest in the convention in that section of Michigan. Mr. Goetz is also an enthusiastic booster for a Michigan state organization, and at the time of the convention, a state society will be established, there being hope that the proposed affiliation amendments will be adopted at the convention, in which case, the state will be entitled to representation on the executive board.

Albert Pochelon, the energetic secretary of the F. T. D., in his usual forcible manner, reported arrangements that had been made to enlighten retail florists who are not F. T. D. members as to the wisdom of joining the organization. Although Mr. Pochelon has said much in the past of the good work of the F. T. D., he still has a little "dope" left in reserve, and there is no doubt that at the convention, a goodly number will be added to his list of members. The goal for membership for the coming year has been placed at 2,000, and there is no doubt as to the possibility of this number being listed.

I would again urge upon everyone going to the convention, the importance of applying for hotel reservations to E. A. Fetters, 17 East Adams avenue, Detroit, at once. The hotels are all close together and near the Arcadia auditorium. If Mr. Fetters is unable to locate you at any hotel specified, he will do the next best thing, but all will be taken care of in good shape somewhere. Do not miss the convention; it will be different from any that has preceded it, and there is a good time in store for all who come.

At present the weather is very cool and clear, making the use of a blanket necessary at night when sleeping.

How could this convention be anything but a success, when every one in the trade in Detroit is trying to do, or suggest something, which will help to make the stay of the visitors profitable and enjoyable? Even the president of the society, J. F. Ammann, has announced his intention of being in the city a week ahead of the convention to see that the secretary and the advisory committee have overlooked no important detail, but he will find that Vice-President Fetters has all the work well in hand.



MICHIGAN IN THE S. A. F. PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

In the official programme published in the society's "Journal," President Sullivan of the Detroit Florists' Club, was erroneously listed as "secretary" of the club. The error, of course, has been recognized.

The Trade Exhibition.

All exhibitors are advised to ship their displays by express in ample time, marking them distinctly, "Convention of the Society of American Florists, Arcadia Auditorium, Woodward Avenue and Stinson Street, Detroit, Mich.," and prepaying all express charges.

The list of exhibitors is now quite large, but, owing to some important changes in the floor plan, a few good locations for exhibitors are still available ,if immediate application for same is made. Any firm dealing in florists' supplies or accessories, which is not represented at the exhibition, should not overlook the opportunity afforded to bring its products before the trade, as there is every evidence that visitors from all sections will be at the convention to buy their season's supplies.

Exhibitors desiring signs, desks, etc., should write the secretary at once, in order that their requirements may be met in good time.

The following exhibitors are in addition to those previously announced: J. C. Moninger Co., Chicago; F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.; Farnsworth Co., Conshohocken, Pa.; Promotion Bureau, S. A. F. Publicity Campaign, Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, Detroit; Earl L. Hempstead, Burlington, Ill.; H. V. Pearce, Detroit; The Greening Nursery Co., Monroe, Mich.

The secretary's address is Hotel Statler, Detroit, Mich.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The improvement in the support of our campaign fund noted in these columns in the last two weeks is sustained, the aggregate of contributions in this article being greater than for some time reported. Our committees are pleased indeed at the showing made, and feel greatly encouraged. They are going ahead with their plans for a lively campaign this fall, and hope to mature them for presentation at a joint meeting to be held some time during the Detroit convention.

With many of the contributions come hearty endorsements of the work of the committees. The efficacy of the campaign is no longer doubted, and from all over the country come assurances that its influence for good has been felt. Still, our promotion bureau has a long list of florists who have not yet made a contribution to the fund. If these business men would decide what they are going to do, our committees could plan intelligently, for they would know what was likely to be behind them when completing plans. As has been said a number of times, contracts for magazine space must be made weeks ahead of publication, and it is not in our best interests to be cut out of some prominent publication because of unpreparedness. In other lines of trade, money for publicity work is quickly forthcoming, and plans consequently matured and put into execution without uncertainty such as we have had to experience. The jewelers have now resolved to raise a fund of $300,000, and are offering a substantial money prize for a slogan.

We are approaching the half-way stage of the fund, but considerably over a month late. Shall we reach our goal? We believe we shall, but we must have more support. Our subscription list to June 28 has been published and distributed. Do not withhold a subscription because you do not see Mr. So-and-So's name on it. He may be waiting to see yours. Look over our lists published in the trade papers each week, and notice how now and then some community makes a clean-up. Observe, for instance, how Texas shows up in the list this week. Why not round up your fellow craftsmen in your own neighborhood? You would certainly be doing them a favor. We want your help, and it could hardly come at a better time than now.

The following subscriptions have been received and are in addition to those previously announced, annually for four years, unless otherwise stated:

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Texas State Florists' Association.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

The Texas State Florists' Association at its annual convention held at Austin, July 9-10, 1919, adopted the following resolutions on the deaths of its members during the year:

THE LATE SETH A. MILLER.

Whereas, Almighty God has seen fit to remove from our midst one of our beloved members, Seth A. Miller, of Dallas, Tex.,

Be it resolved, that the Texas State Florists' Association, in convention now assembled, expresses sincere sympathy to the beloved wife and other members of the family.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and copies to each of the trade papers, and a copy be spread on the minutes of this association.

THE LATE THOMAS J. WOLFE.

Whereas, Almighty God has seen fit to remove from our midst one of our beloved members, Thomas J. Wolfe,

Therefore, be it resolved, that the Texas State Florists' Association, now assembled in convention, offers its sincere sympathy to the beloved wife, and sister, and other members of the family.

We all miss our deceased brother at this convention, and will continue to miss him at all gatherings, as he was always active and a leader among us.

Thomas Wolfe was past president of this association and a life member, and during his administration, accomplished great results for his fellow florists.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, and a copy to each of the trade papers and a copy be spread on the minutes of this association.

THE LATE JOHN STUPPY.

All things in Nature have their seasons, and though man by his superior mind, often changes the time of the blooming of the flowers, yet, before the great facts of life, man is powerless and Death claims all seasons for his own. During the past year, there has gone from our midst a man whom all loved to honor; a modest, retiring man, not seeking the public places, but working along quietly and unobtrusively in his chosen line.

This man was John Stuppy, a life member of the Texas State Florists' Association. It is not given to us who are left to understand why this one was taken, but we know that the Master needed him for the gardens of Paradise, and though we miss his presence sorely, yet we bow our heads to the will of Almighty God, knowing that He doeth all things well.

Therefore, be it resolved by the Texas State Florists' Association now assembled, that we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the family of the deceased, assuring them that we share their grief, and be it further resolved that copies of these resolutions be sent to the family, to the trades papers for publication, and a copy be spread on the minutes of this association.

THE LATE E. E. STONE.

No man can give more than he who gives his life for you. He who dares face the perils of war, with his face to the foe, commands the respect and admiration of all men. We offer these resolutions in behalf of our fellow florist, E. E. Stone, of Dickinson, Tex., who met death upon the battle fields of France.

Therefore, be it resolved that this convention of florists of Texas, miss his presence and his personal work in promoting the cause of floriculture in our state.

Also, be it resolved, that this convention extend to his family our sincerest sympathy in the loss of this good man, and to his beloved wife, we share with you your sadness in this your greatest loss, and may God in His mercy of love temper your sorrow of grief.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be furnished his beloved wife, and the trade papers and a copy be spread upon the minutes of this association.

Baltimore.

BUSINESS NORMAL WITH SMALL SUPPLY.

The market has been normal for the past week, nothing being shipped in abundance from the growers, consequently no glut on the market, the small shipments being used up quickly by all the retailers, each getting his share of the orders, which are principally for funeral work. Asters are getting better every day and give the grower the most concern at present to keep their roots wet during these hot, blistering days.

NOTES.

George Eberle has taken hold of an idea which we hope will make him rich. He has gone into the confectionery business, soft drinks and ice cream being in such demand at this time, but we are glad to know that he has still continued in the florist business for we cannot lose him, whom we have known so long as an up-to-date, reliable florist.

Now that the war is over, and high wages are decreasing in the ammunition and shipbuilding plants, the fern man is seen again at the retail store. Mr .Garriott is one who decided there was more money in ferns and laurel than there was in steel, for he left the Bethlehem Steel Co., and went back to his old occupation.

Robt. Halliday is still confined to his home on Woodbourne avenue, but can receive callers at all times. Go out and see our old friend Bob and talk to him about how he made the Baltimore S. A. F. convention the biggest one ever held in the country.

Mrs. James Glass, of Erdman avenue, is still in poor health. Now that Mr. Glass is entirely well, and feels better than he ever did, we sincerely hope that his wife will soon be on the road to recovery.

The firm of Lohr & Fritz is one of the best shippers of roses to the S. S. Pennock Co. just now, good quality Ophelia, Maryland and Double White Killarney being received.

John Wagner must have received an inspiration to advertise at our last club meeting, for his insertion was noticed on the front page of the Sun last week.

Gus Loetz, of Glenburnie, has a very good strain of assorted asters, daily shipments being made to the Leo Niessen Co.

By a little misunderstanding, Harry Wagner, of the S. S. Pennock Co., returned one week too soon from his vacation.

Mrs. Hildebrecht, of East Baltimore, is closing out her stock of decorative palms. G. JR.

EXCELLENT SUMMER BUSINESS.

Taking into consideration the heated season, and the scarcity of stock in all lines, there is at times a scurrying to secure enough flowers to fill orders. Roses are now being cut from the new plants and asters and gladioli are beginning to arrive. Carnations are expected to make their appearance in a short time.

NOTES.

All are looking forward to the coming Canadian Horticultural Association's convention at the Prince George hotel in this city, August 12-15, and from reservations already made, there will be a large number of visitors from distant points. Tre retailers' organization, which is being formed, has the promise of many members.

Most of the stores are running shorthanded on account of vacations. Decorating is now in order and preparations are being made for a big business the coming season.

The new rose, Frank W. Dunlop, is holding up its reputation and some excellent blooms are being cut. These, with Ophelia, are the leaders on this market.

GOOD FUNERAL DEMAND PREVENTS SURPLUS

Trade during the past week was good. Stock is moving well, the demand for flowers of all kinds being surprising. There were several busy days of funeral work which helped to take care of any surplus. Roses are good but several local growers are off crop. Asters are coming in fast and a drop in price resulted during the week. Gladioli still move well and the call for these flowers both as cut stock and for funerals is unusually good. There were several weddings durings the week that called for some decorative stock.

The Westminster Greenhouses are changing their heating plant over to the oil system, installing a large tank holding over 40,000 gallons of fuel oil. The system was used by several large establishments in this vicinity last winter with good results. Jerry Trottier, formerly with this firm, has returned from an absence of two years overseas. He is looking well and is glad to be Horticultural Society of New York.

There will be a gladiolus exhibition, August 23-24, in the Museum building, New York bontanical garden, Bronx park. Schedules are now ready for distribution and will be sent on application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York, bontanical garden, Bronx park, New. York.

In this connection, attention is called to the large collection of gladioli in the horticultural gardens of the New York botanical garden, in the south part of the grounds, only a short distance from the south gate. Here are brought together about 250 kinds; about 21,000 corms were set out. The primulinus hybrids have been in bloom for some time, and are still flowering. The other kinds are now blossoming. In addition to the above there is a collection of about 40 kinds of cannas. Here is an opportunity for a comparative study of both gladioli and cannas. Each kind is plainly labelled.

GEORGE V. NASH, Sec'y.

Holton and Hunkel Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. in its big range (a quarter of a million feet of glass) north of Milwaukee has done its best fairly solving the problem of filling the houses with substitutes for palms, azaleas, araucarias, etc., shut out by the federal horticultural board.

This very large stock comprises a wide range of home grown and well grown Boston ferns, cyclamens, dracænas, peppers, pandanuses, cherries, crotons, etc., in short the entire range of florists' plants for every-day decorative work and not overlooking the quantity requirements of the Christmas holidays and Easter.

Every class shows technical skill in the growing. For the shipping trade the firm undoubtedly carries the largest general stock of these classes of plants in the west.

OBITUARY.

The Late Robert Karlstrom.

Robert Karlstrom, who died at Cromwell, Conn., July 24, was a skillful landscape gardener, and personally, an excellent man. He was born in Sweden about 50 years ago. A graduate of the Stockholm College of Horticulture, he later held a high position in the Stockholm park department. He came to this country in 1893 and held various important positions, one being with the Hartford, Conn., park department. For a number of years he was in charge of landscape work for W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J. Later, he went to A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn. For a number of years he has been a well known and popular figure at the shows held in New York and other cities. A wife and four daughters survive him.

J. Fred Lembke.

J. Fred Lembke, who for the past 14 years had represented the W. W. Barnard Co., in Ohio, Pennsylvania and adjoining territory died in Mercy hospital, Canton, O., August 3, following an operation for appendicitis two days before. Mr. Lembke's thorough knowledge of the requirements of the trade, his fairness in all his dealings and his good humor and kindly disposition won for him a host of friends and the high respect and affection of his business associates. The remains were taken to the home of his sister at Milwaukee, Wis., and he was laid to rest in that city August 7.

Reinhard Muller.

Reinhard Muller, died, July 31, at his home, 2104 Metropolitan avenue, Middle Village, N. Y., age 44 years. He was one of the many florists of that section of New York City that are engaged almost exclusively in cemetery work, and was a member of the Florists' Protective Association of Middle Village.

Discussion of Amendments to Constitution and By-Laws, and voting on same.

Amendments:

In accordance with instructions given to the Executive Board at the Baltimore Convention, August, 1911, regarding the appointment of a permanent committee to govern the Society's flower shows, the Board, at a meeting held in Detroit, on January 12, 1912, formulated the following by-law, presenting the same in its report to the Chicago Convention, August, 1912. The report was adopted in convention, but the by-law was not ordered to be inserted in the Constitution and By-Laws of the Society. To correct this over-sight the by-law is now presented in regular order, and its inclusion in the Constitution and By-Laws should be authorized by the Society.

To amend Article II, Sec. 4, Standing Committees and their duties, by adding the following paragraph:

(a) National Flower Show Committee:

The committee shall consist of six members, with the president and secretary as exofficio members. The present chairman shall hold membership for a term of six years from January 1, 1912. The balance of the committee shall cast lots to determine the retirement of one member annually, beginning January 1, 1913, and the vacancy so made shall be annually, on January 1, filled by the appointment of one member by the president taking office. On January 1, 1919, and annually thereafter the president shall appoint one member to serve for a period of six years. The president shall also fill vacancies arising through death or other causes. The chairman shall be elected by the committee under such rules as the committee may formulate. Members may be removed for cause on the affirmative vote of seven members of the executive board. The treasurer of the Society shall be exofficio treasurer of the committee, and the secretary of the Society the secretary. Money appropriations for the use of the committee made by the Society, or monies coming into the committee's hands during the course of its work, shall be subject to expenditures by the committee under such rules as it may adopt. The committee shall have full charge of all matters relating to exhibitions held by or on behalf of the Society, or under its auspices, excepting the trade exhibition at the annual convention, subject to the control of the executive board; and shall control the offering and awarding of medals, trophies and certificates. The members of the committee shall be reimbursed for traveling expenses, when traveling on business of the committee under call of the chairman. The committee shall make a full report to the executive board each year on August 1st.

And by changing the alphabetical reference to paragraphs (a) (b) (c) and (d), to (b) (c) (d) and (e) respectively.

To further amend Article II, Sec. 4, Standing Committees and their duties, by striking out paragraph (a) reading as follows, entirely:

"(a) Standing Committee on Convention Garden: The president, assuming office January 1, 1917, shall appoint three members, one serving three years, one two years, and one one year. Each next elected president, when taking office, shall appoint one member to serve three years. This committee shall have full charge of all Convention Garden arrangement work under the direction of the executive board. The members shall elect their own chairman, and shall be subject to the call of the president and the executive board."

To amend Article II, Sec. 2, Elections and Appointments, paragraph (b) reading:

The president shall appoint on the first day of January of each year, or as soon afterward as may be possible, one or more State vice-presidents from each State and Territory represented in the membership, to serve for a term of one year. Clubs, societies or kindred organizations of professional florists, gardeners and horticulturists, having paid up membership of one hundred or more members in the S. A. F. and O. H. shall be entitled to one representative on the board of directors. Such representative shall be the president of such organization and must be a member of this Society. Any elective officer or appointed director shall not be eligible as a representative of such organization. When the president of any such organization is already a director, the vice-president shall be eligible for the office. Any organization applying for representation shall submit to the secretary of this Society a certified copy of the resolution adopted by their organization that they wish such representation on the board of directors, together with a complete list of its membership. It shall be the secretary's duty to confirm same and submit it to the president for final confirmation. Announcement of such director shall be made by the president. The president shall also appoint on the first day of January of each year a representative at Washington, D. C., who shall as such also be a member of the board of directors, and whose term of office shall be for one year.

By merging the opening sentence, "The president shall appoint on the first day of January of each year, or as soon afterward as may be possible, one or more State vice-presidents from each State and Territory represented in the membership, to serve for a term of one year," with the concluding sentence "The president shall also appoint on the first day of January each year a representative at Washington, D. C., who shall as such also be a member of the board of directors, and whose term of office shall be for one year," And by striking out the remainder of the paragraph and substituting as a separate paragraph:

(c) "Societies or kindred organizations of professional florists, gardeners and horticulturists, national in character, whose membership includes one hundred or more members of the S. A. F. and O. H. in good standing, shall be entitled to one representative on the board of directors. Clubs and other organizations of professional florists, formed within a State, and not national in character, shall be entitled to one representative on the board of directors provided that any such club or organization shall include in its membership the number of S. A. F. and O. H. members in good standing prescribed in the following specifications: CLASS A: 100 S. A. F. and O. H. Members:—Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, California. CLASS B: 75 S. A. F. and O. H. Members:—Indiana, Michigan, Iowa, Missouri, Texas, Maryland, Wisconsin. CLASS C, 50 S. A. F. and O. H. Members:—Minnesota, Kansas, District of Columbia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Colorado, Connecticut. CLASS D. 25 S. A. F. and O. H. Members:—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Delaware, West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Washington, Oregon.

Any such representative shall be the president of the organization represented, and must be a member of this Society. Any elective officer or appointed director shall not be eligible as a representative of any such organization. When the president of an organization is already a director, the vice-president shall be eligible for the office.

Any organization applying for representation shall submit to the secretary of this Society a certified copy of the resolutions adopted by their organization expressing its desire for such representation on the board of directors, together with a complete list of its membership. It shall be the secretary's duty to confirm same and submit it to the Society's president for final confirmation. Announcement of the acceptance of such representative as a member of the board of directors shall be made by the president. The expenses of any such representative in connection with his attendance at any meeting of the board of directors shall be borne by the organization represented."

And by changing and extending the paragraphical references in such section to provide for the inclusion of the new paragraph.

As amended, the section to read:

(b) The president shall appoint on the first day of January of each year, or as soon afterward as may be possible, one or more State vice-presidents from each State and Territory represented in the membership, to serve for a term of one year. The president shall also appoint on the first day of January of each year a representative at Washington, D. C., who shall as such also be a member of the board of directors, and whose term of office shall be for one year.

(c) Societies or kindred organizations of professional florists, gardeners and horticulturists, national in character, whose membership includes one hundred or more members of the S. A. F. and O. H. in good standing, shall be entitled to one representative on the board of directors. Clubs and other organizations of professional florists, formed within a State, and not national in character, shall be entitled to one representative on the board of directors, provided that any such club or organization shall include in its membership the number of S. A. F. and O. H. members in good standing prescribed in the following specification: CLASS A. 100 S. A. F. and O. H. Members:—Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, California. CLASS B. 75 S. A. F .and O. H. Members:—Indiana, Michigan, Iowa, Missouri, Texas, Maryland, Wisconsin. CLASS C. 50 S. A. F. and O. H. Members:—Minnesota, Kansas, District of Columbia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Colorado, Connecticut. CLASS D. 25 S. A. F. and O. H. Members:—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Delaware, West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Washington, Oregon. Any such representative shall be the president of the organization represented and must be a member of this Society. Any elective officer or appointed director shall not be eligible as a representative of any such organization. When the president of an organization is already a director, the vice-president shall be eligible for the office. Any organization applying for representation shall submit to the secretary of this Society a certified copy of the resolutions adopted by their organization expressing its desire for such representation on the board of directors, together with a complete list of its membership. It shall be the secretary's duty to confirm same and submit it to the Society's president for final confirmation. Announcement of the acceptance of such representative as a member of the board of directors shall be made by the president. The expenses of any such representative in connection with his attendance at any meeting of the board of directors shall be borne by the organization represented.

To amend Article IV, Section 2, reading:

"Fees and Assessments:—Any eligible person may become a member of the Society on the payment of $5.00, and such payment shall cover the annual dues for the balance of the calendar year.

The annual dues shall be $3.00 per year, payable in advance on the first day of January. Any annual member in good standing may become a life member on payment of $25.00, and be exempt from all future assessments."

By striking out the sentence reading:

"The annual dues shall be $3.00 per year" and substituting "The annual dues shall be $5.00 per year;" and by striking out the sentence reading, "Annual member in good standing may become a life member on payment of $25.00, and be exempt from all future assessments," and substituting, "Any annual member in good standing may become a life member on payment of $50.00, and be exempt from all future assessments."

As amended, the section to read:

Fees and Assessments:—Any eligible person may become a member of the Society on the payment of $5.00, and such payment shall cover the annual dues for the balance of the calendar year. The annual dues shall be $5.00 per year, payable in advance on the first day of January. Any annual member in good standing may become a life member on payment of $50.00 and be exempt from all future assessments.

To amend Article V, Sec. 1, Meetings, reading:

"At the thirty-second annual meeting to be held August 15th to 18th in Houston, Texas, the meeting places for the years 1917 and 1918 shall be selected by ballot, and at the meeting of 1917 and at every meeting thereafter, the meeting place for the second year following that meeting shall be so selected, except in such cases when the convention is held in such sections of the United States where the month of August is not considered the best time for the convention. The change in date will not be considered, however, unless a petition is sent by the convention city in time for the mid-Lent meeting of the executive board and setting forth its reasons for such change of date. In such event the board will have the power to change the dates of the meeting. The balloting shall be done at the evening session of the first day of each annual convention. The time for the annual meeting shall be the third Tuesday of August in each year, continuing for three days, or until all business is completed. The city applying for the meeting shall, with its written application, provide the free use of a place for the purposes of a Convention Garden, which place shall be available, if desired, from the early Spring of the year before the meeting to the late Fall of the year of the meeting."

By striking out the lines reading:

"At the thirty-second annual meeting to be held August 15th to 18th in Houston, Texas, the meeting places for the years 1917 and 1918 shall be selected by ballot, and at the meeting of 1917 and at every meeting thereafter, the meeting place for the second year following that meeting shall be so selected, except in such cases when the Convention is held in such sections of the United States where the month of August is not considered the best time for the convention. The change in date will not be considered, however, unless a petition is sent by the convention city in time for the mid-Lent meeting of the executive board and setting forth its reasons for such change of date." and substituting:

"At the thirty-sixth annual meeting to be held August 17th to 19th in Cleveland, Ohio, the meeting place for the year 1921 shall be selected by ballot, and at every annual meeting thereafter the meeting place for the following year shall be so selected, covering dates equivalent to the third Tuesday in August and two following days, or until all business is completed, except in cases when the convention is to be held in such sections of the United States where the month of August is not considered the best time for the convention. A change in date will not be considered, however, unless a petition is sent, by the convention city chosen, in time for consideration at the mid-Lent meeting of the executive board, and setting forth its reasons for such change in date." And, further, by striking out the concluding portion of the section, reading:

"The time for the annual meeting shall be the third Tuesday of August in each year, continuing for three days, or until all business is completed. The city applying for the meeting, shall with its written application, provide the free use of a place for the purposes of a Convention Garden, which place shall be available, if desired, from the early Spring of the year before the meeting to the late Fall of the year of the meeting."

As amended, the section to read:

At the thirty-sixth annual meeting to be held August 17th to 19th in Cleveland, Ohio, the meeting place for the year 1921 shall be selected by ballot, and at every annual meeting thereafter the meeting place for the following year shall be so selected, covering dates equivalent to the third Tuesday in August and two following days, or until all business is completed, except in cases when the convention is to be held in such sections of the United States where the month of August is not considered the best time for the convention. A change in date will not be considered, however, unless a petition is sent, by the convention city chosen, in time for consideration at the mid-Lent meeting of the executive board, and setting forth its reasons for such change in date.

The following recommendation of the executive board is to be voted upon:

WELCOME TO THE CONVENTION.

Dear Fellow Members:—

You have, doubtless, read the programme prepared for our Convention, and have noticed that some important matters are set down for discussion. But the programme does not cover all the business of the Convention—it sets out only those matters we know will come up. Always, there are other subjects of importance, generally unforeseen, which engage the attention of a Convention.

So, everything considered, it looks as though we are in for some very entertaining sessions.

Will you not try your best to be with us for at least three days, August 19th, 20th and 21st? You can help us by your very presence. Your vote counts in all things, and any advice or suggestions you might feel prompted to make would be cheerfully received. Nobody who attends one of our Conventions for the first time need feel shy—our gatherings are democratic in the extreme, not a soul ever feels timid.

Come! Mix with your fellows in the trade, swap experiences, exchange ideas, and enjoy the hospitality of your brethren in the beautiful city we are to visit. No matter whether you "keep shop" or carry on your shoulders the cares of a greenhouse establishment, your business kindred, in great numbers will greet you, and you will feel just as much at home as you do in your own surroundings.

Think of the very comprehensive exhibits you will see, and which the manufacturers, and their agents, of the various articles used in our trade will display—the store supplies, such as baskets, vases, ribbons, fountains, wedding auxiliaries, prepared wreath material, paper boxes, and the like; and greenhouse requisites, such as boilers, construction material, ventilating apparatus, fertilizers, and equipment; then the bulb displays, the plant exhibits and other exhibits of interest. If you want to, you can talk business right on the convention floor—the exhibits are not dead ones, there are live representatives in charge of each.

Bring your troubles, if you have any, right to the convention. We will make your problems our own, and help solve them.

Stay over an extra day, August 22nd. It is Friday, practically week end, so you may as well make a good finish. Of course, you will have your wife, and perhaps other members of your family with you. On this day all will enjoy especial entertainment at the hands of the Detroit florists, noted for the fine way in which they do things. A trip to a beautiful summer resort, Belle Island, on the River Detroit, with a lengthy programme of athletic sports and games, and prizes galore, are among the attractions arranged.

If you are a bowler, you can take part in the bowling tournament scheduled for the Thursday evening.

There will be lots of fun, in addition to our hard, honest-to-goodness business.

The Society welcomes you. Your Detroit brethren welcome you. Come!

J. Fred Ammann, President.

THE New York Times, in a dispatch from Coblenz, says that British and French commercial interests have an enormous start on those of America in the race for German business. British and French military authorities for the last three months have permitted the passing into Germany of business men of their nations, while American military authorities have not permitted this travel into Germany.

Personal.

J. D. Eisele, president Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., and wife, are making a trip to the Pacific coast.

Thanks.

Mrs. Arnold Ringier, Chicago, desires us to convey her heartfelt thanks to the many kind friends, for the beautiful floral offerings and other courtesies on the occasion of her late husband's funeral, all of which were gratefully appreciated.

Ladies Society of American Florists.

THEATER CLUB AT DETROIT.

A theater club is being formed for the pleasure of the ladies attending the convention at Detroit, Mich., August 19-21. Any lady is eligible, and invited to join upon payment of the dues, 50 cents.

Mrs. C. H. Maynard, who has the arrangements in charge, can be seen at the convention hall, Arcadia auditorium, Detroit, August 19. The date of the entertainment will be announced later.

Fertilizer Prices.

As a result of the United States department of agriculture's communications with fertilizer manufacturers, farmers should obtain their mixed fertilizers for the fall season of 1919 at an average price of about 30 per cent lower than the prices which prevailed for the spring season of 1919. This statement applies to the territory north of Arkansas, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia, but including the Ohio river counties of West Virginia. Fertilizer prices for the southern states have not yet been put out.

American Dahlia Society.

The list of premiums to be awarded at the exribition of the American Dahlia Society in conjunction with the American Institute of the City of New York has been issued, and copies may be had upon application to W. A. Eagleson, secretary board of managers, 324 West 23rd street, New York.

In the dahlia section for commercial growers only, prizes are offered in 12 classes, while 33 classes will be open to all. Premiums are offered for the best 25 and best 10 varieties of named gladioli and for miscellaneous cut flowers, including roses and carnations. A fruit and vegetable display will also be a feature of the exhibition.

Canadian Horticultural Association.

TORONTO CONVENTION, AUGUST 12-15.

The twenty-second annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, brief mention of which appeared in previous issues, will be held in the Prince George hotel, York and King streets, Toronto, Ont., August 12-15. The gardeners' and florists' clubs of that city have been busy for some time preparing a welcome for all who attend that will make the occasion one long to be remembered, the entertainment features including a picnic and field day at Long Branch, an automobile tour of the city and vicinity, visits to the estates of Sir J. C. Eaton and Sir Henry Pellett, the association banquet, and a boat trip across the lake to Queen Victoria park, Niagara Falls.

At no previous meeting of the organization, has there been offered a programme embracing more interesting and timely topics. One entire session will be given over to the retailers, a feature of which will be the report on the questionnaire sent out some time ago regarding proposed organization. Among the papers and discussions announced for the several sessions are the following: "Private Gardening," by Geo. Thompson, Toronto, and W. C. Hall, Montreal; "Modern Greenhouse Construction," by W. O. R. Cobb, New York; "Landscape Gardening and Hardy Shrubs," by W. F. Harries, Buffalo, N. Y.; "Bulbs and Their Future," by Herman Simmers, Toronto; "Report on Plant Registration," by H. J. Moore, Niagara Falls.

The present officers of the association are: George Douglas, Toronto, president; E. B. Hamilton, London, Ont., first vice-president; James McKee, Ottawa, Ont., second vice-president; Herbert J. Eddy, 4425 Sherbrooke street, Westmount, Que., secretary-treasurer.

Coming Meetings.

ACTIVITY PRINCIPALLY IN FUNERAL WORK.

Business has been quiet during the past few weeks, although there is some activity at all times, largely in the funeral line. The supply is about equal to requirements. Having discovered the process of growing fine roses and carnations, it now remains for the growers to counteract the effects of "Old Sol," in the July, August and September days. The terrific rays of the summer sun make it almost impossible to produce flowers outdoors in this climate. Asters that do well further north rarely ever attain the same size here. They are coming in now from local growers and help out in funeral work. Gladioli do very well but is better when greenhouse grown. A great deal of shading, however, is necessary to bring good results. Some very good Columbia and Killarney roses are being received, though rather small and short stemmed. Carnatoins are off of the market entirely.

NOTES.

Geny Bros. are giving their employes their summer outing. Miss Christine Geny, daughter of Leon Geny, is spending a month with relatives in Louisville. Among those who are absent from the establishment or recently returned from vacations are Miss Katherine Anderson, Mrs. Willie Sawyer, Miss Lena May Baker and M. S. Haynes.

The McIntyre Floral Co. has had a good run on funeral work. Some very good asters are seen here. They are having better success with this crop than most of the local growers.

Thomas Joy, of the Joy Floral Co., has been enjoying a short rest at Red Boiling Springs. His firm is cutting some good roses and plenty of gladioli. The store force is busy.

EVERYONE IS TALKING CONVENTION.

Business was good Saturday, August 2, especially in regard to the local demand, which was due principally to the settlement of the street car strike. The local demand the opening of the week was rather quiet, but the shipping trade is holding up remarkably well, and while there is plenty of stock in the wholesale market to go around, there is no great surplus to speak of. Asters are more plentiful, and are arriving in much better condition than during the past few weeks. Gladioli are seen in large supply since the Michigan stock began to arrive, and are to be had in quantity. Prices on this item are not as stiff as they were, which also holds true of asters. A few carnations are seen at some of the stores, and once in awhile one runs across some fairly good summer stock in this line. Orchids are on the short side, and so is lily of the valley. American Beauty roses are good property and clean up nicely right along at very satisfactory summer prices. Roses are good property and are in good demand, especially Columbia, Mrs. Chas. Russell and Ophelia. Roses in general are moving as briskly as can be expected, and while they appear to be in large supply at times, they have been cleaning up almost completely the past month. Daisies, lilies, calendulas, snapdragons and other miscellaneous seasonable stock is to be had, but is not moving as fast as in the past, owing to the heavier supply of asters and gladioli. The Detroit convention is occupying the attention of many in the trade, and from present indications, there will be a large delegation from this city.

NOTES.

Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann; Paul Klingsporn, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association; A. F. Amling, of the A. F. Amling Co., Maywood; Fred Stielow, of Stielow Bros. Co., Niles Centre, and Frank Schramm, of Crystal Lake, are all priming up their autos, preparatory to taking a spin to the Detroit convention.

Walter Adams and wife returned home last week from a pleasant month's vacation in the west, which included a visit to Yellowstone Park and an extended stay at Los Angeles, Calif. He was called to Peoria by the serious illness of his father upon his return home.

Fred Ottenbacher, of the Zech & Mann force, is back on the job after enjoying a well-earned vacation. Miss Nelda Wolf, who has charge of the books at this establishment, will leave on her vacation next week.

Robert Newcomb, representing Poehlmann Bros. Co., and A. Henderson & Co., of this city, and the Burlington Willow-Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia., is back from an extended western business trip.

L. R. Bohannon and wife will leave about August 16 on a visit to Yellowstone Park and California. Mrs. Stuart, of the Bohannon Floral Co., is spending her vacation in New York.

John Degnan, with A. Henderson & Co., is on a two weeks' vacation, part of which will be spent with a brother at Kenosha, Wis., and the balance in Michigan.

A. Hare, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., and H. Welke, of E. Welke Co., Milwaukee, Wis., were welcome visitors in the wholesale market this week.

E. C. Pruner is home from a trip through the southwest. Fred Longren is in, and so is Allan Humason.

The American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. has increased its capital stock from $125,000 to $200,000.

Vaughan's Seed Store is showing first French Paper White narcissus bulbs in the retail show window.

Herbert Stone, of the A. Lange force, is away on his vacation.

A Letter to the Trade

A Chicago wholesale house, in last week's issue of one of the trade papers, had the audacity to insert a misleading "ad," to the effect that other Chicago wholesalers were buying their left-over stock or such stock as they were glad to get rid of, leading the trade to believe that these other Chicago wholesalers were filling their orders with such class of stock. So, in fairness to these other wholesalers and in justice to ourselves, we therefore take exception to an "ad" of this nature and desire to announce that in no case have we or do we ship out stock of such a nature. Besides, it is ridiculous to think that any reputable wholesaler would want to send out stock that would not give his customers the best of satisfaction. As to ourselves, we can only add that time and again have our contentions been upheld by repeat orders, coupled with the fact that our shipping trade has shown a marked increase over other seasons.

Roy White, of the Wonder Plant Irrigator Co., 2544 North Clark street, reports a strong demand for its new No-drip hanging basket, which will meet with the unanimous approval of every dealer in the trade. Mr. White returned recently from a most successful business trip through the west.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are having a brisk call for gladoli and asters, which they are handling in quantity. Gypsophila sold exceptionally well this season and only a few bunches are left on hand.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting from a good summer crop of roses, particularly Columbia, which is in strong demand. This firm has its new Kroeschell ice-machine in operation.

Vaughan's Seed Store is showing a fine assortment of gladioli at the retail store, 31 West Randolph street, cut spikes from the firm's Michigan and Homewood plantations.

George Stiles and wife, of Oklahoma City, Okla., are spending their vacation at Benton Harbor, Mich. They made the trip by auto and will motor to the Detroit convention.

The North Shore shows have been an absolute failure this season. The weather has been too hot and the people interested in such shows have been away.

Al. Barber and wife, of Cleveland, O., and John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., and wife, are back from a pleasant visit to the Wisconsin Dells.

Miss Edna Frauenfelder is back on the job after camping in the Colorado Rockies and spending a week at their summer home in Michigan.

Mrs. Theo. Callos, Mrs. Andrew Chronis and Mrs. Lawton have returned from a pleasant visit with the folks in northern Wisconsin.

BRISK DEMAND FOR FUNERAL WORK.

This has been a fairly active week for the trade. There was quite a lot of funeral work. Even at the present writing, it is brisk. The supply of roses is getting to be of much better quality. The absence of extreme heat is giving the stock much better keeping qualities, as well as improving the color and length of stems. The second crop of Ulrich Brunners is at its height, and a large supply is coming in. Varying prices are received, according to the length of stems. Some very good Hadley and Ophelia are also being sent in, and as is always the case with good stock, it finds ready buyers. Quite a few white roses are noticeable, principally Kaiserin. The limited supply of Russell is as yet rather short. There is no change in the carnation market. Asters are coming in freely, and it must be said that the quality offered is extra good for so early in the season. Prices are quite satisfactory. Pink, white and lavender are the three best sellers. Most of this stock is sent in by the Chinese growers. Chrysanthemums are coming in slowly, with prices very good for Early Frost. Golden Glow is rather poor in quality, and does not keep as well as the first named variety. Other than these two, we have no other varieties as yet. There is a great variety of dahlias being offered this season. Great care must have been taken by the growers to produce such excellent results, for it would be difficult to improve on much of the offerings. However, it cannot be said that they are proving very remunerative to the grower. The greater part of the sweet peas coming into this market are splendid for this date. They are eagerly bought up at good figures. The gladiolus crop is beginning to shorten up, and from now on, we may expect to see the cut gradually decline. They have had a long season, and with few exceptions, have been good property throughout. Santa Cruz is still the chief source of supply. There are quite a number of snapdragons to be had, but it is all outdoor stock and of poor quality. When first grade stock is received, it is quickly absorbed by the stores. Buddleia magnifica is very popular and sells at good prices. Cattleyas are practically out of the market, the few that arrive every morning only lasting a short time before being disposed of. Gardenias are in about the same fix as orchids. There is a great assortment of outdoor flowers to choose from. Ferns are plentiful.

NOTES.

There is a good deal of discussion going on among the florists here of late, as to the advisability of Sunday closing. From talks with many of them, it develops that the majority are in favor of such action, but it seems to be a difficult matter to get all to agree. In the center of the great retail district, the flower stores close at 1 o'clock on Sunday, while in other parts of the city, they remain open all day. It is expected that some definite arrangement will be arrived at shortly, whereby all the stores will close voluntarily all day Sunday.

Foreclosure proceedings have been instituted against the Cottage Gardens Nurseries of Eureka by a bank in that city which holds a promissory note of $45,000 signed by the firm. Chas. W. Ward, president of the company, says that the embarrassment of his firm is only temporary and is expecting that a settlement with the bank will be made in a few days. The trade here hopes that Mr. Ward will extricate himself from his financial difficulties as he is held in the highest esteem by the trade of this city.

The annual dahlia show of the California Dahlia Society, which is to open next month, will have the largest list of entries in the history of the society. Many of our leading dahlia specialists will have their choicest novelties on view for the first time. Frank Pelicano has several new ones, of which he expects great things. The Bessie Boston Dahlia Farms and F. C. Burns, of San Rafael, are also going to enter their new seedlings.

The chrysanthemum growers report ideal growing conditions prevailing for all stock. Nearly all the early varieties have set their buds, and in some favored locations, cutting is commencing. The acreage planted is quite large, but it is not expected that there will be any difficulty of disposing of the cut this year, as already many prominent shippers have been arranging to take the entire cut of the large growers.

Eric James, of Elmhurst, has his cyclamen houses in great shape for this coming season's trade. He grows many thousands of these popular pot plants every year, and never seems to have enough to supply his customers they are looking especially fine and promise much for the holiday trade. He says plant demand, especially in decorative stock, is brisk, and is shipping steadily to this and other markets.

The Art Floral Company has a large force of mechanics at work in its Powell street store re-arranging the whole interior. When completed, it will give them every convenience necessary to an up-to-the-minute flower store. They have been making beautiful displays of water lilies this week that attracted much attention. Everyone seems to be always busy at this establishment.

At Joseph's, on Grant avenue, they have been quite busy with steamer sailings the past week. This firm specializes on this sort of work, and have gained a very prominent place in this particular line. The display windows of this firm are always attractive, as they contain both fruits and flowers arranged in baskets in many charming ways.

The land show, which is to open here, October 4, and continue until the 19th, has issued a schedule of prizes for floriculture and horticulture. Val-

FAIR MARKET WITH SHORTENED SUPPLY.

The market has been in fair shape the past fortnight. Stock of all kinds shortened considerably. This has been due to the extremely hot weather and not to a demand for flowers. The supply has been low. Business has been almost at a standstill, with little prospect of opening up until the early fall. Gladioli have passed the glut stage and the supply is now just about equal to requirements. The quality is not near as good as a week ago. The best seen is Schwaben. Roses are only fair, but for summer, are commanding very good figures. The few asters seen on the market are only fair in quality, but are bringing stiff prices. Outdoor stock is much poorer this year than last, and not near as much is seen. The market is anxiously awaiting the return of carnations, of which the first new cut should be in within a few weeks.

NOTES.

The next florist club meeting will be held at Wm. C. Smith's greenhouse plant at Woodlawn and Seekamp avenue, St. Louis county. The new officers for the ensuing year will be elected at this meeting, and Billy Smith promises to show every body what a good time is. Keep your eyes on Bill.

Harry Schlechter, formerly with G. H. Angermueller, and recently returned from the army, is now with Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. Harry is a live one, and will be a great asset to the Smith forces. Everybody in the trade knows him, and best of all, likes him.

Al Gumz is cutting quite a swath in his new "Victory Six" Moon car. It is a classy machine, and he has been taking short tours of a day or two at a time. He intends spending his vacation in this manner, getting all the pleasure he can out of the car.

Chairman Pilcher, of the transportation committee for the Detroit convention, reports that quite a few from this city are going. He expects to fill a car from here. Many of the florists intend taking their wives.

Geo. H. Angermueller has been away from his store for some time on account of sickness. He is getting along nicely and hopes to be back in harness soon. In the meantime, Fred Alves is on the job.

J. J. Windler is leaving on his vacation this week out on the Merameo river, where he has a cottage. He expects to be back home in a few weeks, unless fishing is extra good.

What Every Grower Will Do

A grower who is fair and impartial and not restricted in his judgment in choosing a Wholesale Cut Flower Commission House, will endorse our NEW SERVICE.

No supervision, no regulations, no protection, was adequately provided to a grower in the old practice of Commission Wholesaling.

Our REPORT OF SALES answers all questions.

It tells and explains fully what every grower ought to know about the marketing of his products.

If for no other reason, our SALES REPORT alone is sufficient to encourage consignments to us.

TRADE STRENGTHENS AT WEEK-END.

Business was quiet early last week, but there were two brisk days the latter part, with funeral work keeping the forces busy in the evening, and in some cases, all night, getting out early morning orders. Several moderate weddings created a demand for flowers, also, and there was a steady call for flowers throughout the week for the sick room. There is a great improvement noted in the quality of most out-door flowers since the recent heavy rains, particularly gladioli, which are the main prop of the florist at present. The first asters of the season appeared last week, but they are nothing to brag about as to size or quality. In many places, the crop was seriously injured by the last few weeks of dry weather. A limited number of carnations are coming into the market, but are hardly worth quoting. A fine lot of begonia plants are selling very well demonstrating how great the need is for mid-summer blooming plants.

NOTES.

Many in the trade are taking advantage of this hot weather, and the present lull in the florist business, to freshen up for next season's rush by a trip to lake resorts, etc. Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lanternier and daughters, Misses Eileen and Ruth, have just returned from a several weeks outing at Sylvan lake, Rome City, Ind. Mr. and Mrs. Clem Lanternier will be among the Fort Wayne florists to attend the S. A. F. convention, at Detroit this month. They will probably motor to the convention city. Roy Connett, assistant orchid grower to S. Hudson, at the W. J. & M. S. Vesey greenhouses, has returned from Chicago, where he spent last week among the growers of that city and vicinity. C. J. Houck, head of the packing force of that firm, has returned to his duties from a two weeks' vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Shive, of the Flick Floral Co., are planning to attend the S. A. F. convention at Detroit. Both are life-members of the society. Summer weddings are dispelling midsummer dullness at the store. Funeral work is very heavy here, the force having to work many evenings last week in order to fill all orders. Miss Marguerite Flick of this firm, is enjoying a boat trip to Killarney, Ontario, and the Georgian Bay, accompanied by her aunt, Miss Helen F. Patten, of Toledo, O. H. K.

Columbus, O.

ASTERS HELP OUT SCANTY MARKET.

Asters of good quality are coming to the relief of what was a very limited market. In any large sense, stock had become confined to gladioli and roses. The former are abundant, and one prominent florist made them subject to a special Saturday sale last week to help keep them moving. Prices are from $1.25 a dozen up. The crop of roses is barely sufficient to supply demand in the case of florists who depend upon their own greenhouses. Carnations and sweet peas are practically out of the market. Trade is largely confined to funeral work, and on the whole, is dull.

NOTE.

W. W. Walker, who entered the navy the last year of the war, is among the last of the local floral trade to return to civilian life. He was attached to the "Agamemnon," in transport service and crossed the ocean seven times. Among other features of his experience was a gain in weight of 40 pounds. He has resumed his old position in the store of the Munk Floral Company. J.

GLADIOLUS

They are in full crop. Our stock includes many novelties and all the standard varieties. Always a good supply of America, Augusta, Francis King, Panama, etc. $5.00 and $6.00 per 100.

If you will leave the selection to us we can offer you Gladiolus at very attractive prices. We ship Gladiolus mostly in bud, insuring arrival in good condition. You are obliged to carry some stock during the summer months, and you have less risk of loss in Gladiolus than any other flower you can buy.

THE LEO NIESSEN CO., 1201 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Philadelphia.

GLADIOLI BIG FACTOR IN MARKET.

The past week has been one of very light demand; some say, the least of the season. The supply feature has been the vast quantities of gladioli that have been thrown on the market, 10 times as many as could be sold. One of the large dealers reported that much of this stock could not return enough to pay express charges. There were also large shipments of asters, much of which would also go to waste or be sold at junk prices. In both cases, the fault for the most part was on account of the poor quality of the offerings. It is thought that after this week, the supply would be nearer normal. Good roses have been scarce. While no really high grade blooms are seen at this time, there are some that are better than others, the best that are to be had, and of these, the supply is not near enough. Dahlias are much more plentiful than ever before at this season, but the stock is poor and like all low grade flowers on a slow market, they are difficult to move at any figure. Summer cosmos is in, and with its clean, bright flowers, is a good seller. Larkspurs, rudbeckias, gaillardias and hydrangeas are the best of the outside stock. Cattleyas are still on the short side, nothing worth having going for less than $1. An interesting feature of the market just now is that of prices; it is said that nothing in flowers is bringing any more than last year at this time, if as much, while in nearly all other lines of merchandise, even to perishable fruit, the market is very much higher, in some cases, prices being from 50 to 100 per cent more.

COMMISSION DEALERS' TAX.

The following is a copy of the paragraph of "An act to increase the revenues and for other purposes," termed the Revenue Act of 1916, approved September 8 of that year, which applies to all wholesale florists who sell on commission, and for that reason are called brokers. Under Title X, Special Taxes, the words, "produce or merchandise" are held to include flowers, and the wholesale trade in this city have all had to pay this tax; and in addition, a penalty of $6.25 because it was not paid before July 1. The first knowledge of their responsibility in the matter was when the collector made his appearance. Edward Reid declares that under the ruling, all clothing, or other salesmen who sell in stores or outside, who receive a commission on their sales, are liable to this tax. Why he and others were not notified of the existence of this tax until immediately after it was delinquent, when the penalty was tacked on, is what adds to Mr. Reid's wrath.

GLADIOLI AND ASTER SURPLUS.

One of the prominent commission men, in speaking of the surplus of gladioli and asters the past week, said he wished he could get growers to see the great advantage of only handling high grade stock. Many of them grow the old varieties of gladiolus that have long since ceased to have any value in the market, but the bulbs go in year after year, and now with all kinds of overhead, in labor, boxes, transportation rates, etc., 100 per cent higher, he can scarcely get his money back. They pay little or no attention to their asters—cut and bunch them as they come, many bunches containing poor flowers that condemn all the good ones. Let them select the good stock, discard the poor, no matter if there is only one-third as many, and these will likely make better returns than the whole lot, and cost less to handle.

NOTES.

Wm. Wilhelm returned from France last week. Both he and his brother, Edward, saw hard service abroad, but returned safe and sound, and are now directing their energies to building up the business which was conducted so successfully by their father and sister during their absence. Wilhelm's Logan

DEMAND BETTER THAN USUAL.

Market conditions, if anything, are a trifle better than usual for this time of the year, and several large funerals have also been a factor. Stock is plentiful and of medium quality. With the exception of Russell and Columbia, roes do not amount to a great deal. American Beauties are small and not of much value. Asters are becoming more numerous, but the majority are poor and hard to move. Receipts of gladioli are heavy and the flowers are better than usual. A few garden flowers are received daily but they are hard to dispose of.

NOTES.

Ed. Weaser, manager of Randolph & McClements, is spending a month's vacation in the country. Miss Emma Maxwell is also taking a month's rest. Ollie Belt, buyer for the A. W. Smith Co., after a strenuous season, is spending his vacation at home getting acquainted with his family. Frank Jack, of the same firm, is resting at the W. J. Smith farm at Canfield, O. C. C. Phillips, of the McCallum Co., and wife are motoring through eastern Ohio and West Virginia.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had the family order for the funeral of Mrs. Henry Oliver of Sewickley Heights. The arrangement was made by Harvey Sheaff, store manager, Ophelia roses and orchids being used in profusion.

Everyone is very enthusiastic over the S. A. F. convention and there will be a big delegation from this city.

Harry Simpson, of Kittaning, has bought a small range near that city and will grow cut flowers.

"DOG DAYS" HERE WITHOUT DOUBT.

As the old almanacs, that used to give so many interesting dates and hints, seem to be all out of print, we cannot state definitely when "dog days" begin, but from the condition of this market during the past week, one may guess that they are somewhere near at hand. Briefly stated, it was quite up to expectations for summer dullness. Out of the moderate supply of roses that came in, comparatively few of even medium quality could be picked out, and even they got slower toward the last of the week. Practically 10 days of wet weather, followed by sticky heat, put the roses in bad shape. The bulk of them came in either very small or very open and mushy. There was a great influx of the small market asters; they kept piling up, and prices dropped to low figures. The gladiolus situation was little, if any, better. Easter lilies and lily of the valley were scarcely seen, or thought of, for that matter. The supply of orchids continued light, but there seemed to be enough to go around. There was a considerable supply of phlox, zinnias, dahlias, the latter very poor, and other outdoor stock, but none of it had much of a call. If there was an exception, it was in the white bouvardia, which is a good summer stock. Carnation planting time is at hand, and it is to be supposed that the growers would like to see some dry weather, both for the good of the stock in the field, and to enable them to start planting.

August 4.—The market is quiet, with a large stock of gladioli, asters and inferior roses on hand. Anything really good in roses, as a few American Beauties, Scott Key and Columbia are bringing good prices for the season. The scarcity of orchids keeps pushing up the price.

NOTES.

We have received the Journal of the Society of American Florists for July, which contains much useful information relating to the coming convention, at Detroit, August 19-21, inclusive. An interesting feature is a fac-simile of the prospectus issued at the time of the organization of the society, in 1884, with the names of the officers, executive committeemen and vice-presidents.

Herman Kommitsch, of Secaucus, N. J., who has been a heavy shipper of orchids, sweet peas and chrysanthemums to this market, has sold his range, including 50,000 orchid plants, more or less, to a wealthy Boston man. The orchids will be removed to the gentleman's estate, while the Secaucus range will probably be leased or sold to a commercial grower.

G. E. M. Stumpp is reported to be quite busy at his Southampton store. He also has there a fine garden and grows a variety of summer flowers. Southampton is now one of the finest summer resorts of Long Island, and the Southampton Horticultural Society is a real going concern. It held a fine show July 30-31.

Paul and Henry Dailledouze are on a western trip, and when last heard from, were in Yellowstone Park. They are expected to continue on to the Pacific coast. John, son of Eugene Dailledouze, is now foreman of the range of Dailledouze Brothers.

Morris Terry, formerly with Charles H. Brown, 2366 Broadway, who spent a year in France with the American army, a considerable part of it in the trenches, has returned safe and well, and has resumed his position in the Brown store.

The Campbell Flower Shop, which is conducted in connection with the undertaking business at Broadway and 66th street, had a large amount of work for the funeral of Oscar Hammerstein, late theatrical manager.

The retail store of N. Scoffes, Nostrand avenue near Fulton street, Brooklyn, was recently badly damaged by fire and the contents destroyed. Workmen are now busy with repairs, and he expects to be in good shape in a short time.

The death of Mrs. Cantillon, wife of Bernard, and mother of Richard Cantillon, occurred August 2. Richard is cashier for the New York Cut Flower Co. She is survived by her husband and a large family.

Max Schling will go to Detroit in advance of the New York delegation, that step being necessary in order to arrange his booth, in which he plans to have a fine convention exhibit.

Louis Schmutz, the well known plantsman of Flatbush, has been seriously ill for the past three weeks. As he is 75 years old, his condition gives cause for grave concern.

Wm. Hamburg, recently with G. E. M. Stumpp, has taken a position with the Miller Floral Co., of Salt Lake City. He is a clever and capable man.

James Mallon's Sons have vacated the store, corner of Fulton and Willoughby streets, Brooklyn, where they have been located for 60 years.

Charles A. Funk, for the past two years a gardener for J. H. Small & Sons, has opened a retail store at 578 Steinway avenue, Astoria.

Alfred Schutte, of J. K. Allen's staff, has returned from his outing and Miss Pierson, the bookkeeper, is now on a vacation.

Arthur Radice, of the staff of Hentz & Nash, Inc., is spending a two weeks' vacation at Rockaway Park.

Miss Mary A. Brophy, of J. S. Fenrich's bookkeeping staff, is taking a well earned vacation.

Phil Ditzenberger, foreman for H. E. Froment, has returned from a vacation of three weeks.

Theodore Malandre, of Malandre Bros., is with his family at their country home, up state.

Joseph J. Levy, the 26th street wholesaler, has gone to the Catskills for a short vacation.

Henry Baylis, of the New York Cut Flower Co., is taking a short vacation.

J. V. Ayer, of Detroit, was in this city, August 2, calling on the trade.

MARKET HAS BARE APPEARANCE.

From a business standpoint, July was fairly good—for July—but from a weather standpoint, there was much room for improvement, the entire month being very hot and dry. Asters and gladioli have suffered severely. In fact, there are no asters to speak of, and for the past three weeks gladioli have been about fourth class, even an adequate water supply failed to save most of the summer flowering stock, owing to the extreme heat and dryness of the atmosphere. Indoors, the stocks have fared slightly better, but practically all the flower-producing crops are done, and the flower shops are obliged to depend upon outside wholesale markets for their daily needs. Judging from the stock received from these markets, we conclude that there is not much really good stock anywhere.

NOTES.

Beginning July 1, Otto Kuechenmeister took over the business and greenhouses heretofore owned and managed by his father, Ferdinand. The elder Kuechenmeister has purchased a small farm near the city, and expects to make his home thereon.

W. H. Culp and wife returned last week from a vacation trip of several weeks, spent mainly at Los Angeles, Calif., with short stops at San Francisco, and Denver on the way home.

Allen Freegard, of the store force of Chas. P. Mueller, is in the hosiptal with a badly wrenched foot, caused by an automobile accident, while acting as an emergency driver.

From present indications, Chas P. Mueller will be the only florist from this city attending the Detroit convention.

CLUB DISCUSSES CONVENTION PLANS.

The florists' club meeting, August 1, brought out a big and enthusiastic attendance. The ladies' auxiliary of the club was quite as well represented in number, as was the stronger sex, and made known by their enthusiasm, the keen interest in the approaching S. A. F. convention preparations for which the meeting was called. A communication was read from Professor A. C. Beal, secretary of the American Gladiolus Society, giving an outline of the prospects for the exhibition which the society will stage in the Arcadia auditorium, in connection with the convention. Reports were received from the chairmen of all the committees working upon convention arrangements and satisfactory progress was indicated by the same.

Secretary John Young was present at the meeting and made a strong appeal for new members for the S. A. F., and also for a strong support of the publicity fund of the society. His talk was received approvingly, and increased membership in the national organization from here may be relied upon and also continuous support of the publicity fund.

H. F. Goetz, Saginaw, Mich., who is a member of the club, came 96 miles to attend the meeting, and to encourage, while here, the organization of a state florists' association, which plan has the club's support. Mr. Goetz was voted chairman of the proposed society, which will have its initial meeting at an opportune time—convention week here, the exact hour of the same to be announced from the chair.

Ed. Rodwanski was voted a member of the club.

NOTES.

Frank Holznagle, an enthusiastic trap shooter, will offer prizes and arrange for a shooting contest during convention week at Birmingham, Mich., 15 miles out Woodward avenue, where a local gun club has all the equipment for the sport.

Philip Breitmeyer, E. A. Fetters, A. Pochelon, President J. F. Ammann and Secretary John Young, of the S. A. F., will form a party to visit the convention of the Canadian Horticultural Society at Toronto next week.

Joseph Streit, while on his way to the club meeting in his new Reo, collided with a street car. Great injury was done to his auto, but "Joe" escaped and will be on the job managing the bowling contest.

CLEANUP DEMAND AT GOOD PRICES.

The market during the past week kept well cleaned up and prices were good. While the cut of roses has been satisfactory, the demand has kept pace with the receipts. Gladioli are abundant and bring good returns, due to the absence of much other stock which has been retarded by the recent unfavorable weather. With a good shower, August 3, outdoor stock is showing improvement.

NOTES.

F. August Gerlach, veteran superintendent of the Mitchell park conservatory, died August 1, age 63 years. He had held the park position for more than 20 years and his wonderful displays of chrysanthemums were looked forward to for many years.

H. V. Hunkel and family returned from an auto tour through the east, August 4. He is well satisfied with home products after seeing the other fellows'.

J. C. Vaughan, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, and S. W. Pike, of St. Charles, Ill., were visitors last week.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

VISITED MILWAUKEE: J. C. Vaughan, Chicago.

THE price of bags at Chicago, August 6, was $65.00.

NEW YORK, August 4.—A number of firms received their Harrisii lily bulbs on the Bermuda S. S. Charybdis today.

WHITE POTATOES sold in Chicago this week at $4.25 per 100 pounds, an advance of $1 per 100 pounds within seven days.

LEONARD H. VAUGHAN, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, left August 2 to join his family at Colorado Springs, Colo.

SEED specialists report 600 acres of cabbage being grown at La Conner, Wash., and prospects are for a good yield.

CHAS. HOLLENBACH, Chicago, wife and family returned last week from Yellowstone Park and report a most enjoyable trip.

F. L. LEMBKE, well known representative of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, died in the hospital at Canton, O., August 3, under operation for appendicitis.

NORTH CAROLINA reports that the drought has been broken and cannas are growing well. The acreage of tuberoses and caladiums is said to be below normal.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade Aug. 6, were as follows: Timothy $10.50 to $11.50 per 100 pounds; September $13.40, October $12.55.

DONALD K. BELT, well known in the trade, formerly with W. G. Scarlett & Co., Baltimore, Md., is now in business for himself in the same city under the name of the Belt Seed Co.

EXPORTS from Holland during 1918 included 4,532 metric tons of seeds of which quantity $288,891 went to the United States, Bulb imports during the same year by this country totaled $66,444.

DETROIT, MICH.—Friends of Wilber Brotherton, manager of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co.'s branch in this city, regret to hear that he is in a local hospital, ill from an operation performed last month.

JAPANESE LILY BULBS.—On July 10, in Japan, the jobbing cost price for Lilium giganteum had been advanced to cost about $65 delivered in the United States for the 7-9 size, plus duty of $5 per thousand, equal to $70. The market is still fluctuating.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened unchanged and October and December dropped 15 cents, August 5, with cash holding firm at $30.00, a gain of 75 cents during the week. Timothy was 10 cents lower, cash being offered at $5.50, September $5.50, October $6.05, December $5.75 and March $6.05.

Greenville, Mich.

Early planted beans are showing yellow leaves, the effect of the dry weather. For the later planted, there is some hope that the rain will help while the beans are setting.

Other Michigan points report onion set prospects about 50 per cent of last year's crop which was from 400 to 600 bushels per acre.

Onion Sets.

The pulling of onion sets in the Chicago district has advanced to 25 to 40 per cent of the crop, with a reported yield of from one and one-half to three bushels of sets to the pound of seed sown. The rain of July 28 was too late to add much to the yield. Tops wilted down rather than fell over, and some growers are lifting without twisting the tops, expecting to rub off the tops in screening. The sets generally are very small and, unfortunately for the grower, light.

Of nine north side growers visited August 5, their average yield was less than two and one-fourth bushels to the pound of seed sown.

A well posted local jobber says he is a buyer now at $2.00 per bushel.

Commercial Bribery.

In commenting on the matter of the giving of gifts or commissions to employes of customers, an unfair method of competition which has unfortunately crept into the retail trade, and which the federal trade commission in its annual report refers to as commercial bribery, the Seedmen's Bulletin of July 24 says:

"It would seem as if seedsmen indulging in the practice referred to, would do well by themselves and the trade, if they purged themselves of this practice of giving commissions or gifts to the employes of their customers before official or judicial inquiries and prosecutions are undertaken, as they surely will be."

[As reported in our issue of June 14, page 1069, Congressman T. W. Sims, of Linden, Tenn., has introduced a bill (H. R. 263), which provides a fine of $2,000 or imprisonment, or both, to protect interstate and foreign commerce against bribery and other corrupt practices.—ED.]

Labor Perils.

President Bolgiano of the American Seed Trade Association in his address at the recent Chicago convention said:

"The labor situation today is almost, if not quite, as dangerous as it was during the war times; vast numbers of Greeks, Italians, Spaniards and other laborers are going back to their home land. Our laboring men seem to be so short-sighted as to be willing to place the cost of production so high in this country, that we fear that as soon as the abnormal wants of the world are supplied, we shall see the trade, needed so much for the prosperity of our country, go to more conservative lands, and we shall again be put into the borrowing nation class."

Action Against Railroads.

The United States railroad administration, in General Order No. 50, gives notice that hereafter all actions at law and suits in equity based on contracts binding upon the director general of railroads, claims for death or injury to persons, or for loss and damage to property arising since December 31, 1917, which would, but for federal control, be brought against the carrier company, shall be brought against Walker D. Hines, director general of railroads, and not otherwise. Such action shall not, however, apply to proceedings for the recovery of fines, penalties and forfeitures.

JURISDICTION OF SUITS.

General Order No. 18 of the railroad administration requires that actions be brought in the county and district where the plaintiff resided at the time of the accrual of the cause of action.

British Seed Trade Heavy.

According to Commerce Reports of July 9, a large business was done in the home market by British seed merchants and the export trade was well up to the average. Prices ruled high but were willingly paid by buyers, whose sole anxiety seemed to be to secure supplies. The increased demands, due to the food production campaign and the unfavorable harvest of 1917, gave considerable cause for worry in the fore part of the year, but the large imports from the United States, British colonies, France, and Italy, together with the heavy stocks of English dealers, enabled the trade to meet the situation, so that at the time of sowing supplies were plentiful. After the sowing season had passed and the home market demands had been satisfied, the surplus was exported. Large quantities of vegetable seeds were exported to the United States, but the shipping conditions and import restrictions prevented full advantage being taken of the market offered.

It is expected that throughout 1919 prices will be generally high and well maintained. The high prices offered during 1918 served as an impetus to the cultivation of seed crops throughout the world, although there is still a shortage in clovers, grasses, and some varieties of garden peas. Countries which remained neutral during the war are now permitting the exportation of seeds, and supplies from those countries, together with those from the colonies and the United States, are coming to hand very slowly. It is feared some will not arrive in time for the season and will have to be carried over unttil 1920.

GARDEN SEED EXPORTS TO UNITED STATES.

The kinds of seeds exported to the United States consist chiefly of rutabaga, turnip, cabbage, mangel, mustard, radish, celery, parsley, onion, and a small quantity of flower seeds. The declared export returns show that 550,666 pounds of seeds, valued at $346,055, were shipped from the Nottingham consular district during 1918, as compared with 661,276 pounds, valued at $239,802, for 1917. This is a decrease of 110,610 pounds in the quantity exported, but an increase of $106,253 in the declared values.

NEW EARLY-FLOWERING or WINTER-BLOOMING

GIANT PANSIES

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe Winters and to bloom right on into the Summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, eye.
15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with eye.
16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
17. CHARM OF MARCH Dark velvety blue

18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations. 500 seeds, 25c; 1000 seeds, 40c; ⅛ oz., $1.10; ¼ oz., $2.00; oz., $7.50.

10. KENILWORTH GIANT EXHIBITION is the very finest complete mixture ever sent out. Seed carefully saved only from marked plants of all varieties, with the largest and best shaped flowers and richest coloring. It is impossible to convey an adequate idea of the delightful variations in color and markings of this unrivalled mixture. 500 seeds, 30c; 1000 seeds, 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.35; ¼ oz., $2.50; oz., $10.00.

12. KENILWORTH GIANT PRIZE is undoubtedly the largest flower and longest stemmed Pansy in the world. The enormous flowers are of perfect form and of great substance. Petals overlapped and undulating. The rich colorings and markings are widely varied, some flowers being almost self-colored. 500 seeds, 30c; 1000 seeds, 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.35; ¼ oz., $2.50; oz., $10.

THE United States department of agriculture has issued Farmers' Bulletin 1053, entitled "Control of Cherry Leaf-spot," a fungus that lives through the winter on fallen leaves and infects the new growth of both sweet and sour varieties in the spring.

Propagating Privet and Spiraeas.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Will you kindly advise me regarding the best means of propagating Amoor River privet and also whether this privet is suited to this climate? Also, what treatment is best suited to the propagation if Spiræa Van Houttei?

Illinois. W. J. B.

Privet can be propagated by hard or green wood cuttings. Hard wood cuttings are made in the fall of the year by taking shoots eight to 10 inches long, stripping off the leaves, tying them up in bundles of about 25 and burying them outdoors with the tops up. In the spring plant them in rows, leaving enough space between each row for cultivating and weeding. Green cuttings should be made in the summertime and rooted under sash in a mild hotbed. Amoor River privet is suited to the climate of Illinois.

Spiræa Van Houttei may be propagated in the same way.

Schizophragma Hydrangeoides.

Schizophragma hydrangeoides must be included among the shrubs which flower in July. This beautiful climbing plant has not had a successful career in the Arboretum. Seeds were first sent here in December, 1876, from Sapporo in northern Japan with those of Hydrangea petiolaris, Syringa japonica, Phellodendron sachalinense and other interesting plants. A large number of schizophragma plants were raised and sent to other American and European gardens. Those planted in the Arboretum never flourished, and soon disappeared, probably because the right place was not found for them. Plants raised later also disappeared; and it is a matter of some satisfaction at the Arboretum that this beautiful plant, after 43 years of failure, is at last established on the administration building where it has flowered this year for the first time. It clings as firmly to the brick wall as Hydrangea petiolaris; the leaves are smaller, more circular in shape, more coarsely toothed and of a darker color. When in flower schizophragma is more interesting, although not as showy as the hydrangea, for instead of the surrounding ring of neutral flowers there are only two neutral flowers to each of the divisions of the large compound inflorescence; these neutral flowers are white, ovate, often an inch or more long, and hang on long slender stems an inch in length. Schizophragma appears to be an exceedingly rare plant in American gardens in which Hydrangea petiolaris often passes for it.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, July 26, 1919.

Storm Destroys Old Oak at Flushing.

New York and vicinity have recently been visited by violent thunderstorms, accompanied by heavy wind. Noteworthy features were the number of fine trees uprooted by the storm or struck by lightning. The Flushing section of that city suffered the greatest damage. Flushing, we believe, had the first nursery ever established in the United States, and long before it was incorporated with this city, its streets were lined with many fine trees. On the night of July 26, a large white oak tree on the grounds of Ellis Parker Butler, the author, was struck by lightning and literally torn to pieces. To give an adequate idea of the havoc wrought we quote from an article written about this tree by Everett P. Martin in 1915: "It is 17 feet in circumference, five feet from the ground; 18 inches above the ground it is 19 feet around. Its spread is 90 feet. One branch is 53 feet six inches long, while the tree is only 54 feet high. Professor Asa Gray, the botanist, estimated that the last surviving mate to the old oak, which stood on Parsons avenue until 1895, was 600 years old, and this is probably as old. To us, late comers to Flushing, who are 'strangers within the gates,' it seems remarkable that more attention has not been paid to this noble old tree by the generation of tree lovers who have lived here." Mr. Butler, who is a lover of nature, as well as a writer of good stories, has been quoted as saying that he bought the place in order to own the old oak tree. He and his family were away on a trip when the tree was destroyed. Another storm, which did not last over 10 minutes, struck Flushing on the afternoon of July 28, uprooting a great number of the large shade trees, and making some of the streets impassable for a time.

Kansas City, Mo.

FUNERAL WORK MOVES MOST OF SUPPLY.

Cut flowers are still scarce, but last week the supply increased slightly. All offerings are taken up quickly with the heavy demand for funeral work. Gladioli are more numerous with prices ranging from eight to 12 cents. Russell and Columbia roses are better and are offered at from five to 15 cents. American Beauties sell at $2 to $6 per dozen. Asters are arriving and the quality is none too good, but they help in making up the lower priced work.

NOTES.

Following a discussion of Sunday funerals by florists, undertakers, ministers and cemetery superintendents, a local undertaker, from an analysis of his records from January 1, 1916, to July 1, 1919, giving the distribution of funerals throughout the days of the week, shows that in point of numbers Sunday is in fifth place. With a steadily increasing tendency on the part of all commercial and educational institutions to reduce the hours of activity and give to employes at least one care-free day each week, those engaged in funerals should seek as far as possible to hold such services on some other day than the Sabbath.

H. Kusik & Co. report business on the increase but stock scarce. This firm is showing excellent gladioli, Russell, Columbia and American Beauty roses and a few asters.

T. J. Noll & Co. report supply below requirements, but conditions are expected to improve, especially if this section is favored with a little rain.

Captain W. R. Barnes, son of W. J. Barnes, has been relieved from army service, and will rest up before resuming his civilian duties.

Miss Lou Boggess reports good business—more than is usually expected during the summer months.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. reports good trade, especially in funeral orders.

Samuel Murray returned from Chicago, August 1.

HAVE TIGHT HOT-HOUSES BY USING

IT retains its elasticity indefinitely, prevents breakage of glass, and does not crack or peel. Withstands heat, cold and dampness. Will adhere to wood, iron, stone, etc. Beds perfectly, and lasts as long as the glass lasts. If the glass breaks, Elastic Glazing Composition can be cut out without injury to the wood, as it remains flexible. Can be painted over immediately, or left without paint.

Elastic Glazing Composition is used by the Government, several railroads, and specified by hundreds of architects.

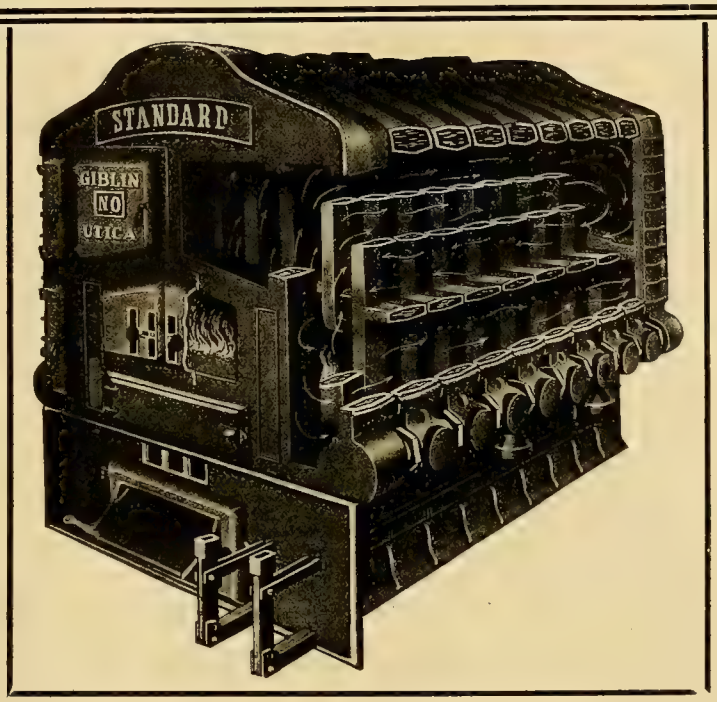
WIN $100.00 THREE TIMES



WE want to buy the services and talent of some bright persons to aid us in the selection of phrases, telling of certain merits of Our Boilers. We claim for Our Boilers these qualities:

(1) Long Duration of Fire.—"It Lets the Florist sleep."

(2) Saving of Fuel.—"What phrase shall we use for this."

(3) Saving of Labor.—"What phrase shall we use for this."

(4) Long Life Without Repairs.—"What phrase shall we use for this."

Long duration of fire, saving of fuel, saving of labor, freedom from repairs—are qualities and merits all founded and grounded on the distinctive construction of our boilers, namely: long draft travel, thorough absorption of heat, large and efficient flue surfaces.

We want to get the good advertising phrases, on the three points, described above and we are willing to pay liberally for them. We will pay $100.00 in cash for each of the phrases selected by us for advertising purposes. We will adopt one phrase (the best) applying to each feature. In the event of more than one person submitting a winning phrase, the full amount of $100.00 will be awarded to each. It is not necessary to own a Giblin boiler to enter this contest.

Full details of this contest will be made known on request.

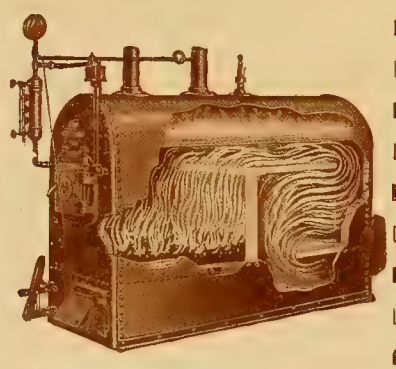
WHAT THE USERS SAY about the KROESCHELL TUBELESS BOILER

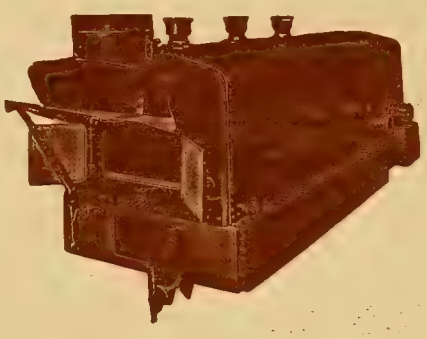
The No. 45 STEAM BOILER does the work of two boilers—saves fuel—needs less attention—is easily cleaned.—S. E. MUNTZ, DUBUQUE, IOWA.

The No. 34 TUBELESS STEAM BOILER you furnished us last summer for pumping and heating purposes is certainly a GEM. An easier, more effective, as well as economical boiler as to fuel consumption I have not seen.—GEO. JUERGENS, SUPT. FOR ARTHUR COCKROFT, NORTHPORT, L. I.

As our winter, which was the worst in years, is about over, we feel that we want to let you know that the No. 37 TUBELESS BOILER which we got from you last season did the business in a fine shape. We are indeed very much pleased with it.—H. R. FISHER, MARYSVILLE, KANSAS.



WHAT THE USERS SAY about our WATER TUBE STEAM BOILER



The Kroeschell Boiler I installed last year usually runs from 10 p. m. to 6 a. m. without attention. I do not have the least trouble to keep temperatures in the coldest weather. The boiler has given entire satisfaction. The Kroeschell is the best boiler we ever handled.—(Signed) CHARLES TOTTY, MADISON, NEW JERSEY.

Mr. Wendell is surely pleased with his No. 14 Kroeschell Boiler—it is a PEACH, that is all there is to it. We surely had some winter, which we all know. Our houses have never been below 52 degrees, and it was not necessary to force our boiler. Best of all, we saved two carloads of coal over a year ago.—(Signed) CROWN POINT FLORAL CO., CROWN POINT, IND. Hans Jepsen, Grower.

WHAT THE USERS SAY about the KROESCHELL HOT WATER BOILER

The No. 46 WATER TUBE STEAM BOILER is a wonder—a quick steamer and keeps up the steam. The easiest boiler in the world to clean and keep clean.—W. J. PILCHER, KIRKWOOD, MISSOURI.

Your No. 46 WATER TUBE STEAM BOILER is the finest steam boiler we have ever fired, and we have fired ELEVEN different makes before.—TRIPP FLORAL CO., WALTON, NEW YORK.

The TWO No. 46 WATER TUBE STEAM BOILERS are surely giving us satisfactory service. These boilers are internally fired and economical fuel burners, being very fast steamers.—NEW HAVEN FLORAL COMPANY, NEW HAVEN, IND.

Neither in the East or West, nor the North or South has any other make of boiler ever equaled the performance of the Kroeschell—installed for 3,974,605 square feet of glass in 1916-1917.

Thou Art the Queen of Flowers.

There came at purple even
An angel from the skies,
To bear a gift of Heaven
To gladden human eyes;
So now I see adorning
My green and dewy lawn
This flower of the morning,
Born at the early dawn.

Thou art the Queen of Flowers,
Thou sweet, enchanting rose,
The fairest in the bowers,
Kissed by the breeze that blows;
So sway my heart forever
And make it beauty's throne,
That I, indeed, may never
Dwell in this world alone.

Upon the air ascending
How fragrant is thy breath,
With dainty odors blending
Beyond the lands of death;
The holy incense offered
Upon the golden shrine
The sweetest ever proffered
Before the throne divine.

I'll pluck thee for the maiden
Who pledged her love to me,
Whose heart is richly laden
With its sincerity:
She shall become the wearer
Of thee, my rose divine,
For none indeed is fairer
Than this sweetheart of mine.

SWEET PEAS UNDER GLASS.

An Interesting Treatise by Wm. Sim, Well-Known Authority, Cliftondale, Mass., in the 1919 Bulletin of the American Sweet Pea Society.

Cultivation of Winter-Flowering Spencers

William Sim, the well known sweet pea specialist of Cliftondale, Mass., has the following in the 1919 Bulletin of the American Sweet Pea Society regarding the cultivation of the Spencer type of early or winter-flowering varieties:

"The site selected for building a greenhouse should be high and dry, with protection, if possible, from the northwest. The land should have a gravel subsoil, and if this is overlaid with eight inches to one foot of good loam, you have an ideal site for sweet pea growing under glass. Any good loam with the addition of half-rotted cow manure, with occasionally an application of lime, is well suited for sweet peas. It is entirely unnecessary to use decayed pasture land or to make a special compost and renew this every year, as I have some houses which have been producing fine crops each successive season for 15 years without any renewal of the soil. I believed that the results obtained did not warrant the expense of changing. We make a practice of spreading a coat of half-rotted cow manure over the whole surface of the soil. On top of this manure, we apply a liberal dose of air-slaked lime, which kills all worms, and also makes the process of mixing with the soil more congenial to those who do the work, by preventing the manure from sticking to the shoes. We mix this with the soil in the house and go down to the gravel.

House Construction.

"The house should be of even span running northeast and southwest. The sides should be at least eight feet high. The pitch of house should be steep, so that from the floor of greenhouse to the ridge would be about 23 feet. The front of the greenhouse should have seven feet of glass and one foot of concrete. The back should have five feet of glass and three feet of concrete. The ventilators of the roof should be continuous on both sides, and the side ventilators should also be continuous both sides and should be hinged to the eaves plate and be one foot deep and open from the lower side out. By having the side ventilation in that position, the draught produced, when opened, does not strike the plants the same as if placed lower down the sides. A house 41 feet wide is, in my judgment, about the right size. The rows should be planted three feet away from the sides and five feet between the rows. All heating pipes for a house this size can be placed along the sides without taking away light to any extent and giving an equal temperature throughout the house. In a wider house it would be necessary to distribute the pipes throughout.

Cultivation.

"The early type of sweet pea can be had in bloom at any season. This is brought about by timing successive sowings of seeds, and by regulating the temperature of the greenhouse afterwards. Seeds may be planted if the house is ready, directly where they are to grow. This is the best practice. If the house is not ready they may be sown in beds and transplanted or sown in pots and shifted. In sowing the seeds we use a marker 2½ inches deep and 2½ inches apart; this is made about 12 feet long so that a row can be marked off in a few minutes. One seed is dropped into every hole and the soil pressed together over the seed. It is essential, if good sweet peas are desired, that the plants should be grown the greatest length of time at as low temperature as possible until near the period when you wish the plants to bloom, when it will be necessary to increase the temperature in order to produce color and have the plants hold their buds. What seems to trouble most growers are mildew, aphids, red spider, bud drop and method of staking.

"Mildew is brought on through improper ventilation and manipulation of the steam pipes. From observations, mildew always starts in the house where the air is dead in the two corners where the steam supply enters. The headers of the steam coils being located there, an undue amount of heat is given off at all times, unless these are thoroughly insulated. Once the mildew starts in corners, and the house gets into a wet, clammy condition, the fungus spreads over a whole house in less time than it takes to write these lines. I have never used anything for a remedy, believing that prevention was a better course than trying to cure, and have not been troubled to any extent with it.

"Aphis will appear, and unless held in check will soon ruin a crop. We have used, for many years, fumigating tobacco dust. As soon as aphis shows itself we give the house what we call a double dose, that is, two applications the same night, giving the first at dusk and the other about 10 to 11 o'clock. This keeps the smoke in the house the whole night and will kill most of the aphids. On the following night, we give a single dose, setting off at dusk. In a house 41 feet wide, we use three rows of 12-inch pie plates, placed every eight feet apart for a double dose and 16 feet apart for a single dose. We cover the bottom of the plate with one inch of tobacco dust, making the center slightly conical. In setting the dust off we use an ordinary oil can filled with wood alcohol. We light the end of the spout and squirt a few drops of the flaming liquid into the dust, which will commence to burn a very little. This makes the work of lighting off very simple and speedy. The nights selected for fumigating should be as calm as possible, with the plants fairly dry and the temperature cool. Doses should be kept up frequently in quick succession so that all those emerging from the eggs are killed before they can do much damage and breeding commences. Fumigating may be continued for a few nights in succession without injury, but if repeated too often the plants will have a sickly look which, in sweet pea language, means stop. With good air, they soon emerge from this condition and obtain a fine, healthy apearance. If a house is absolutely clean at the time picking commences, it will hardly be necessary to fumigate the rest of the crop. If this has to be resorted to, the plants should be picked very clean and given a day or two to air out before picking commences again, as blooms permeated with tobacco smoke are very offensive.

"Red spider infects plants that come in direct contact with the dry heat emanating from steam pipes. Where the plants are kept a distance of three feet from these, red spider will scarcely ever show themselves. Many growers have heating pipes suspended from columns supporting the rows. It would be an impossibility to keep such vines clean; a house just large enough to be heated from the sides reduces the chances of red spider to a minimum, as the front and back rows are three feet away from these vines and the heat from these rises upward and circulates the air in the house, just as hot water circulates in the heating system, so that the hot air is "consumed" by the air of the greenhouse before the plants are touched.

Bud Drop.

"This trouble can be brought about at will. It is caused by the atmosphere of the house being overcharged with cold moisture. Ayonone who has had experience knows the minute he enters a sweet pea house if the conditions for "bud drop" exist. The trouble is more apt to come in periods of cloudy weather. On dull days the vines, through the absence of light, and by keeping up a flowering temperature, make a tender growth. The buds are also tender, and if they are to stick the atmosphere must be sweet and buoyant. In such times the manipulation of the steam pipes and the ventilators is the only means of combating the trouble. Ventilation should be given with great care so as to prevent too sudden changes; the ventilators should be opened a little at a time and the heating pipes gradually shut off. In cloudy periods they should be kept rather on the warm than on the cool side. I prefer a temperature of 67 degrees on bright days, and 58 to 60 degrees on dull days with a night temperature of 50 degrees to 52 degrees.

"I have never seen any bad results from the temperature dropping to 45 degrees or 46 degrees in zero weather. I think it is much better for the plants if it goes down to 46 degrees, for by keeping the temperature up to 50 degrees in zero weather means too much artificial heat, and the vines become thin and exhaust themselves. I believe the condition produced by the shutting off of steam pipes without proper attention to the ventilation is bad for the healthy growth of the plants. But the principal cause of bud drop is in the afternoon when the house is closed up to hold what is advisable of the sun's warmth. This heat is allowed to chill as the temperature drops. Enough pipes should be turned on in good season so the atmosphere will never get damp and sticky, but slowly fall to the desired temperature for the night. I have had no case of bud dropping for many years, but it keeps a man continually on the job attending to ventilation and steam pipes. Many miles are trodden each day in the month of March, especially when the sun is in and out. Along in April, when the days are long and the sun runs high, the sweet peas can be grown much cooler without having bud drop. The absence of light in mid-winter while keeping up a flowering temperature, makes the hardest time for the grower.

Tying and Staking.

"The best method of doing this is to run a wire lengthwise of the house directly over the row, 10 feet, if possible, from the ground. This should be held in place by cross wires at intervals of eight feet or 10 feet. While the plants are small, short bamboo canes, those that are practically worn out, about two feet to three feet long, are inserted every three feet in the center of the row. Commence at one end with a ball of white cotton string and run out horizontally along the sides of the row, going around the stakes and making a tie at every five or six stakes to prevent slackening. When the plants have reached the top of the stakes insert a longer and stronger stake every eight feet and tie the top to the overhead wire. A cypress stake, one inch square, is good for this purpose, or two or three long bamboo canes tied together make a very neat arrangement.

Pinching the Shoots.

"This I believe is entirely unnecessary with this type of sweet pea. The only thing I see about it is it makes the vines grow all to top, while the quality of the blooms is not increased, the amount of flowering shoots greatly diminished, giving a corresponding light crop, while what flowers are produced are so high up that it is harder to reach them, consequently the time consumed in picking is much more than if the blossoms were within easy reach. This type, if given sufficient space all over, will bloom as freely one foot from the ground as 10 feet.

Watering.

"In their early stages in the autumn the plants require considerable water, and in fine weather may be watered overhead, but as the days shorten the amount of water should also be lessened. I never use water overhead after the beginning of November. When in full crop, they require much water, and if the drainage is good, cannot be overwatered. Sheep manure is very beneficial at times, and may be applied three or four times in the season, washing it in. This may be applied at any time of their growth, but it is presumed that the grower has, in preparing the soil, added enough to carry the crop into full bloom.

Varieties to Grow.

"Since the dissemination of the Spencer type I have grown practically every variety that came along. I have done this because I have secured a great deal of personal enjoyment in seeing the new ones come into flower, but as money makers there are only a few; in fact, my salesman said to me, 'Grow only Christmas Pink.' This is a color that takes with the great masses, and if good, can always be sold in any quantity. Venus would be my second choice, being the finest formed flower of any; the color is blush pink. It is an immense cropper, producing more flowers than any variety I have grown. Mrs. Skaach would be my next selection, the color is much like Countess Spencer. White Orchid comes next, being the best white I have yet grown. There are a few more worthy of growing, such as Mrs. Chas. Zvolanek, lavender, Belgian Hero, orange; but what the public most desires is the first named one and the next four.

Marketing.

"Boston is the market for practically all my sweet peas, the bunch required there being one containing 25 sprays with an average of three blooms to the spray. Should the number of blooms to the spray be lacking, 30 or more sprays should be used, making a uniform sized bunch. Pickers of sweet peas never count more than a few times; they get to know the size without counting. I have never made a practice of grading the blooms. A much nicer bunch can be made if a few shorter stemmed sprays are put in the front of the bunch, with the longer stems at the back. Of course, growers of sweet peas know that at a certain period of the crop the stems are longest; after this period the length of stem gradually shortens, so that a crop at its best is a grade or two better than one that is past its best."

Poinsettia Cuttings.

There are many propagators who are successful with most of their stock, but who find the poinsettia difficult and very uncertain. One batch of cuttings after another meets with indifferent success. They wilt and do not come up again, or rot sets in and the whole bed damps off over night. A small oil boiler is connected up with pipes to get a little bottom heat, curtains are drawn along the front of the bed to keep off drafts, cuttings are taken and made with the greatest care, but while there is a good strike now and then, there is no certainty, and the problem remains unsolved.

There are several successful growers in Philadelphia, Pa., who root practically all the cuttings they put in; in fact, H. I. Faust of Merion, declares he roots about 105 out of every hundred. He potted 1,260 out of his last batch of 1,200 cuttings. He always counts his cuttings just before they are put in the sand, allowing from three to five over each hundred, so as to be sure that he will be able to pot up 100, and as he loses so few, he is always over. His stock plants are grown inside, all in six inch pots. Cuttings are taken when long enough; it does not seem to matter whether the wood is hard or soft. He says it does not make any difference whether the cut is next an eye or midway between. The leaves are not trimmed. His cutting bed is on the side of the house, facing north. The sand is fine Jersey gravel, and is used the entire season. When the cuttings are set, he gives one good watering, after that only a light spray through a fine rose to moisten the foliage, once a day in ordinary summer temperature, but in hot weather several sprayings. The first two days, if the sun is strong, he lays papers over them. There is no bottom heat. In 15 days, each cutting has a fine bunch of roots and is then potted. The outside of the glass, over the bed, has a light coat of zewentine, like whitewash. Three inches of top ventilation in the house is all that is allowed. He believes that men who have cutting troubles, coddle the stock too much. If they would just stick them in, and then treat them like anything else, the results would astonish them.

The Robert Craig Co. roots and grows poinsettias with the greatest ease. The stock plants are all in four-inch pots, grown inside. Batch after batch are taken as soon as ready at this season. 10,000 to 12,000 being in the bed all the time. The cutting bed is on the north side of an even-span house with cheesecloth covering on side of house, on the glass outside overhead, and a curtain hangs along the front to keep the sun from bed on bright days. There is a steam pipe turned on at night under the bed to supply a little bottom heat. Drafts of air are not allowed to strike the cuttings. They receive but the initial watering when put in, and light sprayings to moisten the foliage on hot days. They root in two weeks. Care must be taken in potting, not to let the roots get the least dry, as this causes the foliage to wilt and gives them quite a check. Cuttings are generally made short, so as to insure a good supply of bottom leaves. Mr. Craig has found that early in August, or even later, the cutting taken from a four-inch pot plant will still make a good three or four-inch pot plant for the Christmas trade. The plant from which the cutting is taken, then branches, and will, in the same pot, produce two or three good flowers which are in good demand from retailers for their basket work.

H. C. Woltewaite has no trouble with poinsettia cuttings, rooting them in a side bench in sand and in pans of sand. They get a good soaking at first, and again as they appear to need it. When first put in, they are covered with newspapers for a couple of days, and then the bright sun through clear glass, no shading whatever. The average is from 90 to 95 safely rooted out of a hundred.

This is the experience of three good growers, and it certainly does seem easy when you know how.

BEACON, N. Y.—Benjamin Hammond, well known manufacturer of insecticides and greenhouse paint, has been appointed to succeed himself as member of the board of education for a term of three years. The re-appointment of Mr. Hammond, who has served on school boards here for the past 28 years, was received with much favorable comment.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

While it is rather hard to keep up any degree of enthusiasm these dull August days, one does not need to go to sleep. This extreme has been known to occur, as the writer once saw a retailer in a small shop, who tilting his chair across the doorway, so he would get the air, fell fast asleep, which action did not add to the wideawake appearance of his store.

John Wanamaker, years ago, originated the August furniture sale, which was an instant success and gave this usually dull period great activity. It is now the month of the year for the sale of furniture over the entire United States. Not only is this department greatly benefited, but in all parts of the store goods are invitingly displayed to catch the eye of the increased number of visitors.

No matter how little business, or how light the demand, the shop should always look inviting. In the first place, it should be scrupulously clean; then a few nice, well-placed plants in jardinieres or pot covers on pedestals or tables. A wicker window box stand, with two or three ferns, is a good ornament and salable as well. All the store furniture, if kept dusted and rubbed up, looks new, but neglected and dusty, it appears second-hand.

Above all, keep the window and front of the store attractive. Every passer-by is a possible customer. The florist, from the decorative nature of his goods, can, and should, have his the most noticeable shop in the block. Porch plants, tubbed evergreens and gay blossomed window boxes should all find a place on the front, which, all together, will compel even those in the passing street cars to turn and have a look.

August, probably more than any other, is the preparatory month, when all the planned work of the summer, the alterations or fixing up, painting, etc., has to be hurried along and finished before the fall activities set in.

Hydrangea paniculata is now in. A large wreath of this, made solid, decorated with lavender or purple asters, and a good bow of ribbon, makes a fine window piece. While such designs may cost a dollar or two for material they are a paying investment, having good advertising value. Large, well made prepared magnolia or oak leaf wreaths, decorated in the same way, are attractive and can be used a number of times.

SUMMER BASKETS.
Small Basket of Gladioli and Rudbeckia.

There is now an opportunity to feature the Florists' Telegraph Delivery. There is no adjunct to the business that can be made more profitable than membership in this association. Nothwithstanding, however, its well-planned and smooth-running machinery, the greatest efficiency can only be obtained by the earnest co-operation of each member. Every order he works up in his own store means a clean profit of 20 per cent for himself, and the same for his correspondent. Each order creates new business, opening an avenue for flowers that did not exist before. In every way possible, this idea should be featured and kept before the patrons of the store and the general public all the time, as not one-tenth of the people know that flowers can be delivered in this way. The words, "Members of the F. T. D.," on the window is not sufficient. The emblem of the association, and other signs, should be on duty in the window or about the store all the time. Special window decorations, with tags of florists of other cities, copies of filled telegraphic orders, miniature telegraphic lines, etc., and other detail, should be made several times a year. One must be enthusiastic and believe thoroughly in this plan to get the most out of it. Simply to join and wait for the other fellow to send orders is too half-hearted to be successful.

Aster plants in pots are now in season and are good stock to carry. Sold either singly or several together in a pan or basket, they are quite showy. They are also useful to give color to a window box in which the other flowering stock is passe.

Some growers will have gloxinias in flower at this time. These are very rich-looking in their wonderful colorings, and just what particular people want.

Summer Baskets.

In the list of outdoor summer flowers, there is afforded a great variety in form and color with which to arrange many artistic and pleasing combinations. Among them are larkspurs in their various shades of blue, and those of the annuals in which zinnias, with their variations in form and size, from the miniatures up to flowers four inches in diameter, both single and double, which in their great range of colors from white to the most dazzling scarlet, afford material for very striking combinations. Gladioli are wonderful in their great variety; nothing could be more beautiful than well-opened spikes of the softly blended colors with their orchid-like flowers. Hydrangeas, in their whites, pinks and blues, are effective, working up well with other flowers. The summer cosmos, with its white and pink shades, is also a great favorite. Clematis paniculata, with its lace-like sprays of snowy white and delightful fragrance, adds an air of elegance to any combination.

Rudbeckia Golden Glow has a color all its own, which is adaptable to many arrangements. The gaillardia, with its orange and red combination, the coreopsis, the cornflower and many other of the annuals, can all be used to good advantage.

There is no question but certain distinct colors, or shades of the same, when combined, look much better than others. Max Schling, of New York, an authority on such arrangements, says that no combination is so helpless but what a spray or two of white or green will bring about a pleasing harmony. Gather together a few stems of the larkspur, add some pink zinnias; this, together with a spray or two of the clematis and sprigs of the golden privet, will make a very pleasing bunch for a vase.

Many very attractive combinations can be made with the above flowers arranged in the various types of vase baskets, some slender, with high handles, others full, with lower twisted handles, or again, in long narrow box like forms, with handles at the ends.

Pink gladioli, with larkspur, look well in a rather high vase basket, as does the rudbeckia, with white gladioli. A basket of zinnias in their varied colors is a picture in itself, as is the white and pink cosmos. Sprigs of the golden and green privet work in well in almost all these arrangements. Baskets of all red, all yellow or any other self color, are striking, and look best when the basket is of a shade that blends or contrasts with the flower, as pink in a blue basket, or all light blue in a pink basket. Reds are safe in a green or brown basket, as are yellow or orange shades, which also look well in white. Gilt or silvered baskets have a finish that is pleasing with almost any color. Ribbons, the width depending on the size of the basket, give a finish that is worth much more than the additional cost.

While the summer transient trade in all stores outside the shopping districts, is never very brisk, it is still less where there is no effort made to encourgage it by inviting displays. The cost of a few baskets arranged with outside flowers is no more than if the stock was carried in original bunches, as if necessary, it can be taken from the baskets and sold or used in design work. Having them made up and displayed, with always a few samples of this classy work on hand, means many sales that otherwise would have been missed. People frequently buy things that they had no intention of purchasing, but their beauty or attractiveness suggests to their mind that this would brighten the sick room of a friend and the sale is made.

"Convalescent" baskets of flowers and selected fruits of the season, such as peaches, pears, plums, grapes, etc., are very tempting, almost certain to be admired, and for which, if displayed, quite a trade could be worked up.

Table Decoration De Luxe.

We present herewith an illustration of an unusually attractive table decoration at the annual dinner of the officers of the Dodge Motor Car Co., every detail of the artistic arrangement, acknowledged by those present as one of the most unique and unusual they had ever seen, showing the clever work of "F. T. D." Pochelon, of the L. Bemb Floral Co., Detroit, Mich.

The illustration gives only a slight idea of the real beauty and artistic effect of this decoration. The tank which was 16 feet in diameter, two feet deep, holding nearly 500 gallons of water, contained nearly 500 fish of various sizes and colors, loaned by the city aquarium, while a number of ducklings swam contentedly on its mirrored surface. An electric fountain with various colored lights, formed the center, a beautiful effect further embellished with orchids, water lilies, ferns and cyperus.

Surrounding the aquarium, was a table about three feet in width, simply, but artistically, arranged with red roses, pansies and maidenhair fern. Just inside the table, and surrounding the tank, was a minature auto drive of crushed stone, on which were midget cars and their occupants. Inside of this drive, or more properly, the embankment, a two-foot slope made of green moss contained groups of dwarf euonymus representing shrubbery. Illuminating the drive, were small Japanese lampposts at intervals of two feet, and between these were candles. In addition, four large calcium lights, hidden behind lattice-work screens covered with smilax, cast a beautiful color effect. This feature, which was carried out by the chief lighting director of a telephone company, proved a splendid adjunct to the decoration. The seating arrangement was such that every guest had a view of the aquarium.

The banquet room itself was transformed into a veritable bower of beauty. The ceiling was practically invisible, being covered with smilax, loretta vine and palm leaves. The walls were screened with lattice work embellished with the same material. Statues were loaned from the art museum and were placed to excellent advantage throughout the room as were several boxwoods. Overhead, several Japanese lanterns gave the whole a somewhat Oriental effect. Needless to say, the arrangement required considerable forethought and many days and nights of careful planning.

Penn Awarded Gold Medal.

A gold medal, the highest award at the summer exhibition of the North Shore Horticultural Society, held at Horticultural hall, Manchester-by-the-Sea, Mass., August 6-7, was awarded to Penn, The Florist, Boston, Mass. The prize was for a dinner table decoration for eight covers. There were nine competitors. The arrangement, designed and executed by John Eisemann, artist, designer and decorator for Penn, consisted of delphiniums and Ophelia and Irish Fire Flame roses.

Card-Indexing Customers.

HOW IT'S DONE.

"I want some flowers for a birthday gift to a friend of mine," said the lady who entered the store. "Not one of your family, Mrs. Wilks?" inquired the florist. "No. There, those roses are what I want." And while he wrote the order, he remarked: "This is not the month when the birthdays come in your family, is it?" And she, to pass the time in casual conversation, replied: "No. Mine is in July, my husband's and my daughter's in November, and one of the boys' in January, and the other's in March." "Pretty well scattered through the year. And I suppose they are spread out the same way when it comes to days of the month?" "Well—no. Most of them are towards the end of the month. One is earlier, on the fifth." "Whose is that?" "That is Robert's." "All the others are late in the month?" "Yes," checking them on her fingers, "one on the twentieth—" "Your husband's?" "No. His is the twenty-fifth. My daughter's is the one on the twentieth. Henry's comes in between, on the twenty-third." "And yours still later?" "Yes. On the twenty-eighth."

The order was written. The lady made her exit, never dreaming she had done more than fill a little time with casual talk. The florist opened a drawer of his card index file. "Wilks—Wilks—here it is." (Writing.) "Mr.—November 25. Mrs.—July 28. Miss—November 20. Robert—March 5. Henry—January 23. I do not believe they will give the boys flowers, but I guess a note to the family a week before each of the other dates will bring me orders."

ODD MOMENTS BRING RETURNS.

Many a florist has added information to his memorandum book or card index in just such a way as that described time of sale. The state of the weather and the time of year are also important factors, the flowers being allowed to develop much farther in the dull months of winter. Many growers fall down in this detail, often cutting stock a day too soon in order to swell up a light shipment. Again they go to the other extreme in bright sunny weather of early spring in not cutting often enough, allowing the buds to open too far.

The soaking or curing of the buds immediately after cutting is most important. They should be placed in jars of fresh, clean water as soon as possible after being cut, and kept in a cool room free from drafts for at least from four to six hours, or preferably over night, so that the stems, foliage and flowers are full of water. They are then in a condition to ship and keep a reasonable time until placed in water again. Too often they are cut, sprinkled, and packed at once, or on the other hand, placed in jars of water that has done duty many times before.

Grading the stock into its various sizes is a great advantage in its favor when it is offered for sale. There is then no rough usage in handling or sorting by men who are often in a great hurry. All stock should be put up in bundles of 25, wrapped in a sheet of fairly stout paper that will come just above the buds but still leave them exposed, and reach almost to the bottom of the stems. Any paper house will cut the paper the desired size for the various grades which can then be stenciled or rubber-stamped with the grade and grower's number. The stock is now in a condition to handle conveniently and without bruising. Orders are quickly selected, being counted 25 at a time. They are packed in the original bundles, being more easily fastened in the boxes either by wooden strips or tape.

There has been but one objection made to this method of wrapping the stock, and that is from the buyers who at times find short grades mixed with the longer sizes. This is a matter that will soon adjust itself, however, as "honesty is the best policy," which the grower who will persist in such practices, will soon find out to his cost.

Not only roses, but much of the other stock that has to stand the rough usage of market handling, is the better for the grading and paper wrapper. Mignonette is greatly benefited as it snaps off so easily. Snapdragon is another flower that should be so protected. Heliotrope, bouvardia and forget-me-nots will keep much better when wrapped in this way. These bundles do not want to be rolled so closely as to bruise the flowers, and much of the bottom foliage can be removed to advantage; the string is to be tied outside the paper in the middle in small packages and near either end where more than one tie is necessary. When properly tied, the bundle is straight and open at both ends. Raffia is the best to tie with, when it can be had, as it does not cut the paper.

J. F. AMMANN, EDWARDSVILLE, ILL.
President Society of American Florists.

It is a question if carnations could not be better handled in this way, as so many flowers are broken off when they are being packed and taken in and out of jars in the various stages before being sold. While this method of preparation and protection of stock is becoming the practice of many in above. The conversation may have started out in quite a different way, and it may have ended in another fashion, but the casual chatter with which the salesman occupies his customer has often been made to divulge profitable leads in some such manner.

Since you find it is worth while to pass the time of day with patrons while making selections, writing orders, or waiting for change, why not get the most value possible out of the odd moments so spent? It it not necessary to question the customer closely; indeed it would be impertinent, not to say rude, to press a person for details of information when he is evidently not inclined to give it freely and easily. Tact—the first element of expert salesmanship—must be a predominating factor in handling people in this as in other dealings.

The neighborhood florist, the proprietor of a store in a residential district, can use the card index to better advantage than one in the business center of a large city. The florist in a small town or in the rural districts can employ it to great advantage. They are able to know their clientele fairly intimately, and gather bits of news and information without effort.

A YEAR AHEAD.

Often a florist who knows the effective use of personal correspondence and timely circularization, hears a bit of news and exclaims, "If I had only known that in time." Disgruntled at the opportunity that has slipped by, he puts the whole thing from his mind, never thinking that a birthday, a wedding anniversary, and days celebrated for other reasons, come again in another twlevemonth. Perhaps a year later, he hears the news, too late again, and repeats his exclamation, not realizing he did "know it in time." Perhaps it appears to him a trifling thing to jot down a memorandum and keep it for a whole year on the chance of securing an order. But such trifles constitute a successful business. Jotted down, one at a time, they mount up in the course of months and years to a surprisingly large mass of information.

Card index files, to be of greatest value, should be kept in proper form. One of the best systems for this trade consists of an index by names and an index by dates. The latter need only be a reference index to the former. In it, a card for each day in the year contains brief notations indicating which name cards are to be consulted for that day. On a dull day the florist takes out his date cards for days a week or so hence and sends out what letters and circulars he wishes. Keeping from five to 10 days ahead all the while, he can use a portion of a dull day each week to drill up a tidy amount of business by this method.

WHO DO YOU INDEX?

How extensive should a card index be? Each florist can tell best for himself what people are likely to be his customers. If he spends some time in thinking out whom he wants to reach, and why he wants to reach them, he will be able to construct for himself the basis of a card index system that will be btter than that devised for him in a fixed way by anyone else. One man who thinks that there is nothing like a card index for keeping track of people, says, "Everyone you meet is a possible customer of yours. But how can you reach him when you have something to offer?" This man includes a big field for himself when he says "everyone". But he cultivates the field to most advantage by endeavoring to ascertain just what point he can most easily get at in each person. Some women respond to suggestions that the abundance of flowers at a certain season makes table flowers inexpensive. In few houses are table flowers a regular thing. It is more often the case that madame provides them for a succession of days, or even weeks, and then lapses. The florist who has her indexed is able to renew her patronge when he sees an opportune time.

"Keeping everlastingly at it" is the prime factor in maintaining and drumming up trade, and the card index affords a guide and a stimulus to that end.

President Ammann.

J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., the president of the Society of American Florists, began his horticultural career in 1884 in the small greenhouses conducted by J. E. Jaeger at 1805 Sidney street, St. Louis, Mo., taking his turn at half of the night firing with the other grower, in addition to all of the day work, as was the custom at that time. In 1887, he started a small range at Alhambra, Ill., consisting of three houses 50 feet long, heated by means of brick and tile flues under the benches. After several years of prosperity here, he established the present plant at Edwardsville in 1892 with 3,000 square feet of glass. After 20 years of succesful business, the present J. F. Ammann Co. was organized, several of the older employes being taken into the firm.

The principal market for the company's products is St. Louis, Mo., all surplus cut flowers having been consigned to C. A. Kuehn, the well-known wholesaler of that city, during the past 26 years. Miscellaneous stock has been grown for the retail trade during that period.

The greenhouses are now in charge of LeRoy Smith, grower and vice-president of the company, while the secretary, E. H. Klein, is manager of the uptown store. As Mr. Ammann puts it, "we have never dabbled in seedlings or hybridizing, but have always been in the market for new things to keep our establishment up-to-date, and we now have about 60,000 square feet of glass."

Mr. Ammann was born in St. Louis, Mo., May 15, 1868. He was the first president of the Illinois State Florists' Association, elected to that office at the time of its organization 12 years ago, and is at present holding the position of secretary, having ably served in that position for several years. He stands high in the opinion of his fellow citizens of Edwardsville and is prominent in the business and civic interests of the city.

Vice-President Fetters.

E. A. Fetters, the vice-president of the Society of American Florists, was born in Detroit, Mich., September 3, 1872. When quite a young boy he entered the employ of a florist who had a range in that city, and here he worked early and late, until at the age of 18 years, he went to Cleveland, O., and jointed the force of the J. M. Gasser Co. at its retail store, where his skill and industry were quickly discerned, and his advancement was rapid. He devoted much attention to decorating and design work and many original floral effects arranged by him were sent out from this establishment. After five years of service here he joined E. Smith of that city in a partnership under the name of Smith & Fetters and opened a retail store, the business being a splendid success from its inception. This establishment enjoyed great popularity and numbered among its customers some of the most wealthy people of the "Forest City". After 12 years of successful operation, failing health compelled Mr. Fetters to give up active work and seek rest and improvement in the west where he remained for three years during which time he regained his former vigor and strength. He then returned to Detroit and opened a store on Woodward avenue. Later he acquired a store on Farmer street and built up a lucrative trade.

In 1915, he opened a large shop on Woodward avenue at Clifford street, the lease of which he sold at a great advantage in 1917, and now occupies a handsome store on Woodward avenue near Pallister street, known as his uptown establishment which has a large conservatory in connection, in addition to his attractive downtown store located on East Adams street.

Mr. Fetters is a man of most genial manner and is very popular with all. He has served as president of the Detroit Florists' Club for two years, is a member of the Board of Commerce, Rotary Club, Detroit Athletic Club and several fraternal societies.

PLANT NOTES.

Fall Propagating.

There are many of the plants used for bedding purposes that are better propagated in the fall, for cuttings are more readily obtained, root easily and allow time for the growing of good stock. Ivy geraniums, to have fine plants in the spring, are much better propagated at that time. Vincas for the spring sales propagated in September make fine plants by the first of May. The long shoots can be cut up to two eyes each and they will root in three or four weeks, then potted in 2½-inch pots and kept cool until February, when they should be potted into 4-inch pots and grown along the sides of the beds or benches. Abutilons should be handled in a similar manner. The tender tips should be used for the cuttings, and these should be kept well watered and shaded until roots are formed, when they can be potted and kept cool until towards spring. The pelargoniums that were cut back and dried off in August should now be made into cuttings and should be taken and placed in the cutting bench. There are also many plants that the stock should be looked out for at this time and a few plants lifted and housed before frost. Many growers prefer to raise their salvias from cuttings and in this case a few plants can be potted and grown on. Any extra good double petunias should be lifted. Pyrethrum or feverfew, coleus and the other soft wooded plants should be selected and potted that they may become established before cool weather.

Pansies.

The pansies for early spring trade should be placed in the frames that they may become established before freezing weather commences. Make the soil good and rich. It is the plants with large flowers in the spring that find the quick sales and these cannot be obtained in poor soil. Set the plants about five inches apart and water well after planting. Keep those of a kind together and plant all the mixed lots adjoining. There is more time wasted in the retail selling of pansies than any other flower, traveling back and forth over a mixed bed trying to pick out a nice assortment. This is especially so with some customers, and in setting out the plants try to prevent this as much as possible. When freezing weather comes cover the frames with sashes which will prevent the snow from lying too heavily upon the plants and also much freezing and thawing. If frozen for months and covered with sash no harm will be done, but if a warm spell should come on, the sashes should be raised to allow ventilation.

Roman Hyacinths.

The first bulbs to arrive will be the Roman hyacinths, and everything should be in readiness to properly care for them as soon as received. When the cases arrive the bulbs should be placed in a cool, dry place; if packed in bags they should be spread out either in flats or shallow boxes and placed where they will neither be too moist nor yet in too dry and warm a location. While it is too early to plant for the winter blooming, still a succession of plantings may be made every week until cool weather, when the balance can be planted up. Almost any soil will grow bulbs successfully but fine results are obtained with soil that has been thrown out from the carnation or rose benches and has lain out over winter to allow it to sweeten a little. When a fall pot plant is wanted a few of the hyacinth bulbs can be planted in bulb pots, but in growing for cut flowers flats are to be preferred for they are much more economically handled and do not require as much care. In planting the bulbs cover the bottom of the flats with about an inch of soil, placing the bulbs on this quite closely together, yet not touching, as can be done with other bulbs. The flat should then be filled with soil, which should be packed between the bulbs with the ends of the fingers. They should then be given a good watering, enough to wet the soil all the way through and settle it around the bulb. The flats should be placed outside and covered to a depth of about three inches with sand or coal ashes or something that will lie close enough to prevent drying out. A label should be placed at the end with the date of planting, so that the several plantings will be kept separate and can be readily moved into the houses. In four to six weeks they should be well enough rooted to bring them into the house, where they can be placed under a bench until they begin to throw up their flowering spikes.

Cyclamens.

In order to have nice large plants of cyclamens for another year, now is the time to sow the seed. This can be deferred until later and the seed planted at any time until the first of the year, yet it is much better to start them early and obtain a nice well-foliaged plant full of bloom in a 6-inch or 7-inch pot than a smaller plant with but a few blooms and flowers, which is sure to be the result with the later grown seed.

J. J. HESS, OMAHA, NEB.
Treasurer Society of American Florists.

Soak the seed for about 24 hours in tepid water and place the receptacle in a warm place, and plant in flats about one-half to three-quarters of an inch apart and there will be need for but little further labor until later in the winter. Be sure and have a light porous soil with a good proportion of leaf mold. The plants that are to be in bloom for Christmas should now be making good growth and be in the blooming pots. Any buds that show up at this time should be removed. Give the plants plenty of room and leave them from now on in full sunlight and in a cool, well-ventilated house. A sharp lookout for aphis must be kept up and regular fumigation continued. The plants for late winter and spring blooming can be kept out in the frames as long as safe from frost and then placed in cool quarters until time to give them more heat, which will depend upon the time they are wanted in bloom.

Paper White Narcissi.

The Paper White narcissi are now being received and as soon as delivered should be unpacked and spread out in flats, or on shelves in a cool, dry place. If they remain in the original cases, they are apt to become moist or heated when packed closely. They should be handled carefully and not thrown around so that they become bruised or the outer covering torn off. This covering is a great protection for the bulb, preventing it from drying. Plan how the bulbs are to be flowered, that is, how many are to be brought forward each week, and start at once to box up the first lot and then continue the plantings at the desired intervals. The flats or boxes should be prepared at once, not only for these but for the other bulbs. It is the general custom to use any old box that can be obtained, and they are, therefore, of different sizes and different depths. They do not pack closely when placed outside, neither do they seem to fit on the bench in an economical manner. Our experience has been, rather than to buy a mixed lot of boxes of different sizes, it is better and cheaper to purchase stock at the lumber mill and saw it into the proper length. Get one-half inch stock, three inches wide, for the sides and bottom and one-inch stock the same width for the ends. Saw the ends 12 inches long and the sides 24 inches. This will make a flat 13x24 inches by using four pieces for the bottom, and will allow proper drainage. A flat of these dimensions will hold about 50 Paper White narcissi or 60 to 70 tulips, and will cost but little more than the price of the box and can be made with much less labor, and when the boxes are all of one size they can be placed upon the benches with much saving of room. As soon as the bulbs are planted in the flats they should be placed in a dark, cool place and covered with soil or ashes until rooted, when they can be brought into the houses. The early planted bulbs will require good heat to bloom them successfully, much warmer temperature than the later planted bulbs.

Sweet Peas.

The early sown sweet peas will soon need some support and the plan most generally adopted by growers with peas inside is to pass strings around the plants fastened to stakes at each end of the row. If the rows are lengthwise of the bench stakes to which the strings may be fastened will have to be arranged about every 10 feet. As soon as the plants have attained a height of six inches the first string should be tied on and strings should be added every six to eight inches as the plants grow taller. The plants must be kept growing straight throughout their culture, so they must have strings quite close together for their twining arms to catch upon, and if when the plants are in bloom they are not kept tied up a large number of the flowers will have crooked stems. Care must be taken with the watering and until the plants show active growth they should receive but little water, being kept on the dry side. If allowed to be too wet, stem rot will result and the plant will die. If sweet peas are to follow the early chrysanthemums the seed can now be sown. Three or four seeds in a 4-inch pot will be right for this time, for they will have to grow in the pots about six weeks, the middle of November being about as early as the chrysanthemums can be cleaned out and the beds made ready. Careful watering will be the watchword for the young seeds and do not thin out too early. Wait until the plants are in good growing condition, when they can be thinned out to one plant in a pot.

Violets.

The single violets should be planted in the houses now as soon as the beds are ready. In lifting the plants in the field try to get a good ball of earth with the roots and avoid as much as possible the roots becoming dry. These roots are very soft and succulent and if they become too dry new roots will have to form and it will take some time for the plants to become established in their new quarters. The better way is not to try to handle too many plants at a time, but to lift a few and plant them out at once. When the plants are lifted all the runners should be removed and the plants as soon as set should be well watered. They should then be shaded during the warm days, the length of time necessarily depending upon how quickly they will take hold in the new soil. Give the plants all the air possible but avoid draughts if possible until they begin to show growth.

Anemones and Ranunculus.

The grower desirous of having something out of the ordinary in early spring should grow a few anemones and ranunculus. The bulbs are inexpensive and will help to increase the variety at a time when the flower users are looking for something that they have not seen all winter. No doubt failure in starting these bulbs has caused many growers to give up the attempt of their culture, but if once understood they are as easily grown as any other of the bulbous flowers. The bulbs should be planted in flats close together and covered with about half an inch of soil and then placed under a bench in a cool house. Under no circumstances water the soil or place them where water will drip upon them, for if they become wet they will surely rot. Place papers over the flats to prevent evaporation and in about three weeks the bulbs will throw out roots and the tops start. They can then be placed in pans or in the benches and grown as any other bulbs are handled.

Aster Disease.

When we mention the aster disease, those who have suffered by it, know exactly what we mean. Those who have not are lucky, to say the least. We will describe it by mentioning the symptoms. The first indication is a slight crookedness of the plants at about the time when transplanting is made in permanent beds. It appears as on one side, the leaves being defective—crippled. Soon these leaves show a yellow color, and presently the plant droops and wilts. An examination shows the bark of the plant to be black in parts, generally lengthways, but in due time this blackness encircles the stem and death results.

Our observations have not been sufficient to form a fairly complete survey. We have suffered some bad losses, and again we have escaped entirely. We also notice that when we have trouble, others have also. Two years ago, everybody had it, and some lost every plant. The disease generally starts in damp, warm, close weather and progresses rapidly. We have had it indoors and outdoors. Varieties differ in resistance: some are almost immune. We are almost tempted to believe it is sent to us adhering to the seed. We shall try to sterilize these another year. This year, we had tried Bordeaux spraying from the beginning—spraying the seedlings and plants every week from the time they were up. At present, we have some trace of trouble, but very little so far, and we are of the opinion that without spraying we would have lost every plant. This spraying must be heavy, in fact, we should linger long enough on each plant to make the liquid run down the leaves and fill the leaf-joints—as here is where the infection starts. We think it also advisable to remove every diseased plant and destroy it at once. We shall also try and produce our own seed from resistant plants.

Under glass, plants do not seed without artificial pollination, but outside we have never had trouble in getting a good set of seeds. Years ago, we used to worry about the black aster beatles. Next came the tarnished plant bug, a serious pest to be sure, but now in this disease, we have a genuine "flu", one that threatens the aster business, at least in this vicinity—Ohio.

THE CARNATION.

Summer Treatment of Field Plants.

The time remaining between now and when the field plants are transferred to the greenhouse, is a very important period of their growth, especially in sections of the country where the weather is hot and the ground has become very dry. To meet a situation like the foregoing, frequent and continued use of the cultivator should be resorted to. If the land has been properly cared for up to this date, the fine-toothed cultivator is the best to use from now on. There is no more important part of the work in caring for the plants while they are in the field, than that of cultivating or keeping the surface soil open, and it should be borne in mind that this is the main object of the use the cultivator is intended for, rather than that of checking the weeds. The weather has been very favorable for clearing out the weeds, so that the lack of sufficient help or neglect are the only excuses that can be offered for the land not being clean and in good shape.

From the last week of this month, throughout August, is the time when most of the carnation plants are lifted for benching, and it is also the time, while still remaining in the field, that the plants make their best growth, provided they are given reasonably good care. As with everything else, there is the right and wrong way of using the cultivator. Earlier in the season, before the plants had made a great deal of growth, it was all right to cultivate deep, but now it would be a mistake, because the principal purpose of the cultivating from now on is to create a fine surface mulch to retain the moisture and protect the roots. A study of the root action of the plants helps a lot in forming a good idea of the proper way of cultivating. The roots will be found to extend through the soil to about the same distance as the height of the plant. Those plants that have been allowed to run up to a few long shoots before being topped back, will have roots of the same proportions, while short, sturdy plants, to which careful attention has been paid as regards topping, will have shorter and more fibrous roots. Care must be taken not to disturb these roots or to throw up the soil around the plants to form a ridge, or in any way cause a hilling up of the soil around the plants. After the cultivator has been over the soil between the rows, it is a good plan to use a hoe to loosen up the surface soil between the plants so as to make it conform to the same evenness as where the cultivator has been.

TOPPING.

As before mentioned, this is the time for the best growth of the plants, and it will be necessary to go over them at least once a week to pinch out the tops of the growth before they lengthen out too much. They cannot all be taken care of at the same time, owing to some of the shoots not being far enough advanced to be attended to properly, and every few days will find some shoots that need attention. Plants intended for benching, and which are expected to produce a steady crop of flowers throughout the winter season, should not be allowed to advance far enough to bud up and flower at this time; if they do, it will curtail their productiveness later on. If carnation flowers are wanted from the plants in the field, only the surplus plants that are not needed for benching should be allowed to bloom, and they ought to have been planted in a space by themselves.

PREPARATION IN THE HOUSES.

While the benching of the plants is a big job for the carnation grower, the work can be done much easier when the preparations are carried out in a systematic manner beforehand. The emptying of the benches, cleaning out of the houses, and any repairing needed to be done, should be pushed forward without delay, and in doing this work, be sure to make a thorough job of it so that there will be no excuse for any trouble that may come up later on by careless preparation. A mud shading can be thrown on the glass, so that even though the heat be excessive, the work can be done with a reasonable degree of comfort. Do not spare the limewash. After all the repairing of the benches has been done, give the inside boards a liberal application of lime wash, also the wood or cement sides and ends of the houses. Another thing that pays to look out for, is to see that the wire rings are properly taken care of when taken from the old plants, also that the length wires are adjusted at the end of the benches, so that when needed again, they will be easy to get at.

J. K. Stock.
Treasurer Detroit Florists' Club.

PREPARING THE SOIL.

A good soil is a very essential part of the culture of carnations, for without this as a foundation for the plants, it is impossible for them to produce the best results. The materials that form the principal parts of making up a good soil for growing carnations are a live, loamy soil and well-rotted stable manure. The term well-rotted, means that the manure should have been removed from the barns and stacked outside long enough for its fresh green state to have left it, but not long enough for it to have dried out or burned to powder. The manure should be used in proportion of one part manure to three parts of soil, thoroughly mixed together. The best soil to use is the rotted turf or sod from a cattle pasture. Most of the leading carnation growers prepare their soil or compost the season before it is to be used, which is the best method. Others plough up a strip of sod land in early spring, then when the grass has dried out of it, add the manure, while others do the mixing at time of bringing the soil into the houses and equally good results are obtained from each method. It depends greatly on the thought and care that the man in charge of the work puts into it. An experienced grower who has handled carnations for any length of time, can easily tell by the texture of the soil whether it is suited to the carnation plants.

The next question that comes to the writer's mind, is one that is so often asked, especially by the new beginner in the growing of carnations, and that is whether it is a good plan to put a layer of manure on the bottom of the benches before putting in the soil, and to answer the question, I will say, Yes—if the manure is well rotted. I have followed the plan for several years, and have obtained good results from it, finding that when the roots get down to the manure, the plants have arrived at the stage when they are greatly benefited. Be sure that the compost is broken up well before being put into the benches; it is not necessary that it be pulverized, but the coarse lumps should be well broken up. Fill up the benches even full, without pressing down; it will then settle down to the right depth, and if the soil is very dry, it is best to give it a watering, allowing it to stand over a day before putting in the plants.

THE ROSE.

Pruning.

Perhaps there is more pruning done during August than any other month in the year, as plants that are pruned then are the ones that usually produce the Christmas blooms, and, as a rule, the August pruned stocks are not allowed to produce a cut until the holidays. By pinching each growth until the operation is timed for the holidays, strong, sturdy stems with heavy buds are the results. Still there are times when the plants make a wonderfully strong start and some late fall flowers are cut. Or, perhaps a house is brought in about December 1, so as to come in again the latter part of Feburary, when there is always a good demand for good stock. Of course, the grower can better determine these details of the cropping according to his local demand, etc., but the pruning must be done not later than August 20, for best results on most of the commercial varieties.

To begin with, the plants in the solid borders should have been ripened up gradually as suggested in a previous article. The solid borders can be dried for about a month before pruning. We will assume that this has been done, and will now give the directions as best we can for the pruning, etc. First, place a man on each side of the bed, (any one can do the first part of the work,) to cut each and every tie on the plants, to be followed by the pruners The pruning should be done by someone skilled in the art, as good judgment is required here. We usually cut out all the old, hard, dried-up looking growths and leave only the firm good active looking wood, and then prune to about two eyes, sometimes three on the current season's growth, following cut each cane carefully and leaving the eyes to the outside as much as possible, The pruners should be followed by the men who do the tieing, as the plants should be tied at once close to the stakes before any growth starts, otherwise the work will go along much slower, and any number of young growths may be broken off if the tieing is left until the growth starts. Remove all the brush from the beds, but let the old mulch remain until later. We suggest letting the plants start without watering, but they should be syringed every day in the meantime, or just before the plants break, the old mulch can be removed and an inch or so of the top of the soil removed. We usually do this with small garden hoes. This is not absolutelly necessary if one has the plants low down in the borders, and it is merely done from year to year to make room for the many mulchings the plants will require through the season. Be sure to leave the beds perfectly level after they are scraped with the hoes. Some prefer to hoe the beds, but we have found that it disturbs the roots too much, so we simply scrape off what soil we want removed as described above. We still hold back water until the first growth is several inches long, and then we increase the amount gradually until this growth is pinched and ripened. Then we apply to every 400 square feet of surface about 50 pounds of good ground bone (button bone preferred.) A cheap grade of bone meal is better off in the bags as it is false economy to use any thing but high grade material. The bone should be put on evenly and watered in so that there is very little of it noticable on the surface of the beds. Some prefer to apply the bone and a mulch at the same time, but we think better results are obtained by applying the mulch after the first growth is ripened and breaking again into new growth. Then we apply a fairly good mulch of good cow manure, about an inch in depth, washing it in with the hose. At this stage of the work, the plants are usually advanced far enough along to take the average amount of water, care being taken to water rather sparingly during a cloudy spell of weather, as the roots, of course, are not far enough advanced to take care of the plants if overwatered.

We prefer to remove the buds by pinching them as soon as they are unfolded, going back to a good firm eye, even if this takes us back on the growth to the two or three first eyes.

Strong wood and breaks are required to produce good blooms, and this can never be accomplished by merely snipping out the bud alone. The above suggestions we have followed to the letter for years, with excellent results. If the foliage should start out with poor color, streaky and weak, it is often caused by overwatering before any root action has taken place. That is why we advocate starting the plants off in dry beds, as they usually break in good color and seldom burn on hot days.

If the foliage has a tendency to wilt, spray overhead frequently, but slow up on the watering as more foliage is burned by having the plants too wet at the root, than too dry, especially at the starting period.

The pruning on the carried over stocks on raised benches is of course done the same way. The only difference, as stated in our last article, is the removal of at least half of the old soil, and replacing it with equal parts of good, fresh soil and cow manure, to which has been added a liberal amount of bone meal. The young stock should now be nearing the stage where a few flowers can be allowed to come here and there on the strongest plants.

Look at the plants that you think should be allowed to bloom, and if the flower or flowers can be removed, and be hardly missed from the plants, then cut them: if not pinch them again, and in this way increase the size of the plant. Keep all the smallest plants pinched until they overtake the ones in size that have produced a few flowers. In this way, the plants are evened up, and each and every plant will work together later on.

Premier, at this writing, is coming along nicely, although two weeks of dark, rainy weather greatly set back everything indoors and out of doors the first of July, but they are now up and going again, and for Premier and Columba, we predict a future.

Columbia has had a good tryout, and has made good in many places but there is much to learn about any new variety before one gets to doing them right and we are sure that both of the above roses are going to produce some really wonderful blooms later on, when they have reached their level.

Premier, (perhaps owing to the Russell blood), will be a rather bad actor at times, as it also spots easily, and has a tendency to mildew, two faults that have been easily overcome in many other varieties, with the exception of Russell, (in our case,) which we found we could not make an all-the-year rose out of. We lay no blame to Russell, however, for many others are doing it fine. Yet we are inclined to think that Premier, when it gets going, is going to crowd Mrs. Russell for first place in that class of roses. It is very similar in color, looks like a good stemmer, with the petalage and very much better foliage and a better habit, not mentioning the fact that it is one of the most fragrant roses in commerce.

It surely looks like a winner at this stage, and we trust that our faith in these two varieties and our predictions may come true, as there is room for a really good pink rose at any time, especially one that is large and full, and one that can be depended on every month in the year, for the grower likes to have something that will at least keep down expenses during the summer, and good pinks until Russell came along were rather scarce at this season. Shawyer has been an excellent summer rose also, with us, and is, we think, one of the finest roses in commerce to those who can grow it.

Intensive Use of Greenhouse Space.

H. I. Faust, Merion, Pa., several years ago, replaced several small and old houses, with one, 40x200 feet, King construction. This, he discovered, was by far the most intensive use he could make of the ground. He has since been experimenting, and finds that the high overhead space necessary in such a wide structure is available for bringing on and finishing his six to eight-inch Teddy, Jr. and Scottii ferns, which stock is one of his specialties.

This aerial space is sufficient to provide for 1,200 plants. The rows on either side near the eaves are hung on hooks, screwed into the sash bars. The others are suspended from the iron frame foundations of the house or hung from pipes laid on these cross pipe supports.

The plants in place, as seen in the accompanying illustration, are well up out of the way, where with plenty of room and light all around, they develop into splendidly finished stock. A recent sale has taken several hundred out of the center, which will soon be replaced. Mr. Faust does not believe that those on the tables are interferred with in the least, as while, of course, the roof plants throw some shade, there appears to be sufficient light for those coming on below.

Poinsettias are a specialty here, young plants being raised by the thousand for the trade, and grown on later for the Christmas demand. They appear to root here as freely as geraniums. Cyclamens are his most important winter crop. These are now in 2½ to 3 and 4-inch pots, strong stock which will soon get a shift. A new house just finished, is built to grow on his six and eight-inch stock. The sides are continuous sash 36 inches by six feet, hinged to admit of all possible side ventilation. A new house, 30x200 feet, is in course of erection, which will give much needed room for a large block of Christmas peppers and other plant novelties for the holidays.

Candytuft.

One of the best of the white flowers for cutting is the candytuft. The hardy perennial, Iberis sempervirens, flowers outdoors in the border early in May and into June. It makes stems 10 to 12 inches in length, with good heads of bloom of purest white, valuable for design work. The annual candytufts flower the latter part of April. Seed for these is sown in the autumn. The giant flowered Empress is one of the best of the white varieties, producing large heads of bloom on long stems. A lavender colored variety is also good stock. Successive sowings will produce a continuous crop of flowers during the entire season. The accompanying illustration is a section of a bed growing in a rock garden, showing its hardiness in an exposed position.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

August Care of the Plants.

The principal feature in connection with the growing of chrysanthemums during the month of August, is to give the necessary parts of the work your closest attention. There is not a time during the plant's season of growth when this is as important as at the present. The weather is now very severe on the plants under glass, and unless the watering and syringing is attended to properly, it will take but a very short while before the plants will commence to suffer badly. They are growing vigorously, and with the soil filled with roots, they need an abundance of water as well as liberal syringings. It is not good for the plants for the soil to be continuously wet; the better way is to water well when necessary, then allow the beds to dry out to a reasonable degree before watering again. When the foliage has that deep green color, with a greyish caste on the newest growth, you may be sure that the plants are being watered properly, and that the root action is in the best of condition, but when the young foliage at the top of the plants commences to have a yellow tinge and wilts easily from the sun, it is a sure sign that the plants have had too much water, causing the roots to back up and not work freely. The best thing to do when the plants get in this condition, is to water less, and in extreme cases, a light dressing of air-slacked lime, scattered over the surface of the soil and watered in, will freshen things up and help the plants regain their healthy color.

MULCHING.

If the beds have not been mulched, the plants will be greatly benefited by having a thin layer of partially rotted manure spread over the surface of the soil at this time. The purpose of the mulch is to protect the roots from the scorching rays of the sun and give needed nourishment to the plants. The early planted stock and such varieties as are now hardening up their wood, are particularly in need of this mulch to encourage them in their vigorous growth. Do not make the mistake of using a very fresh manure as a mulch to throw off ammonia gases which will destroy the lower leaves of the plants and cause a forced growth. Also, do not make another serious mistake of applying a very wet mulch, spreading it over the bed in the form of a mud plaster to crust up and exclude the air from penetrating the soil, but allow the material to lay loose. The roots will quickly work into it and bind it together. If good rotted manure cannot be had and fresher material has to be used, add about one-half light loamy soil with it.

LIQUID MANURE.

Some of the early varieties are now beginning to form their buds, and after they are well set, it will be a great benefit to the plants to water them with liquid manure about once a week. Cow manure makes the best liquid manure for chrysanthemums. The grower who is fortunate enough to have a manure tank to supply the liquid through the watering system, can easily arrange for the mixture, but those who have to use a barrel to make up the liquid in, should first see that the barrel is well cleaned and burned out so that there will not be any substance left to cause trouble. One of the handiest articles that a grower can have on the place is a Kinney pump, which can be attached to the water faucet and the liquid manure drawn from the barrel and applied through the hose to the plants. The quantity of fresh cow manure to a 50-gallon barrel of water, when using one of these pumps, should be about two bushels, and when the liquid is applied direct from the barrel to the soil with a watering can, cut the quantity of manure in half. Put the manure into the barrel, fill with water, and allow it to stand 24 hours before using. The plants derive the most benefit when the liquid is applied on a bright day, but under no consideration should it be done while the soil in the benches is very dry. When such is the case, water first with clear water, then after five or six hours, apply the liquid manure.

SUPPORTING THE PLANTS.

It is hardly necessary to remind anyone who is growing single stem bench chrysanthemums of the importance of giving the plants the support that is necessary for them to make their best growth. Yet, we often see benches of plants that are not supported in any systematic way and are almost allowed to get along without any supports to their growth, which is a very poor policy, and only results in inferior stock. The first putting on of the strings or stakes and attaching the stems is the hardest part of the work. After that, a man can take care of a large number of plants, if allowed to attend to the tying regularly. The pompons, single and anemone varieties have now arrived at the stage when they also will need to be supported. Most of these plants are being grown with several shoots in bush form to make sprays of flowers. They are harder to take care of in the way of tying up and supporting than the single stem plants, but there is a good demand for fine sprays of pompons, and it pays to take pains with them and there is no better way of supporting these plants than the upright string method with the branches drawn up to the string by loose ties. One tying for each branch will do for many of the dwarf growing varieties, and if the job is done well, at the first tying, the taller varieties will need very little extra tying up.

SPRAYING WITH INSECTICIDES.

This part of the care of the plants is of particular importance at this time. The tops of the plants are getting set to form the buds, causing a closer growth, which is just the place for the aphis and other insects to settle in, and unless the spraying is kept up regularly, the pests will get the upperhand and cripple lots of the growth. The plants should not be left longer than one week without being gone over once. The wide open ventilators and door is one of the reasons for lots of the insects getting into the greenhouse, and to keep a check on them, it is necessary to use the sprayer continuously.

CARE OF THE POT PLANTS.

The plants being grown in pots in bush form, whether for exhibition or retail sales, need the closest attention from now on. They require lots of water, and should never be allowed to suffer for it Care should also be taken to see that they are properly syringed. Some varieties more than others become infested with red spider, but all of them need a good syringing of the underneath parts of their foliage to keep them thoroughly clean. It is also very important that the plants be staked up and the branches properly supported. All topping of the shoots should now be stopped. This will cause the branches to become heavier, and unless they are well supported, a number of them will get broken. Bush plants that are being grown outdoors or in a greenhouse bench with the intention of lifting them in a week or two should also receive the closest attention. It is none too soon to lift and pot the earliest varieties. Pay particular attention to seeing that there is plenty of drainage in the pots, and do not over pot. Water well at potting and moderately afterwards until the plants become thoroughly established again. Stand in a partially shaded place and syringe two or three times a day until the roots have become well started. These plants need to receive the same attention as regards tying and keeping clean of insects as do the other chrysanthemums, and after they have become well established again, they are greatly benefited by occasional waterings of liquid cow manure.

TAKING THE BUDS.

In looking over our benches of plants, I find some of the early varieties forming their buds, and the Early Rose and Early Frost are about ready for taking. By the time this article gets into print, there will be some of the other varieties that can be taken, and from August 20 on, the buds can be taken with safety on any of the varieties as they appear; that is, if the plants have had the proper care as regards pinching out the side shoots, etc., but it is useless to take a bud when the side shoots have been allowed to become four to five inches long. Only a few of the buds will be ready for taking at the start, but when the plants have been well cared for, they will come along in right order and should be taken as they appear.

Azalea Indica Alba.

The azalea is almost certain to attract the attention of growers of hard wooded plants, who, it appears, will be compelled by the rulings of the federal horticultural board to raise a family of azaleas, which shall be wholly American. It is an established fact that azaleas will grow in this climate, some parts of the country no doubt being better, climatically, than others. The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a bed or bank of Azalea indica alba, in the beautiful grounds of John Wanamaker, Jenkintown, Pa. Superintendent John Dodds states that these plants withstood the severe winter of 1917-18 without protection, and receive no more care than rhododendrons. It would appear that such stock, planted in nursery rows, with only the protection of wind breaks, could be grown successfully and would, in its various sizes, find a good market for forcing plants for Easter. Large, well flowered white azaleas are unexcelled for Easter decorations in churches, and later for the important weddings that usually follow.

A close examination of the illustration will show the plants to be as thickly set with buds as are usually seen on the best imported. A tree wistaria on another part of the lawn, thickly covered with its light blue pendant and graceful panicles, was an object of great beauty

FLORISTS' PALMS.

Overcoming the Labor Shortage.

In these times of labor scarcity in the florist trade, it is indeed a fortunate grower who is able to keep his work up to the pre-war standard, for in most establishments, it has been a continual struggle to perform the regular work with a 50 per cent force, and the situation does not improve very rapidly up to the present time. This condition acts as a handicap to those interested in the growing of palms, for during the midsummer season, there is much work that requires immediate attention in order to take advantage of the best growing weather for this class of stock, the warm days and humid nights combining to encourage rapid growth. No time should then be lost in getting the palms repotted, cleaned, spaced out sufficiently to insure shapely growth, and then properly cared for in the regular routine.

The action of Plant Quaratine No. 37 has, no doubt, encouraged larger importations from Europe this spring than have been made for some years past, even though the expense of such importation has been very high, but in the present conditions that are found in the trade outlook, it would seem that both home-grown and imported stock will find a ready market, provided that the stock is presented in good condition. Prices will rule higher than in former years, and with the increased expense attached to every part of our business, this is a matter to be expected.

Such being the situation, it is the part of wisdom to make such preparation as we may with the stock at hand, and one of the first things demanding attention is the cleaning of any plants that are affected with insects, for the various scales and thrips that attack palms, propagate with the utmost rapidity in hot weather. With a small stock to handle, it is not an impossibility to sponge the plants thoroughly, then give them a dip, and thus make a reasonably clean job of the lot, but where one grows in wholesale quantities, the sponging is liable to be forgotten, and spraying and dipping, and in some cases fumigating, are the methods that find the most followers. The vaporizing of nicotine is a valuable method of control during the winter months, but there are few places equipped with a special steam system for doing such work in the summer, and consequently, spraying and dipping are the most practical methods for the majority.

The chief materials in use for this purpose are solutions of whale oil soap and nicotine, these ingredients being used in varying proportions, according to the species and condition of the plants that are being treated. A safe solution for most plants is in the proportion of ¾ ounce of the soap and one teaspoonful of 40 per cent nicotine to one gallon of water, but some plants, and also some insects, will stand more drastic treatment than this, so the grower must be guided to some extent by experience.

It is not easy to lay down hard and fast rules for various operations that come before the plant grower for consideration, and this question of dipping is one that requires some exercise of judgment, remembering that it is wiser to give two or three applications of moderate strength than one that is just a little too strong.

Repotting is the second important matter for the grower to consider, and as a general rule it is best not to give too large a shift, it being a fact that the majority of palms will make stronger growth after the roots reach through the soil to the pot than they do when planted out in an excessively large pot. Firm potting is advisable, from the fact that the palms will be syringed freely during the hot weather, and if they should be potted in a loose and spongy manner, the soil is likely to hold too much water for the best welfare of the plants.

Emory B. Hamilton, London, Ont.
Vice Pres. Canadian Horticultural Association.

There are palms that are somewhat "finicky," or rather peculiar in their soil requirements, but such species are not common in the florist's list, and the kentias, arecas, livistonas, seaforthias, etc., that comprise the ordinary stock, only ask for an moderately good soil, such as would be used for potted stock generally.

Many palms will endure full sunshine, if gradually inured to it in the open air, but when grown under glass, some shading is needed, either in the form of shading on the glass, or else fibre cloth tacked up inside, the first method being the cheaper and usually more efficient for protecting the plants.

During the heated period, some night ventilation is beneficial to the plants, the non-ventilated houses that were favored in parts of Europe for palm growing, not being adapted to our more trying climate.

Canadian Horticultural Association.

The twenty-second annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, the programme of which was announced in our issue of August 9, page 140, opened at 10 a. m., August 12, at the Prince George hotel, York and King streets, Toronto, Ont., with an excellent attendance, much credit being due to the convention committees of the Gardeners' and Florists' Association and the Retail Florists' Club for their untiring efforts toward the success of the meeting and the enjoyable entertainment features which aided in making the gathering one long to be remembered by all present.

The visitors were graciously welcomed by Mayor Church, the response being in the able hands of E. B. Hamilton, of Toronto. President George Douglas read his annual address which was received with interest and the report of the secretary-treasurer, H. J. Eddy, of Westmount, Que., and other business occupied the balance of the opening session. The features of the afternoon of the first day included a discussion led by George Thompson, of Toronto, and W. C. Hall, of Montreal, the topic being "Private Gardening," followed by an interesting paper on "Greenhouse Construction" by W. O. R. Cobb, New York. In the evening, W. F. Harries, Buffalo, N. Y., read a paper on "Landscape Gardening and Hardy Shrubs," and W. E. Groves, of Hamilton, handled his subject, "Co-operation," in a most capable and interesting manner. The Thursday morning session was taken over by the Retail Florists' Club. A report was made on the questionnaire sent out by the club some time ago with a view to increasing the scope of the retailers' field throughout the Dominion and this brought a lively discussion. In the afternoon, with the club as hosts, the convention visitors were splendidly entertained at Long Branch, the occasion being an outing with a well arranged programme of athletic events. The Thursday morning session, as announced included a paper, "Bulbs and Their Future," by Herman Simmers, Toronto; the report on plant registration of H. J. Moore, Niagara Falls, question box, disposition of unfinished business, the convention closing with the election of officers for the ensuing year. In the afternoon the delegates were guests of the city, a tour of Toronto being made with visits to the estates of Sir J. C. Eaton and Sir Henry Pellett, refreshments being served at the latter. In the evening, the annual banquet was held at the Prince George hotel. Friday was devoted to a trip across the lake to Queen Victoria park, Niagara Falls, Ont.

A thoroughly enjoyed feature of the many hospitalities was the luncheon served at the establishment of Miller & Sons, well known growers at Bracondale, Ont.

PRESIDENT DOUGLAS' ADDRESS.

It is my pleasant duty to extend a most cordial welcome to the delegates assembled at the twenty-second annual convention of the association. I trust that unity of purpose and harmony of action will characterize all our proceedings. This morning, in the presence of this goodly company of leading horticulturists gathered from all over Canada, I am in somewhat of a reminiscent mood. I can picture, in my mind, 20 years ago, when this association was formed. With the progress that has been made in horticulture since that time, the friendships made, and the good done, we ought to be proud of the past, and look to the future with a stout heart, for there is yet great work for us to do.

Now that peace is declared, and we have turned our thoughts to reconstruction, I feel that today we, while in session, should consider and bring about a reconstruction that will make for unity of the branches in horticulture. Advance the art, and go out to this great country with a message of enthusiasm and encouragement for others. We have come to the time when we, as horticulturists, have to set an ideal for our coming men.

I recommend that, a committee of prominent horticulturists be appointed to draw up a standard to be studied and a correspondence course started to stand examination and secure a certificate from the Canadian Horticultural Association with the letters F. C. H. A. In my opinion, I have no hesitation in saying that with this ideal set, our young members will improve in work and knowledge, and thereby add to our membership, men of the highest standard. I would also recommend this association should have a convention of not less than three days to be divided as follows: One day for the grower, one day for the retailer and one day for the private gardener, and that the executive committee be selected from these branches.

To further horticulture, I recommend that a committee be appointed to interview the general manager of the Canadian national exhibition to the end that we have a representative on the board to look after horticultural matters.

I am very pleased to report that the authorities in Ottawa are interested in the movements taking place in regard to the embargo of stock from Europe, in effect since June last. Professor C. G. Hewitt has communicated with me, asking a meeting of nurserymen, seedsmen and horticulturists to discuss the effect it will have on Canada, and to find ways and means to overcome the difficulty. I have forwarded to Professor Hewitt the names of the committee to meet in the headquarters of the convention while in session here.

Now that peace is declared, and the government has discontinued the office of fuel controller, what, if anything, can we do as regards the supply?

I hope you will give these few suggestions your serious consideration, and take action to make this the leading association in the dominion."

SEC'Y-TREAS. EDDY'S REPORT.

At the annual meeting last year, a committee consisting of W. Muston, W. C. Hall, E. B. Hamilton, James McKenna and H. B. Cowan was appointed to draw up a letter to the fuel controller, pointing out to him why the florists of Canada should get as much coal as possible. This letter was duly drafted and forwarded. There was also a committee named consisting of W. C. Hall, H. B. Cowan and Past-President E. J. Hayward to arrange a meeting with the fuel controller, and these gentlemen were called to Ottawa and a conference was held, the result of which I have no doubt had much to do with the trade being allowed to put more coal in their bins than would otherwise have been the case. The executive committee held its meeting in this city last March, eight members being present. A telegram was received from Messrs. McKee and Craig, regretting their inability to attend owing to illness. We had the honor of the assistance and presence of several past-presidents as well as the co-operation of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club and the Retail Florists' Club, making a total of 26 in attendance at the session, which was a most business-like one, as you may see from the programme of this convention. The social features were looked after by the two Toronto organizations and I am sure you will go away from this convention city more than satisfied with what co-operation and Toronto hospitality can do.

In July, President Douglas received a request from Professor Hewitt, Dominion entomologist, requesting that a committee be appointed from the association to meet him in conference in regard to the importation of nursery stock into the Dominion from Europe, in connection with the embargo ruling of the United States. The following were named: J. H. Dunlop, Richmond Hill, Ont.; H. Simmers, Toronto; J. Craig, Ottawa; W. E. Grever, Hamilton, and W. C. Hall, Montreal, Que.

George Douglas, Toronto, Ont.
President Canadian Horticultural Association.

Arrangements have been made to hold this meeting during the convention.

Before closing, I wish to thank the president of this association, its officers and all others who have so kindly assisted me in so many ways that it has made the work of the secretary-treasurer of this organization a real pleasure.

FINANCIAL REPORT.

The financial report of the secretary-treasurer, H. J. Eddy, which had been audited by Alfred C. Wilshire and James McKenna, showed the affairs of the association to be in good condition.

Florists' Club of Washington, D. C.

The extensive publicity which the local newspapers have given "Say it with Flowers" week, will have much to do with the success of the event, according to the reports received at the monthly meeting of the florists' club August 6. A committee, consisting of George C. Shaffer, chairman; Adolph E. Gude, Jr., and Herbert M. Sauber, was appointed by President Blackistone to plan all arrangements for the floral week, and will be added to within the next few days. The committee will link up the local week with the national advertising campaign of the S. A. F.

A touch of sadness tinged the meeting, brought about by the death of William F. Marche, one of the city's leading florists, and for several years prominent in the club's many activities. Resolutions of regret were adopted by the club, and a committee appointed to convey them to the bereaved family. A large floral offering, also, was ordered sent as a concrete evidence of the regard in which he had been held by his associates and of the regret of the club at his untimely death.

A number of applications for membership were received, among them being those of Joseph Shaffer, Clifford H. Wilson and William H. Cramer, all of the Washington Floral Company, and G. B. Cassassa, who will add flowers to his stock of fruit and confectionery in his store at New York avenue and Fourteenth street.

Probably the main feature of the evening was the learned and timely address of President Blackistone on "The Cultivation of the Watermelon; or How to Dive in Without a Bathing Suit." The lecture was illustrated by a number of specimens of the genus Kentucky Wonder, upon which Mr. Blackistone operated successfully with a carving knife. The victims were held down during operations by Edward S. Schmid and George C. Dalgleish, and following Mr. Blackistone's cutting dissertation, they were disposed of, with great gusto, and considerable wetting of ears, by those assembled. Before adjourning in well-fed complacency, plans were discussed for an automobile outing sometime next month, at which a chicken dinner is to be a main feature. George C. Shaffer, skilled in the planning of such events, was asked to undertake this, also, in connection with this work for floral week. It is planned to hold the outing in advance of the floral week, and to have the automobiles bear banners carrying the slogan: "Say it with Flowers." B. F. L.

National Association of Gardeners.

CLEVELAND MEETING AUGUST 26-28.

As announced in our issue of July 26, page 81, the annual convention of the National Association of Gardeners will be held at Cleveland, O., August 26-28, with headquarters at the Hollenden hotel. From all indications, this meeting will prove one of much interest and good attendance. The programme, as announced, follows:

3 P. M. Bowling tournament.

Members intending to attend the convention should write to James Fisher, chairman of the hotel reservation committee, 10504 St. Clair avenue, Cleveland, for hotel accommodations without delay. Other conventions being held in Cleveland on the same dates as ours, will make it difficult to secure accommodations unless engaged in advance.

Labor and Capital Co-operation Vital.

Governor Lowden, of Illinois, in an interview in the Chicago Tribune, July 25, says America's problem is one of establishing economic equilibrium, and that now is the time for all industrial groups to keep their feet on the ground and to carry firmly in mind the fact that more profits and wages cannot be squeezed out of a business than it produces. The governor also urges a strong get-together movement between worker and employer; a revival of the old close relations which existed between the latter and the worker in the days of the small shops, and the "democratization of industry" through works committees or similar bodies which will give workers full opportunity to have their grievances settled amicably and have a voice in the management as regards conditions of employment, hours, wages, etc. Steps should be considered to make certain that the worker is deriving from the product his ust share of his contribution towards it, the restoration of balance between the earning power of men and the purchasing power of wages, and a reduction in the high cost of living—the elimination of profiteering. In war, capital and labor, he said, worked as one unit, and at present the community of interest between men is recognized as never before. The nation flourishes most when every single element in it is prosperous, and labor and capital have both got to work in the direction of closer industrial relations, back to the days where human interest relationship prevailed, the time when the employer and his workers were knit together and the employe always spoke of "our shop" instead of "the works." Get the employes of the modern industrial establishments to this point, and much has been accomplished. Bring about a hearty good will and sympathy between the head of the industry and its humblest worker, and the first great step toward this relationship is profit sharing. Let this fact sink in: You cannot divide more than you create; work to meet the greatest need in industry, a strong get-together "our shop" relationship, and repress the spirit of profiteering. Business should make a determined effort to force living prices down instead of up, first in the cost of the necessaries of life, for until there is decrease in the cost of food, the tension is not likely to be diminished.

THE S. A. F.

New York to Detroit.

The New York Florists' Club, for its route to the convention of the Society of American Florists at Detroit, Mich., August 19-21, has decided upon the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad to Buffalo, then by boat to the convention city. The party will leave New York, August 17, at 8:30 p. m., Hoboken, 8:55 p. m., due in Buffalo 7:30 the following morning, spending the day in that city, and leaving on the 6:00 p. m. boat, arriving in Detroit Tuesday morning.

The railroad fare New York to Buffalo, is $12.85; berths, $2.16, including war tax. Boat fare, Buffalo to Detroit, is $4.32; stateroom accommodating two persons, $3.78.

From the way applications are being received, it looks as if there will be more than 100 in the party. To date there is an assurance of more than 50, and if the applications number 80 or more, a special train is guaranteed. All who intend traveling with the New York party, are urged to notify the committee, consisting of A. L. Miller, chairman, Jamaica, N. Y.; J. G. Esler and P. W. Popp, at the earliest opportunity. August 11, is the last day on which reservations can be made. Those who cannot attend to the matter in person, should mail checks so that they will reach Chairman Miller at the above address by that date and avoid confusion at train time. If you desire further information, communicate with the chairman.

Regarding hotel accommodations, address E. A. Fetters, vice-president of the Society of American Florists, 17 East Adams avenue, Detroit, Mich.

Chicago to Detroit.

The Wabash railroad has been chosen for the trip of the Chicago Florists' Club and friends to the annual convention of the Society of American Florists at Detroit, Mich., August 19-21. Special Pullman sleepers for the exclusive use of the party will be in Wabash train 12 leaving Dearborn station, Dearborn and Polk streets, Monday, August 18, at 11:25 p. m., due Detroit the following morning at 7:50 o'clock.

The fare one way, tax included, is $8.82. Pullman fares are: Lower berth, $2.16; upper berth, $1.73; seat, $1.08.

Other trains for those unable to accompany the party are as follows:

VIA WABASH RAILROAD.

Leave Chicago	Due Detroit
1:05 p.m.	10:25 p.m.

VIA MICHIGAN CENTRAL RAILROAD.

Leave Chicago	Due Detroit
*9:05 a.m.	3:35 p.m.
10:30 a. m.	5:55 p. m.
*3:00 p.m.	10:35 p.m.
*8:00 p.m.	2:03 a.m.
12:05 a.m.	8:00 a.m.

*Extra fare train; rate one way, $9.09.

For further information relative to special Pullmans, tickets, etc., communicate with H. L. Purdy, Division Passenger Agent, Wabash railroad, Room 300 Royal Insurance building, 160 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Telephone Wabash 1920.

Delegations from the north, south and west are invited to join the party at Chicago.

Boston to Detroit.

Arrangements are being made for the transportation of the party from Boston, Mass., and vicinity, who will attend the convention of the Society of American Florists at Detroit, Mich., August 19-21. The trip will be made via Boston & Albany railroad to Buffalo, where one day will be devoted to sightseeing, thence from that city to Detroit by steamer, arriving at 8:00 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The train carrying the party will leave South station, Boston, Sunday, August 17 at 4:45 p. m.; Framingham, 5:19; Worcester, 5:55; Springfield, 7:20; Pittsfield, 9:11, and Albany at 10:40 p. m., due at Buffalo, 6:50 a. m. Monday, leaving for the convention city by boat at 6 o'clock that evening.

The fare from Boston to Buffalo is $16.11; lower berth, $2.70; boat fare, Buffalo to Detroit, $4.32; stateroom accommodating two or three people, $3.50; total, $26.63. Those wishing to go direct may leave Boston, Monday, at 2:00 p. m., due in Detroit, 8:10 Tuesday morning. Fare, all rail, is $24.28; lower berth, $4.32.

Reservations should be made at once through E. Allen Peirce, Waltham, Mass., state vice-president for Massachusetts, East.

National Publicity for Flowers.

Letters such as the following are worth publishing, for they furnish evidence, if such were needed, that our publicity campaign is effective: "Our experience has been so thoroughly satisfactory we feel inclined to help as much as we are able. As you no doubt know, we subscribed $50 when this movement was started, and we will authorize you to increase our subscription to $100 a year. We feel we have been benefited, and we wish to show our appreciation, Drumm Seed & Floral Co., Fort Worth, Tex."

Here is a shaft for the many skeptics whose consciences have not yet prompted them to contribute to the campaign fund, and who console themselves with the idea that because people do not come into their stores and announce that they do so owing to the impression made upon them by our national advertising, the campaign must be fruitless.

If flower buyers were to do anything like this, subscriptions would come in avalanches. And yet our publicity is acomplishing its purpose. Flower buying is certainly stimulated, and the stimulation is noticed by very many of our craft, just as it is by the Drumm Seed & Floral Co. Whenever you see the word "additional" in connection with the announcement of a subscription, you may be sure that the person or concern making the contribution is in earnest, and realizes full well the great value of the campaign.

The R. & S. Flower Store, Missoula, Mont., writes: "In this small town of 20,000, we have noticed the effect of the national advertising, especially so on Mothers' day and Christmas. We know it has made flower buyers out of several here who never would have thought of buying flowers if it had not been for reading the advertisements."

The good results now enjoyed by the wrole trade are due to faith in the work evinced by a few far-seeing and generous men whose horizon of view is a little beyond that of the nearly 90 per cent of our craft who have so far failed to help in the movement. Personal contact with the latter is impossible, but we have found that where individuals can be interviewed, they "come across" without much hesitation. If anyone who has not subscribed, feels that he would like further information in regard to the campaign, the same will be forthcoming upon application to the secretary.

The committees are calling for quick action, as the extent of arrangements for the fall publicity very naturally will depend upon the amount of money in hand. Back them up wth your contributions, and realize that in doing so you are also putting backbone into your own business.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

A Botanist's Bouquet.

A botanist a damsel wooed;
Like any other wooer,
He found a way to tell his love
By bringing posies to her.

"Fair maid," said he, "let me present
A golden helianthus,
And this bland herb with sessile flowers,
The quite well known dianthus.

"Herbaceous, fleshy shrubby, this Mesembryanthemum;
But here the poet's very own,
The white leucanthemum."

If his selection puzzles you,
I'll tell you what he brought her:
A sunflower, pink, fig marigold,
And daisy—but he got her!

OBITUARY.

William F. Marche.

The untimely death of William F. Marche, who had only reached the thirty-ninth year in his promising career, is a great loss to the florist fraternity of Washington, D. C., where his thorough knowledge of all branches of the business and his originality in design work marked him as an artist, his arrangements attracting a great deal of attention. His store was patronized by many members of the diplomatic corps in the capital. He spoke English, French and German fluently, and could converse in other European languages. This, of itself, served to attract the patronage of ambassadors and ministers from other lands. He had also been employed in London with the Wills & Seger Company, florists to the King, and had been in charge of many decorations for the King and the Prince of Wales.

Mr. Marche learned the florist business in Germany, where he served his apprenticeship. As was the custom in that country, he started in at the greenhouses, and worked his way through the different branches, becoming proficient in landscape gardening and interior decorating as well as retailing. After completing his apprenticeship, he went to Paris, then to London, and finally to this country. In New York, he was employed by M. A. Bowe, and in Washington by Z. D. Blackistone. After several years' employment in this country, he opened his own store at Eighteenth and U streets, N. W. He soon found his efforts cramped in so small and out-of-the-way a place, and selected the store at Fourteenth and H streets, N. W., across from the store of Z. D. Blackistone, which he conducted up to the time of his death. Mr. Marche was very active in the work of the Florists' Club of Washington, and held membership in several commercial and fraternal organizations. He will be sadly missed by all of these.

He is survived by his wife and three children, Esther, Louise and William, Jr. More than 35 members of the several branches of the florist business attended the funeral in Prospect Hill cemetery. A large floral piece was sent by the Florists' Club of Washington as an evidence of their knowledge of the loss suffered by the community. For the past four years Mr. Marche has been living, with his family, in Hyattsville, Md., where they had a very attractive home, and on the grounds some of the cut flowers handled in the Fourteenth street establishment were produced. B. F. L.

Robert Montgomery.

Robert Montgomery, widely known as a rose specialist and who also had a reputation as a most successful grower of other stock, died at his home in Natick, Mass., August 5. He had been a sufferer from kidney trouble for some time, but his ailment was not thought to be alarming.

Mr. Montgomery was born in Scotland in 1854 and came to this country nearly 40 years ago, his first employment here being at the greenhouses of Wellesley College. Later he took a position at the Steven's place at Dover, Mass., following which he was superintendent of the range of Norton Bros. at Dorchester. About 30 years ago, he embarked in business for himself as a grower making a specialty of roses in which he achieved great success. He was highly respected by all who knew him. Surviving are a widow and two sons, Alexander Montgomery, who will continue the business, and Robert, who is a partner in the Thomas J. Grey Co., Boston, Mass.

Personal.

R. J. Haight, former secretary of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, has the sincere sympathy of a wide circle of friends in the loss of his wife, who died at San Diego, Calif., August 10.

Fred H. Howard, Los Angles, Calif., arrived at New York from France, August 10.

GREENHOUSE GLASS is quoted at $7.00 to $8.00 per box.

GERMAN mail, dated November, 1916, is now coming through.

DR. MARLATT, of the federal horticultural board, is scheduled to address the Society of American Florists on "Plant Quarantine No. 37," at Detroit, Thursday afternoon, August 21, at 2:00 p. m., and all members should be in attendance to voice their views.

A Record Convention.

It goes without saying that the live wires in all branches of the trade will attend the coming S. A. F. convention, every indication pointing to a record gathering. Detroit is to be congratulated in having secured this meeting, which promises to be the greatest in the history of the society. The S. A. F. is fortunate, indeed, in its selection of this hospitable city, where the get-together, community spirit, uniting the local trade, has provided a welcome, and such accommodations as the society has seldom if ever enjoyed. Every firm of any prominence in all branches of the trade will be represented in the exhibition, reflecting the optimism that is prevalent in business circles the country over. This great display, so complete, the up-to-the-minute, last word in everything, that pertains to the florist's calling, will be of the greatest interest to all visitors.

The proceedings of the convention will be full of up-to-date matters pertaining to the life of the business, each session having features of special importance.

Those out for a good time, will find a surfeit of the best, in the plans of the Detroit Florist's Club, who are past masters in all that pertains to hospitality. Do not miss the Detroit convention.

Profiteering.

Florists throughout the entire country, together with every other person engaging in business, will be required to secure from the collector of internal revenue of the district in which they are located, a permit or license to do business, if congress adopts the bill which has just been introduced by Representative Siegel of New York. The measure also provides that any person engaged in business, to whom a permit or license has been issued, who shall "expose or offer for sale, or cause to be exposed or offered for sale to the public, any article of goods, wares or merchandise without having plainly stamped or printed thereon or attached thereto a card showing the true, actual cost price thereof," shall be guilty of profiteering. The violation of either of the above provisions will be punishable by a fine of not exceeding $5,000, or by imprisonment for not more than two years, or both.

The term "engaged in business" is to be construed to include those who manufacture or purchase from others, goods, wares and merchandise for the purpose of offering them for sale. The term, "true, actual cost price," is not to include drayage, freight or carriage charges paid by the purchaser, or any discounts allowed on bills paid before maturity.

In addition to the penalties stated above, the commissioner of internal revenue will be given the authority to revoke the permit or license of parties guilty of profiteering, and the same shall not be reissued to them for a period of at least one year.

Ocean Travel.

Ambassador Davis will advise the state department, emphasizing the probability of Americans who intend to visit Europe this year being marooned abroad for weeks, possibly months, owing to shortage of transport facilities, according to a New York World despatch. The Cunard line passenger accommodations are booked to October 31. The same is true of the Anchor, White Star and Dutch lines, while Canadian Pacific ships are booked until September 30. American business men offer $1,000 for berths on homecoming liners. The British operate 80 per cent of the transatlantic traffic, and only 20 per cent of space is available for passengers.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery.

A get-together meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association will be held Tuesday, August 19, at 9:30 a. m., in Arcadia auditorium, Detroit, Mich., at which time suggestions well be welcomed toward making a very interesting programme for the annual business meeting in Buffalo, N. Y., October 14-15.

Special awards for the best F. T. D. window displays in Buffalo are announced as follows: Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., $100 in cash; Chicago Flower Growers' Association, Chicago, $100 in cash; A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, $150 electric fountain.

Potash Producers Ask Protection.

The American Potash Producers' Association has called upon the war trade board not to lift the embargo on potash from Germany before October 1. Meanwhile, the American producers hope that congress will find a way to protect the rapidly developing industry in this country. Lifting the embargo now, would, it is claimed enable German concerns to contract for the American demand years in advance at a lower price than American producers could meet.

Class Legislation.

The threat of the railroad brotherhoods to force, by means of a highly organized minority, class legislation of a pernicious character, is a blow at the foundations of representative government. Aside from any merit in railroad labor's position with regard to the cost of living, the high-handed attempt of perhaps two million railroad workers to dictate the railroad policy of the country for the other 98,000,000 people is indefensible.—Boston News Bureau.

Lime Association.

The agricultural bureau of the Lime Association, Mather building, Washington, D. C., under the director, Prof. E. O. Fippin, is beginning active operations, the aim being to secure the largest possible use of lime materials that will give the largest present and future returns at the largest net profit to the consumer. In agriculture, this means primarily the use of liming materials in the soil.

American Carnation Society.

The board of directors of the American Carnation Society will hold a meeting at Detroit, Mich., at 9 o'clock on the morning of August 21. Information regarding the committee room, etc., may be had at Secretary Young's desk in Arcadia auditorium.

DRY WEATHER SHORTENS SUPPLY.

Owing to the extremely dry weather, stock has been very scarce. Gladioli and asters are becoming more plentiful but clean up easily each day. The greatest demand is from the central part of the state where outdoor flowers are suffering from lack of moisture. Roses are improving in quality but the supply is limited. A few early chrysanthemums were seen in the retail stores during the past week.

STATE FLORISTS MEETING.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana, met August 5 at the wholesale establishment of Smith & Young in this city with President Anders Rasmussen in the chair. The question of hail and windstorm insurance was discussed at length but no definite action was taken in the matter. The committee was retained and requested to report at a later meeting. The autumn flower show and entertainment, to which the Kentucky florists have been invited, was also taken up. This promises to be the biggest show that has ever been held in this state. Committees are hard at work and the guarantee fund has almost been subscribed.

Adolph Baur urged the members to exhibit at the coming state fair. He stated that the premiums were very liberal this year.

A. H. Nehrling invited the society to hold its September meeting in Crawfordsville. This will be in the form of an outing. From Crawfordsville, the party will travel by auto to the Shades and Turkey Run, two of Indiana's scenic points of interest. The invitation was accepted.

At the close of the meeting, State Vice-President Nehrling spoke on the coming S. A. F. convention and the national publicity campaign. He left the meeting with two applications for life memberships and one annual membership in his pocket. The out of town members present were: Theo. Kuebler, Evansville; Prof. Lommel of Purdue University, and A. H. Nehrling, Crawfordsville.

NOTES.

John Eitel & Son, of Greencastle, have their establishment in tip-top shape for the coming season. Smilax for the local market is one of the principal crops. Everything on this place is built for permanency. Even the smallest bench is made of concrete. A concrete garage and stack were added this summer.

C. C. Thomas, who has been identified with the retail trade of this city for a good many years, has resigned his position as manager of the Circle Flower Store. He has entered the automobile business. We regret to see him leave our profession.

Be sure and make your hotel and railroad reservations for the S. A. F. convention as far in advance as possible. Call or write Irwin Bertermann, chairman of the transportation committee. A. H. N.

MARKET HOLDS RECORD FOR DULLNESS.

This city has been about as dull a spot as was possible to find on the map during the past week. The supply has been plentiful, with the exception of roses, which showed poor quality. American Beauties continue small and of little account. Asters are very good; in fact, better than they have been for several seasons. Gladioli are also in good form, but the supply is too large for the demand, consequently prices dropped. Delphiniums are arriving in large numbers and are hard to move, most of them going to the dump. Greens are scarce, but the supply meets all requirements.

MCCALLUM CO'S. OUTING.

The McCallum Co. held an outing at its greenhouses at Evans City, August 9, the party being convened from this city in a special car. The afternoon was given over to athletic events, the chief feature being a ball game, which was won by the greenhouse team, the score being 13 to 5. George McCallum won the 100-yard dash, while Miss Kennedy, of the office force, was the lucky one in the drawing for a wicker chair. Moving pictures ware shown in the car on the return trip. Both members of the firm and employes voted it a most enjoyable outing—the best ever held.

NOTES.

Richards & Burns are opening a new store at Monessen, Pa., which is to be up-to-date in every respect. The firm is well known in this city, has many friends, and should make a success in the business. Karl Voelker, formerly of the A. W. Smith Co., and the Alpha Floral Co., is in charge.

The A. H. Smith Flower Stores Co. is redecorating the interior of its main store at Seventh and Liberty street. A. Hall, of this firm, and family, are enjoying the bathing at Atlantic City. Miss Carrie Jordan is also at the seashore.

Harry Irwin, the popular Monessen, Pa., florist, has just written from Michigan, that he expects to be barred from that state in future for catching all of the fish. His son, Harrison, is in charge of the business during his absence.

Wm. A. Clark, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., and family, are spending the month at their cottage at Lake Chautauqua.

Harvey Sheaff, manager of the Mrs. E. A. Williams store, is on a two weeks' trip.

BUSINESS RATHER DULL.

The market is in fair condition. Business is more or less slow, with the demand just about cleaning up the good stock, with few exceptions. Good asters are in demand, as well as good roses. Neither are plentiful. Gladioli are in fair supply, but the quality is not very good. Other miscellaneous stock is in fair supply. Greens of all kinds are plentiful. The transient demand is very poor, and very little improvement is looked for until September.

NOTES.

The transportation committee of the florists' club, in charge of the "Presidential Special" to the Detroit convention, says they expect to have about 40 representatives from this city and vicinity. The special will leave on the morning of August 18. For any details, see W. J. Pilcher, W. A. Rowe or Frank Windler.

A visit to the Mossgiel Gardens, at Crescent, Mo., shows everything looking fine for a big season. They grow roses for the local market of an exceptionally good quality.

G. H. Angermueller has been getting in some nice asters, which are always sold before they are unpacked.

CLUB COMPLETES OUTING PLANS.

Preparations for the annual outing and clambake were discussed at the August meeting of the florists' club wrich was held at the establishment of Henkes Brothers, Newtonville. Louis H. Schaefer, chairman of the entertainment committee, reported that his committee had decided on the date, Saturday afternoon, August 23, and place, Henkes Brothers' grove, Newtonville. Chairman Schaefer said that the club will purchase all the edibles and accessories, and hire a man to look after the bake. Tickets will be $3 each for men and $2 for women. A poll of the members present showed that at least 43 will attend. The sale of tickets is always more than the number present at the meetings who promise to attend.

An invitation was read from Henry Heeremanns, secretary of the Lenox Horticultural Society, Lenox, Mass., to attend the Lenox Society outing on the afternoon of August 20. The local club passed a vote of thanks, and instructed the secretary to write that as many as could would attend from this city.

Frederick W. Gloeckner, of Watervliet, was elected a member of the club. After the meeting, the members enjoyed refreshments furnished by the hosts. Among the items was some very fine sweet corn. The Messrs. Henkes explained that the state department of agriculture has declared a quarantine in the town on all sweet corn on account of the presence of the European corn borer. The quarantine extends from near Newtonville, though a narrow strip of territory, to Amsterdam. Corn in the territory, is excluded from the markets of Albany, Troy, and a number of other places in districts where the borer has not been reported. Corn in infected territory may be sold in the cities within the infected districts. The object of the quarantine is to prevent the spread of the borer into uninfected districts. In some cases, the quarantine works a hardship, because not every field in a district excluded is affected.

Arthur Cowee, the gladiolus specialist of Berlin, Rensselaer county, has served four terms in the state legislature as an assemblyman. He is a candidate for renomination on the republican ticket. It is expected he will receive the nomination and be re-elected with little trouble.

AUGUST BUSINESS IS FAIR.

Business so for this month has been fair and compares most favorably with that of the same period of other years, with the total sales, in some instances, probably running considerably ahead. While business in some lines was good the past two weeks, it was not so unusually brisk that the grower should be given the idea that stock was selling at extraordinary high summer prices, which does not happen to be the case as the average returns show. While stock in general has been none too plentiful, there has been enough to go round, and if one particular house did not happen to have it, there was usually some obtainable close by. Roses are selling well, especially Columbia Mrs. Chas. Russell, Ophelia, Milady and Sunburst, which are reaching the market in good condition. American Beauty roses continue to be in brisk demand at high summer prices and clean up regularly. Asters are more plentiful and are to be had in quantity lots at reasonable prices considerably below those asked previously. Fancy asters are in exceedingly short supply and command good figures. Gladioli are in large supply, and are in good demand. Some first-class stock is seen in this line, but the majority of it is showing the effects of the hot weather. Orchids are scarce, and so is lily of the valley. Lilies, pond lilies, daisies, gypsophilas, cornflowers, calendulas, candytuft, snapdragons and feverfews are obtainable, and come in handy for the window displays during the hot weather. Greens are in good supply. Next week, the convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., and the closer the big event approaches, the more you hear of the large delegation from this city. Some will make the trip by auto, but the majority will go by rail, and very few, if any, by boat, for it is impossible to secure reservations.

Miss Gertrude Plutz, who tickles the ivories at Poehlmann Bros. Co's. office, is back from a pleasant vacation in northern Wisconsin. Ruth Pagel who operates the switchboard, has returned from a visit to her home at Spring Valley, Bass Lake and Starved Rock. Sam Cohon of the office force is back from a pleasant vacation at South Haven, Mich., and James Butler, who keeps the office books, is again on deck after spending a couple of weeks with his folks at their cottage at Long Lake. Miss Olga Mielke of the office staff left August 9 for a three weeks' visit with relatives at Altamount, S. D.

This city will be represented at the Detroit convention in the bowling contest by Allie Zech, Walter Amling, Eric Johnson, Herbert Amling and Peter Olsem. The trade is confident that the boys will make a good showing and would not be surprised if they brought home the bacon. Walter Amling, Allie Zech, Herbert Amling and Peter Olsem bowled a practice game with William Wolf, Fred, Price, Jack Byers and Mrs. Olsem, August 11, which they won by a close margin.

Charles Erne received a postal card last week from Charles Stewart, dated August 4, and mailed from Cheyenne, Wyo. Mr. Stewart and family left here several weeks ago, on an auto trip to Los Angeles, California, where they will make their home in the future.

Peter Showsboe has the stock at Peter Reinberg's greenhouses in splendid condition, particularly the roses, and is always pleased to show the visitors about. Peter Baumann reports that the demand at the store is strong enough to absorb the daily cuts.

H. Tobler, superintendent of grounds and greenhouses at the Northern Hospital for the Insane, Traverse City, Mich., called upon a number of old friends in the city last week and incidentally celebrated the fifty-first anniversary of his birthday.

CHOICE STOCK IS LIMITED.

Business is somewhat quiet and does not take up all of the receipts that are coming into the market. The amount of choice stock is rather limited and sells readily, but the short and medium grades move very slowly and tend to accumulate in the wholesale houses. In roses, many short ones of the new cut are seen. Asters are plentiful but the most of the offerings in this line are short stemmed and small. Many excellent gladioli may be had. The choice ones sell readily while the others move slowly. Other offerings are a few rubrums and snapdragons.

NOTES.

The marriage of Miss Jennie Adrian, daughter of Gus Adrian and wife, to Oliver D. Perreault, was solemnized August 2. The bridegroom had just been discharged from the military service after having seen active service overseas. They will make their future home in Los Angeles, Calif.

The latest who have announced their intention of attending the convention at Detroit, Mich., are Frank Volz, who expects to make it part of his honeymoon trip, Arthur Becker and Ray Ruttlee.

C. E. Critchell has been getting many calls for sphagnum during the past fortnight. Last week he visited the greenhouse plants at Richmond, Ind.

Julius Baer has returned after a three months' trip through the far west and Canada.

Visitors: Geo. Hampton, representing Jos. G. Neidinger & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; J. Coleman Nielsen, representing Poehlmann Bros., Chicago; Harold S. Lion, of Lion & Company, New York; Gus Schneider, Springfield, O., and H. F. Winters, of the Winters' Floral Co., Charleston, West Va.

BUSINESS BETTER THAN IN PAST SUMMERS

This week has been a very good one among all the florists. It is certainly far ahead of the corresponding week last year. There is an unusually large number of weddings and other decorations, which call for large quantities of flowers, such as dahlias, gladioli, chrysanthemums, etc., and which are peculiarly adapted to this particular work. Chrysanthemums are becoming more plentiful every day. Golden Glow is about the only variety offered now. It has improved very much in quality over last week, owing to the cool weather. It is bringing good prices. As yet, none of this stock is being shipped, as it is disposed of readily in this market. Very few Early Frost were noted this week. The rose situation is improving rapidly, inasmuch as the stock is of much better quality than for some time past. As yet, there is no supply of Russell, but there is a large cut of Ophelia, Columbia, Hadley and Radiance. Good stock moves quite readily. Ulrich Brunner is also much better than heretofore. Cecile Brunner is off crop and the light arrivals clean up quickly. The good supply of Spencer sweet peas still keep coming in and are sold at good figures. Nearly all colors are represented, but pink and lavender are most in demand. Carnations from the new crop are beginning to arrive. Laddie is excellent and a good seller. Poor stock of the Enchantress family, however, is not moving at all. Dahlias are now at the height of the season. Enormous quantities find their way to the market every morning. Stock has to be of the best before ready buyers appear. The street venders dispose of the greater part of the inferior grades. Gladioli are still coming in freely, and continue to find a ready sale. Pink varieties are most in favor. There are practically no orchids to be seen. A few Harrisoniana are to be had occasionally and bring $1.00 each. The aster supply is increasing every day, and the stock shows much improvement over last week. All colors are available now, but as yet, prices are pretty stiff. Zinnias are much better than heretofore and find a ready market. They are in great demand for basket work. Snapdragons are quite plentiful, but of poor quality. There is an ample supply of calendulas, scabiosa and other stock from out of doors. Some fine specimens of pot grown celosia are being received and are a welcome addition to a scant supply of flowering plants. We also noted a fine lot of early cyclamens in pots in several of the stores. The stock was extra good for so early in the season. Hydrangeas, both pink and blue, in pots, are also popular. Water lilies, which are somewhat of a novelty here this season, are attracting much attention from buyers. There are plenty of green stock and adiantums.

NOTES

The nurserymen of this state are doing everything in their power to be in a position to meet the demand for stock this coming season. They report a tremendous call for fruit trees of every description. The California Packing Corporation, which is the largest concern of its kind in the world, has purchased 4,000 acres of land at Delano, and has placed an order with a prominent nursery at Fresno to supply the trees for this tract. It is one of the largest single orders ever placed for fruit trees. The varieties planted will be peaches and figs.

Charles Matraia, for many years a member of the firm of Podesta & Baldocchi, has entered the firm of the Art Floral Co., of which his brother, P. Vincent Matraia, is president and manager. The entire stock of this company is now controled by the Matraia brothers. Improvements, which are now taking place, are rapidly nearing completion at this store. When finished, it will be one of the most attractive in the country.

J. A. Axell, whose large wholesale house on Bush street will open at the beginning of the shipping season, has completed arrangements whereby he will become the largest handler and shipper of chrysanthemums in this city. He has purchased the entire crops of some of the leading growers. He will also handle the output of many of our leading violet growers, nearly all of which will be shipped to eastern points.

The Seabright Bulb Company has leased 10,000 square feet of glass at Santa Cruz, where it will plant bulbs to force for this market. They will specialize in early freesias. Thus far this season, this firm has shipped one million and a half freesia bulbs and 500,000 gladioli bulbs to this and eastern markets. They report a cleanup of all their surplus stock, and will plant largely for next season's trade.

Rosaia Bros.' nursery is in with a good cut of gladioli and Ulrich Brunner roses. Mr. Rosaia says that for some unexplainable reason the cut of Ulrich Brunner has been below the standard of former years. Nearly every grower of this rose has the same comment to make on its behavior this season. It is a very popular rose in this market and immense quantities are handled here every season.

Frank Pellicano's new dahlia, Dr. Harry Tevis, is by far the most popular and finest dahlia being received in this market. It was sent out by the introducer last spring, and has jumped immediately into popular favor owing to its immense bloom and very stiff stem. When it is more widely distributed, it will be near the head of the list of the best commercial dahlias.

Milton Tonini, manager of the Bay Counties Seed Company, has a fine collection of dahlias at his nursery, which he intends to exhibit at the coming dahlia show of the California Dahlia

SCARCITY OF STOCK KEENLY FELT.

The extremely short supply of flowers was felt in this market during the past week, and there is no complaint that there is not enough business to take care of the supply. Gladioli are becoming more plentiful and roses are in better quality and quantity. Since carnations have been withdrawn, asters have taken their place, but they are still short stemmed.

NOTES.

J. B. Goetz Sons are benching carnations for early blooms. The main crop will be housed later. Coal hauling is at top speed and the winter's supply is nearly in. Henry Goetz was highly honored by the Detroit Florists' Club, of which he is a member, being appointed chairman of the proposed state florists' association which he hopes will take its date of birth at the Detroit convention of the Society of American Florists, August 19-21. It is proposed that Detroit take the initiative steps in forming the organization as this would be the most opportune time, when all state florists were together at one time and place. The hearty co-operation of every florist in the state is hoped for, and since it is right at our door, the Detroit meeting is expected to bring a 100 per cent Michigan attendance. Let's make it a reality.

Grohman, the Florist, was more than disappointed that he did not have more stock to offer, as he was compelled to turn down as many orders as he accepted.

WEATHER UNFAVORABLE WITH FAIR SALES.

The weather in this vicinity has been of the exceptional variety of late, and the excessive rains have brought about a poor condition of outdoor stock. Gladioli, however, do not seem to have been affected and still show very good form. Some of the best have 8, 10 and even 12 flowers to the stalk, and sell at $2 per dozen wholesale. Asters, due to the weather, do not improve and look like small value for the prices asked. Pond lilies are still abundant and will sell better when the blue varieties come in later.

NOTES.

Wm. McKissick, manager of the Leo Niessen Co., deserves credit for the way he has advanced the trade in every way since coming to this city. An example of this is seen in his securing for Leonard Lancaster, formerly with Samuel Feast & Son and later foreman for Lohr & Fritz, the Wright place on Reistertown road. The range is already well filled with miscellaneous stock which will yield immediate returns. Mr. Lancaster makes roses his specialty which will be sent to the wholesale market in this city.

Wm. F. Ekas, of the Leo Niesson Co., state vice-president of the Society of American Florists, is combining vacation and business in visiting growers in New York and vicinity.

Robert Graham and wife will attend the Detroit convention.

G. JR.

Washington, D. C.

Live ducks swimming in a tank in the window of the Gude Bros. store, 1214 F street, have been attracting a great deal of attention to the excellent display. These ducklings are something of a novelty, as part of a window, and crowds congregate in front of the store to watch them swim around or snap at the gold fish who share the pool with them. There are also a number of water lilies in the pond. Sloping up from the water is a hill, in a sort of rock garden shape, on the top of which is perched a miniature greenhouse, within which are "growing" flowers. These are kept in concealed jars, and are changed when they begin to look other than presentable.

William F. Gude and Mrs. Gude have just returned from their trip into Canada, coming home by way of the Canadian Rockies and the Yellowstone park. En route to Washington, they stopped in Minneapolis, visiting Theodore Wirth, and renewing old acquaintances in other cities. The trip has done Mr. Gude a world of good, and he is preparing to take up his business activities about where he left off.

GLADIOLUS

They are in full crop. Our stock includes many novelties and all the standard varieties. Always a good supply of America, Augusta, Francis King, Panama, etc. $5.00 and $6.00 per 100.

If you will leave the selection to us we can offer you Gladiolus at very attractive prices. We ship Gladiolus mostly in bud, insuring arrival in good condition. You are obliged to carry some stock during the summer months, and you have less risk of loss in Gladiolus than any other flower you can buy.

DEMAND REACHES LOWEST LEVEL.

The first week in August ran pretty true to form as far as the florist business was concerned, the volume of trade being about the smallest of the year. Gladioli and asters, most of the latter field-grown, are being thrown on the market in great quantities. Only about 25 per cent of the stock is fit for sale in the stores, the balance being so poor as to be almost unmarketable. The wholesalers are helpless. It comes in, is potted up, and they do the best they can with it. Aside from the first selections, or cream of the stock for which there is generally a fair local or shipping demand, the balance is sold in job lots to the street men, who take it away in wagon loads and market it on the busy corners of residence centers, or in the shopping districts. Gladioli are offered at 10 cents a bunch of from six to eight stalks, and asters 10 to 15 cents for a bunch of 25. Russell, Maryland and Victoria are the best summer roses. Columbia and a few Premier are also good, but all the rest are very small. There are American Beauties, new crop, if ordered, at $40 to $50 per hundred. Hydrangea Golden Glow, and other outside flowers are very plentiful. Dahlias are being sent in despite the protests of the growers. If the early shipments are any criterion, the acreage must have been very heavily increased by the "farmers" of New Jersey. The recent wet weather has been favorable to their growth, and if there were any sale, the market would soon be flooded with them.

THE GLADIOLUS SITUATION.

A wholesaler, in speaking of the immense shipments of gladioli, said he anticipated this condition last spring as all the bulb men said they had never had such a demand before. He questioned very much, with the high cost of labor, boxes, shipping expenses, etc., together with the greatly overstocked market, whether the growers would get a new dollar for an old one. He was afraid it would be much the same during the dahlia season, although at that time, there would be a much better demand.

BULB PROSPECTS.

The forcing bulb situation is interesting. Paper White narcissi are now in, and will be on the market as cut flowers much earlier than last season, when the bulbs did not arrive until November. Prices are much higher, $21 per 1,000 being asked for 13 centimeters in size. Flowers will have to bring $6 per 100 to pay. Emperor narcissi are quoted $47.50 per 1,000. These initial prices and allowing for bulbs that do not flower will put the cost of the cut flowers, when ready for market, at a rather high figure. The Easter lily flowers will, it is said, not cut any figure in the market before the last of January or February. Formosums are quoted at $30 to $35, per 100 provisionally. Harrisii, 7-9, are $32.50, and such a small quantity in sight as to make no material difference. The giganteums are still an unknown quantity. Large shipments are expected, but no one feels safe, as yet, in quoting prices or quantities that will stand.

NOTES.

Clarence Watson, of the Leo Niessen Co's. force, says it seems almost impossible to get growers, particularly the farmers or large growers of outside flowers like gladioli and asters, to understand the advantage of quality over quantity. If they would select the best varieties, and grow but one-fourth as many, disbudding, and only sending in good salable flowers, properly bunched and packed, they would be almost certain of good returns, and the entire trade would be greatly benefited.

One of the sages of the trade, discussing the present agitation on the high cost of living, and the efforts by the national authorities to reduce prices wherever possible, wondered what effect it would have on the sale of flowers, not that they should be reduced, as they have not at all kept in step with the advancement in other lines, but should an economic wave set in, all things of a luxurious nature might suffer, with flowers among the first.

E. J. Keohane, of the H. F. Michell force, is visiting at the Delaware Water Gap. He declares that in all his experience he has never found the trade in such a receptive mood. The trouble now is to get the goods, there being a ready market for all the standard seeds and plants at greatly increased prices.

Louis Nieman, who will attend the convention, going via Buffalo, will at the close, extend his trip through the Thousand Islands, and into Canada, visiting Montreal, Quebec and other interesting points. He says it is going to be a "regular trip."

Herman Hunkel, and family of Milwaukee, Wis., have been spending a week in Atlantic City, and two days

SOME GOOD STOCK AVAILABLE.

Market conditions underwent little change during the past week. Stock, however, is a little more plentiful, with quality somewhat improved. Gladioli are leading the list, and are the mainstay. In roses, Ophelia and Russell are better than a month ago. Asters are plentiful and improving in form. Some fine stock in this line is being received from California with long, heavy stems and large flowers.

NOTES.

Earl Hampton, of the Joseph G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia, Pa., who showed his fall line to the trade here last week, reports that business is better than expected.

Miss Helen Kirkley, formerly bookkeeper for the Wm. L. Rock Flower Co., is receiving congratulations on her approaching marriage.

H. Kusik & Co. handled a large amount of stock last week, surpassing all sales for this summer in gladioli, roses and asters.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. has enjoyed the best summer business in many years. Funeral work has been unusually heavy.

The Pinehurst Gardens, of Pleasant Hill, report supply below requirements. This firm is sending in some very good gladioli.

McGrail & Conkling had an extra good July, and the present month indicates a fine summer trade.

T. J. Noll & Co. report a better supply of stock this week, but the demand brings a daily cleanup.

BUSINESS FAILS TO SHOW LIFE.

Even the professional optimist of the wholesale districts, who feels that he has a reputation to sustain, surrendered during the past week and acknowledged that business was "pretty bad." It was all that, and it almost called for a stretch of imagination to dignify what little dickering that went on, with the name of business. There would be a little buying in the morning, but to an outside observer, all that was carried away by the buyers, could scarcely be missed from the wholesale stores. It is hard to determine whether conditions in asters or gladioli were the worst, as in both they were exceptionally bad. In the case of the latter, it is stated, that some of the growers are peddling them to the retail stores at $1 per 100. There is, of course, some exceptionally fine stock, in gladioli, on the market that brings fair prices, but the lack of demand is the wet blanket to practically all stocks. The aster situation was about the same. The later and larger varieties are now on the market, but they create no stir. The cut hydrangeas are not arriving in quantity, but most of them had better have been left on the bushes to beautify the landscape. Phlox, zinnias, rudbeckias, cosmos and various other outdoor stock, is adding to the misery. There was a heavy supply of American Beauty roses, even most of the specials going at ridiculously low prices, as there was simply no market for them in the stores that during the "season" are the heaviest buyers. There is always some demand for tea roses, but half that came in the past week had to be sacrificed or lost. The supply of sweet peas is light, and but few lilies of any variety, or lily of the valley are seen.

August 11.—There is practically no change in the condition of the market over that of the past week. In roses, which are plentiful, some improvement in quality is noted, due to cooler weather.

NOTES.

A. E. Cazan, owner of the retail business heretofore known as D. J. Pappas, Inc., located at 2751 Broadway, is now conducting it under his own name. Coming to this country from Greece, over 20 years ago, when a mere boy, he has not only worked up to be a proprietor, but also acquired, both in speaking and writing, a good knowledge of our language. In brief, he is now a good American, is a member of the Society of American Florists, the Florists' Telegraph Delivery and the Greek-American Florists' Association.

Roy K. Moulton, who lives in Flushing, and is something of a scribe, has been writing to the Evening Mail, a graphic description of the great storm that recently destroyed so many of their fine trees. He also mentions that a committee of Flushing citizens has been organized to invite the Prince of Wales and show him a good time.

Mrs. William H. Long, of 412 Columbus avenue, has gone on her annual trip to Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, to visit her parents, Captain and Mrs. Fraser. With her husband, Mrs. Long, when in New York, leads an active life in the florist business, and all will wish her a pleasant visit and safe return.

John A. Jacobson, son of Peter Jacobson, the well known grower of Elmhurst, L. I., recently returned from France where he spent a strenuous year in the motor transport corps of the American army. He is in good health, and for the present, is assisting his father in his business.

At the store of David Clarke's Sons, during the past week, there has been great activity, not particularly in the regular trade, but in repainting and decorating the interior. All the boys donned overalls, and worked like beavers and deserve credit for doing a good job.

G. E. M. Stumpp has purchased the North Sea Gardens, including store and greenhouses, formerly owned by James Guylfoil. The property is located on the North Sea road, Southampton, L. I. He has also purchased 15 acres of land for a nursery.

Paul Meconi is the latest to announce his intension of joining the convention party. Paul is very fortunate in having a wife who has a good business head to manage the establishment in his absence.

A. L. Young is carrying a cane, which nicely matches his Palm-beach suit; but he offers the excuse that he has had an attack of rheumatism.

Stephen and Mrs. Masur are dividing their time between their Brooklyn business and their summer home at Culvers Lake, N. J.

There are grounds for stating that another wholesale store will be opened in West 28th street in the near future.

William Mackie is receiving a good stock of gladioli, among which are some of the new and fine varieties.

M. Sampson, Jr., of Noe & Sampson, is on a two weeks' vacation.

A. F. F.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

COOLER WEATHER IMPROVES BUSINESS.

Market conditions underwent a decided change for the better last week, when the mercury dropped, and cooler temperature prevailed. The quality of flowers, improved greatly, and there was a noticeable increase in sales, particularly in counter trade. Funeral work was in constant demand throughout the week, with an increase noted the latter part, with a moderate amount of wedding work at all times. There was a marked improvement in the quality of roses, particularly Columbia, which is certainly showing up fine for erly in the season. Premier is also making a distinct hit with the florists as well as with the flower-buying public. Sunburst and Ophelia are also much better in quality. Auratum lilies, hydrangeas, and Jap lilies are coming into excellent use for funeral work, and summer decoration. Orchids are scarce, and are bringing $1.50 each. Shasta daisies, verbenas, calendulas, and a large variety of other summer flowers are offered in the retail stores.

NOTES.

A handsome, up-to-date flower store will be opened in this city about September 15, to be known as the Blossom Floral Co., with Richard I. Blossom and Ruth Flick-Blossom the members of the new firm. The new flower store will be located at 110 West Wayne street, which is in the center of the shopping district of the city. Mr. and Mrs. Blossom will attend the S. A. F. convention at Detroit next week.

Herman Leitz, of the New Haven Floral Co., made a motor trip to the large growers of Richmond, Ind., and vicinity, and reports the ranges in excellent condition, and working to their full capacity. The New Haven Floral Co's. range is also in fine shape, with all of the carnation plants benched and ready to bloom. Rose and chrysanthemum stock was also very thrifty here.

A. J. Lanternier and wife have returned from a week's outing at Rome City, Ind. A large new refrigerator has been installed in the Lanternier store, replacing their previous ice-box, which was too small for present use.

The opening of the new Irene Byron tuberculosis hospital, August 10, was the occasion for the use of many hundreds of flowers. The rooms were decorated with gladioli and roses which were donated by the Flick Floral Co.

Miss Marguerite Flick, who has been visiting friends and relatives in Toledo, O., for the past month, will go to Detroit to attend the convention before returning to this city.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

GERMAN offers of seeds are coming in.

SPOT CANARY seed at New York is 11¼ cents.

THE price of bags at Chicago, August 13, was $65.00.

VISITED NEW YORK: J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.

WINTER-TOP SETS are reported a good crop in many sections.

WINTER VETCH new crop seed is badly needed at Chicago.

A. HENDERSON & Co., Chicago, say their Formosum lily bulbs are on the way, due about September 1.

THE American Bulb Co., Chicago, reports having received a carload each of Formosum lily bulbs and Paper White narcissus.

THE timothy seed crop will be larger than last year, which was 80 per cent of the normal. It is thought carried over stocks are small.

A. J. BROWN, of Grand Rapids, Mich., is in California. He left his golf bag at home and his 38-foot cruising boat at Northport Point, Mich.

PARIS, KY., August 11.—Buyers and farmers are deadlocked over the price of blue grass seed of this season's crop. The dealers think the farmers overestimate the crop shortage.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade Aug. 13, were as follows: Timothy $10.50 to $11.50 per 100 pounds; September $13.85 sellers, October $12.25 bid.

ONION SEED prospects in California, according to the government Seed Reporter, show a 50 per cent improvement over last year and are better than any crop for four years. Yield about 350 pounds per acre.

AS an instance of the government delay in the settlement of freight claims, a November, 1917, claim for bulbs, never delivered, was paid by the railroad administration August 13, 1919.

ONE well known English house is offering United States dealers several thousand pounds of American grown Red Wethersfield onion at 60 cents, testing 85 per cent. This seed is British government surplus.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened unchanged and October and December dropped five cents, August 12, with cash holding firm at $30.00, no change during the week. Timothy was steady, cash being offered at $5.40, September $5.90, October $5.75, December $5.82½ and March $6.05.

THE War Trade Board section of the Department of State announces that General Import License PBF No. 37 (W. T. B. R. 804, issued July 14, 1919) has been revised and extended, effective August 7, 1919, so as to permit the importation thereunder, without individual import licenses, of potash, including potash produced in Germany.

CROWN POINT, IND.—Alois Frey and wife expect to leave shortly for California where they will engage in the growing of freesia bulbs and other stocks. The greenhouses here will be continued under expert management.

VISITED CHICAGO: J. D. Eisele, president Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., and wife, enroute to the Pacific coast; A. E. Bather, with Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; F. E. Burton, of the Burton Seed Co., Denver, Colo.; W. D. Balcom, Greeley, Colo.

Gen Robert Rennie, Toronto, Ont.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Wood, Stubbs & Co., report having a good crop of Bermuda onion sets which yielded 15 bushels of 32 pounds each. Silver Skin and Yellow Danvers did not do nearly as well, possibly on account of the climatic conditions during the period of principal growth. All, however, were of good quality.

General Robert Rennie.

Brigadier-General Robert Rennie, president of the Wm. Rennie Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont., with branches in Winnipeg, Man., Vancouver, B. C., and Montreal, Que., who commanded the Fourth Brigade, Canadian expeditionary forces, with a long list of brilliant achievements in many critical situations since entering the war over four years ago, returned recently with his unit. Needless to say he was welcomed in a manner that left no doubt of its sincerity, while General Rennie's popularity with his men was most evident from the affectionate references to their former commander on the occasion of demobilization, as well as the inscription chalked on the cars bearing them homeward, which read: "We're the chirpy birds—we feed on Rennie's seeds."

General Rennie, who had been connected with the Queen's own regiment in Toronto for many years, and held the rank of lieutenant-colonel, offered his services in August, 1914, shortly after war had been declared, and was assigned to organization. In September, he was placed in command of the third battalion, first Canadian division and went to France with the first brigade in February 1915. Among the principal engagements in which General Rennie and his command made brilliant records were the second battle of Ypres, Festubert and Canadian Orchard, Givenchy, St. Eloi crater operations, the battle of the Somme, Vimy Ridge, Hill 76, near Lenz; Amiens, including the capture of Marcelcave and Fransart; the battle of Arras, and the taking of Chapel Hill; Guemappa and Vis-en-Artois. For his services in the field, he has received the following decorations: C. B., C.

Onion Sets.

The Government Seed Reporter is wrong in saying the onion set crop in the Chicago district will be harvested by August 15, the 25th of the month being nearer right. The yield is placed at 2⅞ to three bushels per pound of seed, but Vaughan's inspector says it will be less than 2¾ bushels.

Louisville, the Reporter says, is harvesting six bushels to the pound, Chillicothe three bushels, Wisconsin in line with Chicago, and Oregon 85 per cent of normal.

Chicago, August 13.—About 50 per cent of the onion sets on the south side have been lifted, and on the north side about 75 per cent. The sets are dry and beautiful samples. The growers are trying to lift with their own labor and thus prevent further loss. The result now looks like 2½ bushels to the pound of seed.

Chicago Notes.

A conference of seedsmen with the state department of agriculture, will be held at Springfield August 14 to discuss the rules and regulations formulated in connection with the state seed law.

The Sibley warehouse, built by Hiram Sibley & Co., while in the seed business, and later occupied by the Northrup, Braslan, Goodwin Co., is to be changed into a cold storage plant.

Chas. Waterman's onion set growers' bank at South Holland was robbed of $7,500 August 8, in a holdup by gunmen.

Leonard Condon, of Condon Bros., Rockford, was a visitor this week.

Miss E. Heskett, of Vaughan's Seed store, is in the east on vacation.

Corn Borer Quarantine Hearing.

The federal horticultural board has given notice that a hearing will be held in the State House, Boston, Mass., at 10:30 a. m., August 15, in order that any person interested in the proposed quarantine in the states of Massachusetts and New Hampshire against the corn borer, now known to occur in that section of the country, may appear either in person or be heard by attorney.

New York Seed Trade.

Otto Pflug, who had been an employe of J. M. Thorburn & Co., for 14 years, died recently in a hospital from a complication of diseases. He had been in ill health for several years. He was 61 years old and is survived by his widow.

The S. S. Nieuw Amsterdam, which sailed from Brest, August 2, is due to arrive here, August 14. She is supposed to carry bulbs.

S. S. Skidelsky, who is now located at 50 Park place, will meet his old friends at the Detroit convention.

The next ship carrying French bulbs will not arrive until September 8.

J. W. Guille, of Vaughan's Seed Store, is on his vacation.

Government Seed Contracts.

Contracts have been awarded by the department of agriculture on the basis of the opening of bids, July 22, for the supply of garden and flower seed for the annual congressional distribution. This opening was supplementary to that of February, and was made necessary when it was found at that time that prices were high, the market upset, and the appropriation made by congress somewhat depleted.

VAUGHAN'S GIANT PANSIES

VAUGHAN'S INTERNATIONAL PANSIES

Vaughan's International Pansy Mixture was first offered by us in 1889. We import from all the best European sources. Each year has added to the quality of its flowers and variety of the colors. We buy every year novelties of known merit to improve the mixture; it is always complete, always the latest and always the best mixture. We add to all Pansy Mixtures which we now buy more than 50 per cent of the choicest named kinds obtainable, each in correct proportion. This is one of the Specialties that has established the reputation of Vaughan's Flower Seeds, and one which we maintain most carefully.
Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.50; ½ oz., $5.00; oz., $10.00.

Vaughan's Giant Pansy Mixture.

Embraces, besides all the separate shades and colors, five special strains not listed elsewhere, and which can only be had in this and our International Mixture. This mixture includes the richest reds, coppers and bronzes, together with the most delicate rose and pink shadings, all the distinct colors of Trimardeau and the splendid Cassier strain.
Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., 75c. oz., $5.00; ¼ lb., $18.00.

Vaughan's Cut Flower Mixture

This mixture is put up by ourselves and contains mostly light colored sorts. We have sold this mixture for several seasons to some of our Chicago cut flower growers, who have realized big returns from the sale of flowers. Pansies are as easily grown as violets, require less care and bring better results. Trade pkt., 25c; ⅛ oz., 60c; oz., $4.00.

New Early-Flowering Giant Pansies

The new strain produces its giant flowers about four weeks earlier than other known types. In March, when the old type pansies hardly show any buds, the plants of the new strain bore from 3 to 5 of their giant flowers. Early-Flowering Giant White, Yellow, Light Blue, Dark Blue and Mixed (Four Colors). Trade pkt. (500 seeds), 35c; ⅛ oz., 70c; oz., $5.

Chicago Parks Bedding Mixture.

This is a mixture made by ourselves from 20 different and distinct varieties of this type. While the flowers of this strain do not grow as large as those of the Giant Pansies they excel them by a much greater number of flowers to a plant. Trade Pkt., 25c; ¼ oz., 60c; oz., $2.00.

Vaughan's P. P. (Popular Price) Mixture of Pansies

This mixture, like all "Vaughan" mixtures, is made up by ourselves from separate colors and strains of the Giant and Chicago Parks Bedding types and will furnish a large variety of colors with a good proportion of giant flowers. Trade Pkt., 25c; ⅛ oz., 50c; oz., $3.00.

NEW EARLY-FLOWERING or WINTER-BLOOMING

GIANT PANSIES

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe Winters and to bloom right on into the Summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, eye.
15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with eye.
16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
17. CHARM OF MARCH Dark velvety blue
18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations, 500 seeds, 25c; 1000 seeds, 40c; ⅛ oz., $1.10; ¼ oz., $2.00; oz., $7.50.

10. KENILWORTH GIANT EXHIBITION is the very finest complete mixture ever sent out. Seed carefully saved only from marked plants of all varieties, with the largest and best shaped flowers and richest coloring. It is impossible to convey an adequate idea of the delightful variations in color and markings of this unrivalled mixture. 500 seeds, 30c; 1000 seeds, 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.35; ¼ oz., $2.50; oz., $10.00.

12. KENILWORTH GIANT PRIZE is undoubtedly the largest flower and longest stemmed Pansy in the world The enormous flowers are of perfect form and of great substance. Petals overlapped and undulating. The rich colorings and markings are widely varied, some flowers being almost self-colored. 500 seeds, 30c; 1000 seeds, 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.35; ¼ oz., $2.50; oz., $10.

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.. President; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress Street, Boston, Mass., Counsel; J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa, Treasurer.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

OSHKOSH, WIS.—The army worm is working in three townships in this county.

C. B. KNICKMAN, of McHutchison & Co., New York, was in San Francisco, Calif., the last of July.

ROANOKE, VA.—The annual meeting of the Virginia State Horticultural Society will be held in this city, December 3-5.

EVANSTON, ILL.—Oiled roads, which prevent water reaching the roots, are said to be causing considerable damage to trees in this city.

THE mid-summer meeting of the Michigan State Horticultural Society will be held at Bangor, August 19-20, with an interesting programme.

WINCHESTER, VA.—Alvin C. Richards of this city has purchased the property of the Arden Orchard Co., consisting of 287 acres near Arden, for $200,000.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.—The city council has instructed the superintendent of streets to provide for the planting of trees along the new highway from Torrey Pines to India street.

BRITISH importers are complaining of the required prepayment for French rose stocks, adding that last year's stocks were much under size, and that there was much difficulty in adjusting prices according to size.

THE market development committee of the American Association of Nurserymen, through F. F. Rockwell, manager of the service bureau, 220 West 42nd street, New York, is asking suggestions for a good slogan for its campaign.

SACRAMENTO, CALIF.—About 15 per cent of the pears arriving in this city from river points are infected with codling moth, according to reports of the state horticultural commission. Large quantities may be condemned and turned into by-products.

THE June National Nurseryman has a very excellent article exposing the fallacy of reasoning used by the federal horticultural board in support of Quarantine 37. This article explains the working of similar medical regulations in immigration, and how the people finally rise in indignation against the senselessness of cleansing the human race of disease by such methods.

Palm City Miami's Plan.

Miami, Fla., is doing well, as it desires to enchance its general attractiveness, to turn from the Australian pine to the palm, says the Miami Metropolis, which urges that the good work go on and that palms by the thousand be set out each year in every section of the city and that every species of the palm family be found on the streets and in door yards. The Metropolis adds "Make Miami tropical."

Fruit Crop Estimates.

Apples.—The salient feature of the August report, as issued by the bureau of crop estimates through its fruit crop specialists, is the very large crop indicated from the northwest states, which has shown some increase over the July 1 estimate. On the other hand, conditions throughout the east have declined, particularly in western New York, New England, Ohio, and the Virginias. The Maine crop, however, holds up well above the average. The middle west has also shown a decline, with the exception of Arkansas and the Ozark section which have a good crop. The commercial production for the United States is now estimated at 23,075,000 barrels as compared with 24,740,000 barrels in 1918. The box apple crop promises to be 30,675,000 boxes as compared with 21,309,000 boxes in 1918, or an increase of 44 per cent in the box apple crop. The barrel apple crop on the other hand promises to be 12,850,000 barrels as compared with 17,657,000 barrels in 1918, or 73 per cent of last year's barrel apple crop.

Peaches.—The condition of the commercial peach crop has shown a decline over July estimates of about 300,000 bushels. This decrease has been throughout the east and north, New York, Michigan, Maryland, New Jersey, West Virginia and Delaware, all declining a few points over July estimates. On the other hand, the Georgia peach crop has held up to earlier estimates, while the Texas and Arkansas crops, due to excellent growing conditions have shown an increase, the Texas crop over-running earlier estimates by more than 300 cars. The Elberta crop in Colorado and the northwest promises to be heavy and the movement will be particularly heavy the last 10 days in August. The United States crop is now estimated at 29,784,000 bushels as compared with 20,597,000 bushels last year, or a 45 per cent increase over the crop of 1918.

Pears.—The commercial pear crop shows a five point increase over last month, and the commercial crop in the important states is now estimated at 8,351,000 bushels as compared with 7,589,000 bushels last year, or 110 per cent of last year. The feature of the report is the very large crop in California and the west generally. California has the largest commercial pear crop in its history, and the production is estimated at considerably over 4,000,000 bushels. Conditions throughout the east have shown some improvement over last month, particularly in New York and Delaware. The Hudson Valley pear crop now promises to equal that of 1918. Michigan and Illinois have also increased over the July estimate.

July Flowering Trees and Shrubs.

Among the lindens, the last to flower are the small-leaved European Tilia cordata and its varieties. The handsomest of these is the var. cordifolia, which differs from the type in its larger leaves and rather larger flowers. The Arboretum specimen is a shapely tree which this year when in flower has been more conspicuous than any linden-tree in the collection. The Japanese clethra (C. barbinervis) is in flower about two weeks earlier than the native C. alnifolia. The Japanese species is a larger plant than C. alnifolia and in Massachusetts has grown 10 or 15 feet high and nearly as much through. The foliage is of a lighter green than that of the American plant; the flowers are less crowded in the racemes and lack the odor which makes C. alnifolia one of the most delightful of summer-flowering shrubs. In the Arboretum plants of the Japanese clethra have so far escaped the attacks of red spiders which often disfigure here those of C. alnifolia.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, July 26, 1919.

Trees on Michigan Highways.

The Michigan legislature has passed a law to encourage planting of nut-bearing and other food-producing trees along the principal state highways. It becomes the duty of the state highway commission and the commission of agriculture to supervise the setting of such trees which will be furnished by the state agricultural college to local officials and individuals at nominal cost. Injuring such trees or affixing notices of any kind to them is made a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of from $1 to $25 and imprisonment for not more than 30 days.

Forest Products.

An exhibit was recently held in the west to illustrate the possibilities of spruce, fir and other woods. Among the products included were: Furniture, reed and braid, yarns, extensively used in making rugs, bagging, absorbent, cloth, glue tissue, wrapping twine, webbing and rope, all produced from wood paper. Wood flour, made from chemically-treated, finely-ground spruce, figured in the exhibit. This flour is the basis for phonograph records, linoleum and artificial lath.—The Wall Street Journal Straws.

Market Gardeners

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

H. W. Selby, Philadelphia, Pa., President; C. W. Waid, Grand Rapids, Mich., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., Secretary; Eugene Davis, Grand Rapids, Mich., Treasurer.

Next annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., September 9-12, 1919.

OFFICIALS of over 200 storage warehouses in New York district have been subpoenaed to produce full data on stocks of food on hand.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Much criticism is heard here regarding the express service in handling fresh fruits and vegetables coming to this market, slow deliveries being among the principal causes for complaint. Many shipments received during the past three weeks will return practically nothing.

Pepper Plants.

An elderly couple on a 2½-acre pepper farm near Ft. Myers, Fla., made over $1,500 as the result of their past winter's work. The green pepper sold at $4-$6 per crate at Ft. Myers, the raisers not caring to accept the risk of shipping to far-away markets on consignment.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, August 12.—Cucumbers, Climax baskets, 25 to 50 cents; celery, Michigan, crate, 40 to 50 cents; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 30 to 35 cents; radishes, per 100 bunches,, $1.50 to $1.75; tomatoes, 4 baskets, 50 to 75 cents.

New York, August 11.—Celery, per doz. roots, 20 to 75 cents; cucumbers, 40 to 60 cents per dozen; mushrooms, $1.50 to $3.00 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 6 to 15 cents; lettuce, per package, 50 cents to $2.25; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.50.

Tomato Blight.

Tomato blight, or septoria leaf spot, is the cause of serious damage, according to the agricultural station at the Michigan Agricultural College, East Lansing, which has issued Special Bulletin 88, outlining methods of controlling the disease, copies of which will be sent to those interested upon request. During summers of moderate rainfall, tomato plants blight severely. Experiments of the college have shown that blight is commonly carried to the field from the trash of a preceding diseased tomato crop. Tomato blight is a fungus growth and depends on rainfall for its distribution. It has been found that thoroughly sprayed tomato plants can be kept free from blight injury. In the spraying of tomatoes, it is necessary to use properly made Bordeaux mixture, and to direct the spray so that the plant is thoroughly covered.

Potato Wart.

The potato wart, usually considered one of the most serious of potato diseases, which was discovered in Pennsylvania in September, 1918, and which may occur elsewhere in the United States, is the subject of Circular 32, issued by the United States department of agriculture recently.

The first evidences of the wart are small spongy outgrowths on the potato, especially at the eyes. These increase in size and may grow as large as the tuber itself. In the early stages the warts are light brown, the color becoming darker and finally black with age. Badly diseased potatoes decay in the field and others less seriously attacked are extremely susceptible to rot in storage. The disease does not attack the plant and seldom interferes seriously with the growth of the vines; therefore, the detection of the disease is difficult or impossible before digging time. The wart parasite may be carried into clean soil (1) by drainage water from infested fields, (2) by the distribution of infested soil (as on agricultural implements or on the feet of men or animals), (3) by the use of manure from animals to which diseased tubers have been fed, (4) by garbage into which peelings from diseased tubers have been thrown, and especially (5) by the planting of diseased tubers or of tubers which have been grown in infested soil and carry the infection on their surfaces.

The wide distribution of the potatoes imported from abroad in 1912 and in earlier years makes it possible that wart may have established itself in more than one locality in the United States. The department urges growers to keep watch at digging time for potatoes with warty outgrowths which are light brown when young, black and decayed when old, and report promptly all suspicious cases and send specimens to county agents or to the plant pathologist at agricultural experiment stations or state colleges, or to the plant disease survey, United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Potato Crop Failure Causes.

The agricultural extension service of Ohio State University, Columbus, in a report dated August 15 says the early potato crop in the state, is practically a failure this season due largely to the excessive hot and dry weather. In many instances, the potatoes are scarcely worth digging. Undoubtedly the use of diseased, untreated seed, however, had something to do with the failure, Black scurf, or rosette, was unusually prevalent on shipped potato seed stock last spring. Black scurf upon the tubers is characterized by blackish looking spots on the surface which appear very much like small specks or larger accumulations of black soil. These specks or spots are not removable by ordinary washing, but may be separated from the skin by the point of a knife. Unless the potatoes are treated with corrosive sublimate before planting, the blackish spots, under favorable weather conditions, will give rise to a fungous growth, which will attack the young stems and seriously weaken the plant, thus cutting the possible yield.

The greater damage to early potatoes, however, seemed to be the prevalence of tip burn, a non-parasitic condition, which manifests itself in the drying up of the leaves, beginning at the margins and more especially at the tip. Spraying with bordeaux, while not absolutely preventing the condition, will very materially aid in holding it in check. Early planting and good growing condions will aid in lessening the damage.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture for the period, August 5-12, indicate the price trend mostly downward with liberal movements. Carlot shipments are still somewhat affected by the strike situation. Potato values were no more than fairly sustained in the east, but middle-western markets showed gains. New Jersey sacked Cobblers weakened to $3.60-$4 per 100 pounds f. o. b. South Jersey shipping points and held fairly steady in consuming markets at $3.50-$4.50. Virginia Cobblers ranged $5.25-$6.25 per barrel in most eastern markets and reached $7.75-$8.25 in Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago. Kentucky Cobblers closed higher at $4.40 per 100 pounds f. o. b. and reached $4.50-$5 in consuming centers. Kansas Early Ohios reached a top of $5 per 100 pounds for carlots in Chicago. Minnesota Early Ohios reached a range of $3.50-$3.85 f. o. b. and carried a top of $5 at Chicago Other middle-western markets ruled $4.50 or below. The declining movement of the past two weeks in onions continued with general losses of 25-50 cents per 100 pounds. New Jersey yellow stock closed at $2-$2.25 per hamper in New York, compared with $2.25-$2.65 the previous week. Iowa Red Globes weakened to $3 f. o. b. shipping points. Middle-western yellow stock weakened considerably in terminal markets, closnig at $3.50-$5. California yellows held firm at $2-$2.25 f. o. b. shipping points. Sweet potato movements continued to increase in volume and the same was true of cabbage. Tomatoes decreased 38 cars.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

Foley Iron Frame House

AND WHAT HE THINKS ABOUT IT

Redford, Mich., Aug. 11th, 1917.

Gentlemen:—Of all the houses on my place, the 73 x 400 ft. house which you built for me last year, has given me the greatest satisfaction. It is as well designed as any house I have ever seen, and was erected with the greatest care. I am especially pleased with the painting and glazing.

(Signed) A. J. STAHELIN.

Foley Greenhouses are properly designed, durable and a source of great satisfaction and profit to their owners.

To the one who thinks of building, our estimates, sketches and advice will be worth while.

Practical Greenhouse Work

calls for the best equipment obtainable to gain the most profitable results. Ordinary make-shift greenhouses may answer the purpose, but harder work is required of the owner and smaller returns for his labor and investment.

Every piece of material that enters into the construction of Callahan Cut-to-Fit Greenhouses is the result of much experience on the part of our detail men. The members are cut to exact measure and shipped to you with the plans; all so simple that any man with an ordinary knowledge of greenhouse construction can set them up perfectly.

Callahan Cut-to-Fit Greenhouses

are made of selected Louisiana Red Gulf Cypress, to best withstand the heat and moisture required in greenhouse work.

The Callahan Cut-to-Fit Greenhouse is a practical answer to the market grower's needs, and will give you a lifetime of service at a small expenditure.

No frills no fancy work; just solid, useful, up-to-date construction at low prices.

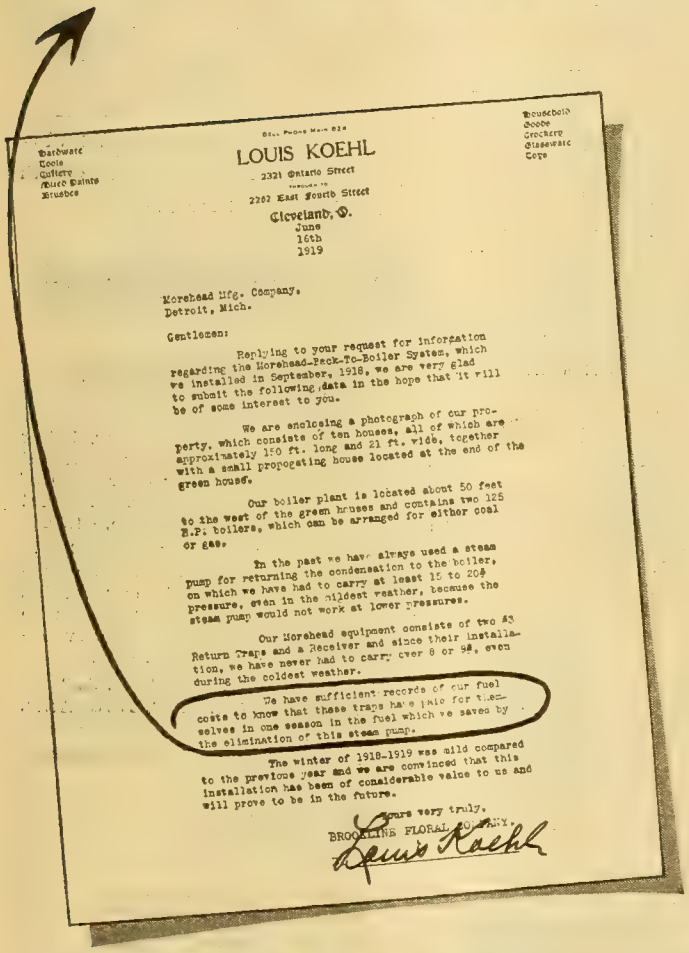
Fuel Saving Pays For Morehead System in One Season



LOUIS KOEHL
2321 Ontario Street
2262 East Fourth Street
Cleveland, O.
June 16th 1919

Morehead Mfg. Company,
Detroit, Mich.

Gentlemen:

Replying to your request for information regarding the Morehead-Back-To-Boiler System, which we installed in September, 1918, we are very glad to submit the following data in the hope that it will be of some interest to you.

We are enclosing a photograph of our property, which consists of ten houses, all of which are approximately 150 ft. long and 21 ft. wide, together with a small propogating house located at the end of the green house.

Our boiler plant is located about 50 feet to the west of the green houses and contains two 125 H.P. boilers, which can be arranged for either coal or gas.

In the past we have always used a steam pump for returning the condensation to the boiler, on which we have had to carry at least 15 to 20# pressure, even in the mildest weather, because the steam pump would not work at lower pressures.

Our Morehead equipment consists of two 43 Return Traps and a Receiver and since their installation, we have never had to carry over 8 or 9#, even during the coldest weather.

We have sufficient records of our fuel costs to know that these traps have paid for themselves in one season in the fuel which we saved by the elimination of this steam pump.

The winter of 1918-1919 was mild compared to the previous year and we are convinced that this installation has been of considerable value to us and will prove to be in the future.

Yours very truly,
BROOKLINE FLORAL COMPANY.
Louis Koehl

Louis Koehl, of the Brookline Floral Company, of Cleveland, O.,—wholesale growers of carnations, roses, chrysanthemums, sweet peas and other flowers—is among the hundreds of florists who strongly recommends and indorses the Morehead Back-to-Boiler System.

Read Mr. Koehl's letter—reproduced on this page—and then send for complete information regarding the Morehead System.

Let us refer you to florists in your locality who have reduced their fuel bills 10 to 50 per cent by installing the Morehead System.

Big Attendance at Splendid Meeting.

When, at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, the curtain went up on the thirty-fifth annual convention of the Society of American Florists, held in Arcadia auditorium, everything proceeded with clock-like regularity. Favored with beautiful weather, the hum and excitement of the large number in attendance, and the gratifying display of trade exhibitors which crowded the building, which is no small structure, to its capacity, the unqualified success of every detail of the convention was apparent. J. F. Sullivan, president of the Detroit Florists' Club, called the convention to order. The Rev. J. M. Barkley opened with the invocation, which was more than usually elaborate and was generally commented upon as especially appropriate to the occasion. President Sullivan, in a brief address, introduced Hon. Thomas P. Penniman, city counselor, who took occasion to recall the time when Philip Breitmeyer, one of Detroit's best liked men and most popular florists, was mayor of the city. He referred to the great loss suffered by Mr. Sullivan in the death of his life partner, who was everybody's friend, and a woman of most exemplary character and Christian life, to which Mr. Sullivan feelingly responded. E. Gurney Hill, Richmond, Ind., who followed, also paid a high tribute to Mrs. Sullivan. He warmly welcomed the Canadian brothers from across the line. President J. F. Ammann before delivering his address, invited to the platform all past-presidents in attendance at the convention, namely, Wm. F. Gude, Philip Breitmeyer, F. H. Traendly, E. G. Hill, F. R. Pierson, George Asmus, Richard Vincent, Jr., Robt. C. Kerr and Chas. H. Totty. The president's address was filled with good meat and food for thought and should be carefully read by every member of the society to be fully appreciated. His most important recommendation, perhaps, was that the growers' commission men and wholesalers be urged to organize national associations in their respective lines to co-operate with the society, and under proper future arrangements, mutually satisfactory, have representation on the board of directors in due time.

The recommendations in the president's address were referred to a special committee of three, consisting of Fred H. Lemon, Paul R. Klingsporn and S. S. Skidelsky, which will report Wednesday morning. The minutes of the executive board as printed were approved, and a special recommendation from the board to increase the salary of Secretary Young to $5,000, on account of his greatly increased duties, was unanimously concurred in. Secretary Young's report was then read and made part of the minutes, as was also the report of Treasurer J. J. Hess, with accompanying audit from certified accountants. On motion of J. A. Manda, the report of Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative, was approved and ordered made of record, similar action being taken as to the report of Mr. Gude as chairman of the committee on Memorial to William R. Smith. In the way of a pleasing diversion from the regular programme, there came as a surprise, a very neat presentation speech from Chas. H. Grakelow, the silver-tongued orator of the City of Brotherly Love, in which he told Wm. F. Gude how much his friends all thought of him, and how much they desired to manifest this feeling, and now did so in the shape of a gold Croix de Guerre, ornamented with diamonds and properly inscribed. This brilliant speech we hope to reproduce in full in a later issue. Mr. Gude responded feelingly. An invitation, accompanied by tickets of admission, from the management of the Ford automobile plant, was received and accepted with thanks. Announcements of a luncheon to the ladies, and the entertainment of visiting Rotarian florists by local Rotarians, Wednesday noon, under escort of Vice-President Fetters, were made. The reports of the state vice-presidents were received and ordered printed. The committee on development of American products, F. R. Pierson, chairman, E. Gurney Hill and Karl P. Baum, submitted its report, which was discussed by Mr. Hill, who maintained the spirit and purpose of Dr. Marlatt and the federal horticultural board had been misunderstood by many florists and others, and the ultimate effect would be highly beneficial in developing American products, of which he instanced, in particular, at this time California palms, for which he predicted a great future; Alabama camellias in the Mobile district, and Tennessee boxwood, as well as numerous varieties of roses developed by Dr. Van Fleet, which would prove highly satisfactory to the growers of this country. The report was adopted as read. The same action was taken as to the report of the committee on school gardens, Benjamin Hammond, chairman. No report was presented by the committee on nomenclature, but Secretary Young read a letter from J. Horace McFarland, Harrisburg, Pa., and this matter was referred to the executive board with power to act. After announcement of the president's reception at the Hotel Statler, Tuesday evening, at which all dress suits were to be taboo, the convention adjourned until 9:30 a. m. Wednesday.

Wednesday's Proceedings.

The convention met pursuant to adjournment, Wednesday morning, President Ammann in the chair. Paul R. Klingsporn and J. J. Beneke were appointed sergeants-at-arms to keep absolute order, the chair announcing that this session was a strictly business one The first in order was the nomination of officers for the ensuing year. W. F. Gude presented the name of Abraham Lincoln Miller, of Jamaica, Long Island, referring in his nomination speech to the great service Mr. Miller had rendered at the time of the Philadelphia flower show, in bringing to that city a solid delegation of 250 New Yorkers. He also referred to the fact that last year Mr. Miller had declined to run in deference to a St. Louis man. Chas. H. Totty, in a strong speech, seconded the nomination, and spoke of the gentlemanly contest that Mr. Miller had carried on in the race with him at New York. Richard Vincent, Jr., also seconded the nomination of Mr. Miller in an able manner, and spoke of his having brought in more new members to the S. A. F. during his (Mr. Vincent's) administration as president, than any other man that year. Chas. H. Grakelow added his testimony to the worth and abilities of Mr. Miller, whom he believed well qualified to lead the vanguard of the S. A. F. for the ensuing year. J. T. D. Fulmer, Des Moines, Iowa, speaking for the far west, also supported the nomination of Mr. Miller, and believed it would be well that the president for 1920 come from the east. Philip Breitmeyer presented the name of J. F. Sullivan, of Detroit, Mich., who, he said, had devoted his whole life to the interests of horticulture. He believed that the middle west was entitled to the presidency next year, and Mr. Sullivan was, without question, fitted to discharge the duties of president with credit and ability, the peer of any man. The nomination was seconded by C. S. McCauley. On motion, the nominations for president were then closed.

Chas. J. Graham nominated F. C. W. Brown, of Cleveland, for vice-president, seconded by F. C. Witthuhn, and by Philip Breitmeyer. On motion of Mr. Breitmeyer, nominations for vice-president were then closed.

George Asmus nominated for secretary, John Young, of New York, whose work in the past he most highly commended, seconded by H. G. Berning, and on motion of Irwin Bertermann, nominations closed for secretary. Mr. Young thanked his friends for their support and commendation, and promised to continue the good work he had been accused of doing.

Philip Breitmeyer nominated J. J. Hess, of Omaha, Neb., for treasurer, and on motion of C. L. Baum, nominations closed. Mr. Hess acknowledged the compliment paid him.

Chas. H. Grakelow, of Philadelphia, nominated for director, for the term expiring 1922, Paul R. Klingsporn, of Chicago. Albert Pochelon, of Detroit, nominated for director, Irwin Bertermann, whom he said he would like to see on the board of directors for life, if that were possible. Chas. H. Totty, remarking that a close contest for the offices proved the strength of the organization, nominated Herman P. Knoble, of Cleveland, for director, seconded by Wallace R. Pierson. On motion of Philip Breitmeyer, nominations for director were closed.

The report of the committee on president's address, Fred H. Lemon, chairman, was read and adopted by unanimous vote, and the recommendations concurred in, on motion of R. C. Kerr.

Robert C. Kerr, chairman of committee on national credits and collections bureau, read his report, and asked that, in view of the fact that credits were naturally the province of the wholecan get along without his fellows, and salers, and should be in their hands, his report be accepted and the committee relieved from further service. On motion, it was so ordered.

Joseph H. Hill presented the report of the committee on extension of affiliation plan, which on motion, was adopted as read.

President Ammann thanked the committee on president's address for their words of commendation of his address, and made a strong speech on co-operation, and the necessity for both individuals and organizations not taking an aloof attitude from their fellows, but heartily joining in all movements for trade and commercial betterment. Any man who takes the position that he refuses to join beneficial trade organizations, because he thinks he is better than they are, is an autocrat, and deserving of no more respect than the German autocracy that we have so lately overthrown. These remarks were received with approval by the convention. He was followed by R. C. Kerr, who urged state and sectional organizations should be formed everywhere as feeders to the parent body.

F. C. W. Brown delivered a strong and timely address on "Selling Flowers by Telegraph." At the conclusion of the paper, on motion of Chas. H. Grakelow, the convention by rising and unanimous vote, with applause, tendered a vote of thanks to Mr. Brown.

Regrets and congratulations were read from John H. Dunlop, and from Mrs. R. E. Darbee, whose gift of chrysanthemums, asters and gladioli was referred to by Secretary Young, as ornamenting the president's table.

Mr. Breitmeyer called attention to the presence of Geo. Wienhoeber, of Chicago, who recently became a member of the S. A. F. Mr. Wienhoeber was asked to stand, and was given a round of applause.

Mr. Gude announced that R. R. White, of the Skinner Irrigation Company, Troy, O., had donated his exhibit for auction, the proceeds to go to the publicity fund.

Proposed amendments to the constitution, as set forth on the printed programme, were now read by Secretary Young seriatim, and each of them was voted on and unanimously adopted, without debate.

The recommendation of the executive board, that the sum of $5,000 be appropriated to the publicity fund, to be used only if needed during the year's campaign, was also adopted by unanimous vote. On motion, the convention now adjourned to 2:00 p. m.

At the afternoon session, President Ammann in the chair, the first order was the reading of the report of the committee on publicity, Henry Penn, chairman. In the absence of Mr. Penn, this was read by Secretary Young. On motion, the report was adopted.

George Asmus, chairman, presented the report of the publicity finance committee, which was discussed, particularly as to the billboard feature, which Philip Breitmeyer said had proved successful in Detroit. The possibility of the government interfering with billboards was referred to in the discussion, but it was made light of, and it was stated that there was at least no immediate danger from this source, and in the meantime, no reason to refuse to use a good thing. The report was adopted, and also the resolution accompanying it, that the finance publicity committee be abolished, and its duties taken over by the publicity committee.

W. W. Gammage told of publicity work in Canada, and predicted a large increase in subscriptions to the fund from the Dominion in the near future. He strongly urged tying up local and national publicity work.

Secretary Young read the report of the promotion bureau, also the financial report of same as of date July 31, 1919, and on motion, both reports were accepted and made of record.

President Ammann named as judge of election, John G. Esler, and as tellers, the following: Walter Pilcher, St. Louis; L. Jules Bourdet, St. Louis; Joseph Kohout, Chicago; Guy W. French, Chicago; Edmond Harvey, Philadelphia; R. C. Kerr, Houston; J. T. D. Fulmer, Des Moines; Joseph A. Manda, West Orange, N. J.; E. B. Hamilton, London, Ont.; F. G. Heinl, Terre Haute, Ind.; Chas. Loveridge, Peoria, Ill., and A. R. King, Winnipeg, Man. As committee on final resolutions, the chair named Messrs. Gammage, Stumpp, and Dorner.

Major P. F. O'Keefe, of Boston, made a strong address on "Publicity," in which he painted a rosy picture of the future of the publicity for flowers movement, and maintained that nothing contributed to the campaign fund for publicity should be considered as otherwise than a highly paying investment, not a gift. In the absence of the author, the paper on "The Opportunity for Retail Floral Publicity," by Payne Jennings, was read by H. P. Knoble, of Cleveland, and was received and ordered spread on the minutes.

President Ammann highly praised the work of Vice-President Fetters for the convention, and everything connected with it, and referred to his many courtesies to visiting florists, explaining that through some unaccountable oversight in printing, his name had been accidentally omitted from the printed programme of the convention.

A meeting of the Michigan state association was announced for immediately after this session. After announcement of the boat trip for the evening, an adjournment was taken until 9:30 a. m., Thursday.

Election of Officers.

The Thursday morning session was taken up with the election of officers, which resulted as follows: For president, A. L. Miller, 234; J. F. Sullivan, 187; vice-president, F. C. W. Brown, 379; secretary, John Young, 386; treasurer, J. J. Hess, 316. For director, to serve three years, Herman Knoble, of Cleveland, received 273 votes. Paul R. Klingsporn and Irwin Bertermann both received 256 votes for director, and agreed to toss a coin to decide, which, luckily for Klingsporn, fell heads up as he called, and he was then declared elected.

President Ammann's Address.

I cannot find word adequate to express the great pleasure it gives me to preside at this meeting. I do not consider myself worthy of the high office you have conferred upon me, by electing me your president. I feel that the honor should be intended more for St. Louis, the community I represent, than for just the individual. Be that as it may, I sincerely, and from the bottom of my heart, thank the St. Louis Florists' Club for electing me to this, the most cherished and honorable position in the gift of our beloved society. My constant prayer and aim has been that I may live up to your expectations, and to the great responsibilities of the office. The future only will tell how well this has been done, hence, I beg you to withhold judgment for a little while, and when the curtain finally drops, and this administration goes out, kindly cover our mistakes with the mantle of charity.

We are just now in the first stages, so to speak, of the reconstruction period; after one of the greatest wars ever fought. We can only grasp the immensity of it when we stop to consider that approximately 50,000,000 men were mobilized for the great conflict, of which number, 8,000,000 are dead, 18,000,000 are wounded, 6,000,000 are permanent wrecks, and 7,000,000 were blown to pieces, burried dead or alive, or are prisoners, to be worked or starved to death. Nine million civilians, women, children and aged, have been murdered, starved, and slain by disease, just because some war lords "dreamed" of world conquest.

Colossal and unprecedented as it was, nevertheless strong and courageous people can stand it, if only they resolve that it shall not have been done in vain. Let us, as true Americans, resolve that the 50,000 or more of red blooded Americans who gave up their lives, and made the supreme sacrifice on a foreign field of battle, have not died in vain, and that we, as members of a national body whose charter was given by an act of the congress of the United States, shall unflinchingly do our part in time of peace as we did in time of war, by extending the hand of true Christian fellowship to the bleeding nations of Europe, and by honorably, and in an American, business-like way, work untiringly to make our own nation better morally, politically and commercially. Above all, let us insist that everyone who wishes to claim, and does claim citizenship in this great land, be first of all, an American. Right here, let me quote you from an editorial in the New York Times which I consider just as apropos now as during the war, entitled, "The More Excellent Way":

"This colossal war is profoundly affecting American thought and life. It is safe to say that more men and women are thinking, and thinking seriously, than ever before in our history. The days of prosperity are not conducive to serious thought. Life is too easy. Things come without over much effort. At such times, we are prone to skim the surface, and miss the depths. A certain light-hearted flippancy seems to go hand in hand with prosperity. That day is gone. Times have changed. The placid depths are broken up. The days in which we live, impose upon us the duty of serious thinking and a deeper sense of gravity. This war has brought home to a good many men the consciousness that they have somehow missed the path of high endeavor. We have been walking in the shadows, instead of breathing the free air of the mountains. But today, men are searching for the way to the shining tablelands. To find that path and, when found, to walk in it, they recognize as a duty to themselves and to their country.

"This discovery means a radical change in the general attitude of life. It cannot be accomplished without a new conception of the law of attainment. Men are born to achieve. A kindly but shrewd observer of American life recently remarked, that its outstanding characteristic was the passion for attainment. And it is here that the war is teaching the great lesson of life and conduct. Before the war, men valued life in proportion to what they could get out of it. Not what they could give, but what they could get; not how much they could put into life, but how much they could extract from it. They laid life under tribute for their own ease, enjoyment and comfort. That man had attained most, who got most. The one idea was to get, and having got, to keep. There was little thought of service rendered, less of sacrifice to be made. The imperious demand on life was to give, give.

"We are slowly, but surely, learning that there is a more excellent way. The war has come with its stern demand for service and sacrifice upon the part of every American citizen. In its lurid light, we are learning the more excellent way of attainment. It is teaching the old Lent lesson that the man who seeks to save his life loses it, and the man who sacrifices his life, saves it. Who can tell, said an old Greek philosopher, whether to die may not be to live, and to live may not be to die? It was a paradox, but all life is a paradox. The man who values life by what he gets out of it, does not really live. He exists, but existence is not the attainment. It defeats its own ends. The great need of this critical moment, is that men should think of what they can give, not what they can get. The need of the hour is the extinction of selfishness."

SOCIETY'S PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE.

And now friends, for a brief summary of our work of the past, present and future. Thirty-five years ago this society was organized, as our charter reads, "for the development and advancement of floriculture and horticulture in all their branches: to increase and diffuse the knowledge thereof, and for kindred purposes in the interest of floriculture and horticulture." Let us see how well we have lived up to the precepts laid down for us by the grand old pioneers of our organization. Statistics speak for the wonderful advancement of both floriculture and horticulture, and I shall not burden you with figures on that, at this time. Knowledge has certainly been spread over this land, creating a love for the beautiful, through the various mediums of our society. It will not be amiss here to name just a few. The school gardens committee, under the splendid guidance of its chairman, Benjamin Hammond, has done and is still doing great work along this line. The American Rose Society, with its long list of both amateur and professional members, is spreading the gospel of, "A rose for every home and a bush for every garden," through the publication of the Rose Annual. Time can only tell the results of this great work. Many more active influences in the past, the national flower shows, convention gardens and others, could be mentioned, but suffice to say that this society has truly lived up to the mandate of its charter, in the spreading of knowledge of floriculture and horticulture, from its very beginning.

Just now we are in the midst of the greatest campaign of publicity for floriculture the world has ever known. Ornamental horticulture is also coming in for its full share in this great plan. Aside from the paid advertisements, we are getting a lot of valuable information before the public through the promotion bureau, which material is sent out from the secretary's office at very little cost to the society. Of this you will hear more in detail later from the secretary's report. This is just a citation to show the increase and diffusion of knowledge of the various branches.

KINDRED ORGANIZATIONS.

What about the kindred bodies in the interest of floriculture and horticulture? First of all, we have the Florists' Hail Association, a product of this society, organized 32 years ago, which gives protection to over 1,600 greenhouse establishments, with more than 45,000,000 feet of glass insured. It has paid out, to date, over $465,000 in losses to its members, and has at present a reserve fund of over $47,000. Of course, when we think of hail insurance, we think of J. G. Esler, who has faithfully steered this wonderful by-product along the road of success, from its inception to the present date.

Next we have the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, of much later origin, but such a wonderful growing medium, that it, too, bids fair to vie with the parent organization in the near future, as to numbers in membership. Organized in 1909, it now has a membership of ever 1,100 and has transmitted by telegraph the past year, orders to the amount of approximately $1,000,000, and the worthy secretary, A. Pochelon, informs me this is bound to increase from 30 to 50 per cent annually. This is, without a doubt, the greatest medium that floriculture has, through which to spread the gospel of publicity. We cannot think of this young gaint of an organization, without bowing our heads in sorrow for the great loss to the trade, and to humanity, of its founder, Ex-president J. A. Valentine. We, too, are ever mindful of the efficient secretary of this organization, Mr. Pochelon, who with untiring afforts has really been the bulwark of its great progress. I plead with every member of our society to give this wonderful offspring all the support you can, by assisting its officers, and especially the secretary, in putting the retail division of floriculture on a higher plane than ever before, through efficiency and service. You cannot but help in benefiting the entire trade by rendering unselfish service to anyone branch thereof.

In addition to the above named, we have numerous other kindred societies, whose origin can be directly traced to this parent body, such as the American Carnation Society, the rose society, the chrysantheum, the sweet pea, the peony, and the gladiolus societies. The latter has its annual exhibition at this meeting, and the beautiful blooms shown here, I am sure, speak for the wonderful progress of this popular summer flower. All of these kindred organizations have done a vast amount of good and bid fair to even make much greater progress in the future.

TRADE AFFILIATION.

We have covered the past and touched on the present briefly. Now let us look into the future just a little. What this society needs to encourage more than any other one thing, for its future success, is closer trade affiliation. We have the material for making one of the finest retail organizations in the world in the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association. Now we need a national wholesale and commission men's organization, and in addition to this, we need a national growers' organization. These three branches of our trade should be thoroughly organized, and through their proper accredited representatives have a place in the executive body of this society. These branches of the trade should not be organized one against the other, as is sometimes the narrow view, but rather for the purpose of better co-operation with one another, for the mutual benefit of all. This can be done, and I predict will be done, in the very near future.

MEMBERS OF SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND FRIENDS AT ARCADIA AUDITORIUM, DETROIT, MICH., AUG. 20, 1919.

I want to briefly call to mind a few topics that even now demand such co-operation. First of all, a credit system is needed for each branch; a standard grading system for both plants and cut flowers; a knowledge of the cost of doing business, and cost of production, is necessary for the success of either. We also need more complete statistics of the various branches of our business. I could mention numerous other items that we have immediate need for to more successfully carry on our trade, but I name these few for your earnest consideration. I am glad the retailers have such a good start, and I do hope the other two branches of our trade will get busy at once along similar lines.

There need be no fear of so many branch organizations that it might tend to lessen the interest in this, the parent society, for rather the opposite has already been proven. Never since our national body was organized, have we had so many special interests in various branches of our trade, organized, and yet the parent society is growing by leaps and bounds. This is, and always will be the medium through which all others can meet on mutual ground.

One of the most important reasons for closer co-operation of our trade branches, I forgot to mention above, is that of labor. We all are no doubt beginning to realize that the matter of labor is to be a very important one in the near future. We should have standard working hours. It is not fair for one grower, for instance, who has his help on the eight-hour day schedule, to have to compete with others, working men 10 and 12 hours a day. Let us seriously consider this humane side of our profession. In the past 25 years, greenhouse labor was the most underpaid and overworked in this country. Had it not been the love for the kind of work, and the lack of competition in this line, we could not have held men with the qualifications required, good growers or designers, at wages and hours maintained in the average greenhouse establishments. Let us not wait until we are forced by organized labor and public sentiment to solve this problem. Let us do it now.

Growers, wholesalers and retailers, let us put our men, and ourselves also, if you please, on the standard American, eight-hour day schedule, and let us in reverence to God, and for the love of man, close our shops on Sunday. Do not say it cannot be done, for many instances can be cited, where it is now being done, and very successfully, too. I know of establishments that even have adopted the five and a half week day programme, giving their help Saturday afternoon off, in addition to the eight-hour day, and Sunday closing. We can do just what we want and undertake to do in this fair land of ours, just so long as we do not trespass upon the rights of others. That is the definition of our free country, and when all who class themselves as Americans, once get that straight, we will need less police protection, and the country will be even more a "Land of the Free, and Home of the Brave." Oh! let us put humanity first in America, and America first in the world.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

A word on the proposed amendment to our constitution, with reference to representatives on the executive board, from kindred organizations. You will note we have classified the various states. This is done to induce representation and co-operation from the small states, as well as from the large ones. It may be said that the executive board would get too large and unwieldy. I say, it may be said, however, there is little room for such objection. Why, just think what a wonderful organization this would be if we had each of our 48 states represented in our executive body, in addition to the duly elected members and the other affiliating organization members. We may have as many as 60 or 75. That may be beyond our fondest dreams, but, at least, let us try for it. You know behind every vision, there must be pep. The best gunner in the world would fail if he did nothing but aim. It takes power, bullets and action; so while I am aiming for one of the most representative executive boards of any national body, you furnish the ammunition, and let us pass that amendment. Let us have more affiliation.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

In placing before you a few suggestions, for your consideration. I think the first and foremost is that the annual and life membership dues both should be substantially increased. This has been recommended by some of my predecessors. We have an amendment before this meeting, to increase the anual dues from $3.00 to $5.00, and the life membership from $25.00 to $50.00, and I hope this amendment will be adopted by a substantial majority. I also recommend that this body approve the other amendments offered. The executive board at its annual meeting, carefully considered these, and unanimously agreed to submit them for your consideration. I am quite sure all the directors heartily approve each of them. I also suggest that we should, as soon as possible, have another national flower show. With our publicity campaign, now in full swing, this would be a great asset to the work.

May I not plead closer co-operation for all members, with the society in using the dealers' helps, and to tie up locally with this great publicity movement. Take an active part in all organization work. Assist the committees, in carrying on their work by answering all correspondence promptly. Let us be considerate of the other fellow, who renders service unselfishly. Remember, every one who serves on a committee, and serves well, makes a sacrifice. It is what you put in life, that makes it worth while; the more you can do for others, the happier your lot will be, for "it is indeed more blessed to give than to receive." No one who has ever practiced the precept, will deny it.

OUR HOME OFFICE.

In the Johnston building, at 1170 Broadway, New York, is located our administration office rooms. Here any member of the society finds a ready welcome at all times. The work is growing to such an extent that more help must be constantly added to the office force. Secretary Young is indeed a very busy man, and the plan to have him devote his entire time to this work has proven one of the best yet undertaken by the society. The publishing of our monthly Journal, the work for the promotion bureau; the handling of the dealers' helps, in addition to the vast amount of correspondence, involves much time and hard work, and yet our worthy secretary has found some time in the last two years to devote to field work, in the interest of the society and the publicity fund. We hope under a new plan the publicity committee has now adopted, and of which you will hear in its report, our secretary can devote his entire time to office work.

Our membership is now about 3,000, and at the rate we have increased this year, which was over 400 annual and 200 life members, it does seem we are now on the road of progress. No doubt the trade at large is waking up to the importance of the S. A. F. as an organization, and is beginning to realize what it really means to be a member of this great society. It also proves, that the work of the various committees, such as the legislative, publicity and others, has not been in vain.

Reward always comes to those who work and wait; so with this incentive, let us begin anew to prove the worthiness of our great cause. Remember, we have just made a good start in publicity, and, before we adjourn from this meeting, we shall have the great pleasure of listening to such men as Major O'Keefe and Payne Jennings, besides the committee chairmen. Henry Penn, and George Asmus. Do not miss this, fellow members. We have set aside the whole afternoon of Wednesday for the discussion of this great work.

This society is not only growing in membership, but also in ideals and thought. We need the considerate advice of all the members present, and we want you to freely enter into all discussions. Just and fair criticism stands for progress. Let us have it here and now. Do not go away a knocker, but be a booster. There is an old saying, that a horse never pulls while he is kicking; so do not be like a kicking horse; get hitched up and pull. This S. A. F. wagon is loaded full of good ideas, and we have a bunch of fine and willing workers to pull it along the road of success and accomplishment. Let us keep it moving.

BOUQUETS FOR THE LIVING.

Since we are such great advocates of bouquets for the living, and I am one, for I predict the time will be when "please omit flowers" will be a sentence unheard of, because fewer flowers will be sent to the dead and more to the living, I want to express my sincere gratitude, and I am sure I voice the fullest appreciation of the other officers and every layman of this society, by giving our heartiest thanks to the men who so faithfully and untiringly have served on committees, under the leadership of such knights of service as W. F. Gude, Henry Penn, George Asmus, Benjamin Hammond and a host of others too numerous to mention. Gentlemen, may your reward be such as we this day feel has come to the great pioneers who nursed this organization from its infancy, and trained it to full grown childhood, from whence it comes to us, with the admonition for righteousness and fair dealing.

We indeed owe a debt of gratitude to the trade press for the many kind favors and the liberal amount of space devoted to our cause, without any compensation, so let us not forget them with our paid advertisements and our patronage in general.

To the trade exhibitors at our annual convention, we are in a large measure indebted for meeting the financial expense of the convention. Let us in turn remember them with our liberal patronage, when in need of anything in their line, and with kindly consideration receive their traveling representatives when they call upon us at our various establishments.

We are here in the metropolis of the great state of Michigan. We love to think of Detroit, because of the wonderful progress she has made in the last decade. But we even more love to think of our great big hearted florist brethren here, headed by such leading lights in our profession as Phil Breitmeyer, Albert Pochelon, E. A. Fetters, J. F. Sullivan and many others. Why should we not come and thankfully partake of their hospitality? Yes! we are indeed glad to meet in Detroit, and thank you for having invited us.

F. C. W. Brown, Cleveland, O.

Vice-President-Elect Society of American Florists

To the paid servants of this society, under the leadership of our amiable secretary, John Young, and his very efficient staff worker, J. H. Pepper, I also want to express my hearty thanks. We want you to realize that the salary paid you is only for your labor; our good will and appreciation goes for the service you render, and last, but not least, we must pay homage to our worthy treasurer, J. J. Hess, that gallant watch dog of the treasury who is ever prompt in attending to his duties.

TO THE LADIES.

I fear all the good, if any, in this message, would be amiss, were I to omit just a closing word to the ladies. It seems just a very few years, "and here we shall omit dates, in respect to the ladies," since they organized their branch of this great society and what a boon it was. From that day to this, with every added year, the morale of our annual meetings has improved. The presence of women in our American public life, is being manifested more and more, and is, I think, the one great factor that helps to put this nation to the front, especially in the things that make life worth while. We greet you, ladies, and may you always, in your companionship with men, keep them in the straight and narrow paths.

In closing, let me quote from an unknown poet, "The Garden of Life":

Beautiful thoughts make beautiful lives,
For every word and deed
Lies in the thought that prompted it
As the flower lies in the seed.

Back of each action lay the thought
We nourished until it grew
Into a work, or into a deed,
That marked our life work through.

Gracious words and kindly ways,
Deeds that are high and true;
Slanderous words and hasty words
And deeds we bitterly rue.

The garden of life, it beareth well;
It will repay our care,
But the blossom must always and ever be
Like the seed we're planting there.

Secretary Young's Report.

It was my pleasure, at the St. Louis convention, to report that in spite of adverse conditions existing for a year or more, our society has made satisfactory progress. Since that time conditions have, as we all know, changed very materially, and effort to advance our organization in the trade has, in consequence, met with gratifying success.

THE MEMBERSHIP ROLL.

As the strength of an organization lies mainly in its membership, the society is to be congratulated upon an influx of new members since our last convention that might be surprising to some. We have taken in altogether, 659 annual members from August 10 of last year to August 10 of this year, and our list of life members has been increased by 209. The total membership, August 1, was 3,025, of which 710 are life members, and 24 pioneer. It is a matter for regret that quite a number of our members have not paid their annual dues for 1919. Not only does this neglect occasion anxiety, but these members prejudice the second class mailing privilege for our "Journal" as we are not allowed to avail ourselves of the low postage rate except to members in good standing. The society is fortunate in having so large a list of life members, inasmuch as the fees in this class are turned into the permanent fund, for investment, and yield an annual income indefinitely. The life memberships for the year total an addition of $5,000 or more to this fund. In addition, we have 24 pioneer members, whom the society has exempted from the payment of dues. Of course, in our membership aggregate, there are some members who are in arrears for dues, but in the figures presented, I have included none from whom collections of arrears might be deemed impossible or improbable. Most of the new members were obtained through a systematic and thorough campaign instituted by the secretary's office, and carried on by correspondence, and the dissemination of pertinent literature, among which the society's "Journal," played an important part. A goodly number of applications for membership were turned in by our state vice-presidents, and by special representatives appointed to solicit subscriptions to the publicity campaign fund.

THE JOURNAL.

The Journal of the Society of American Florists, which your secretary was, at the last convention, directed to publish, has now run through six numbers, and has proved to be of great service in the society's work. Not only is it a medium of communication between the executive board and our members, but much matter that would ordinarily entail special printing and distribution is published in its pages, and attracts far greater attention in consequence. It is also of great service in the missionary work necessary in the interests of the society, and serves to keep members in touch with the various details of the society's work. It has been a great aid to our publicity campaign, to which large space is devoted each month. The secretary's office has received many inquiries in regard to the possibility of placing advertisements in the publication. It will be remembered that when the Journal was decided upon, it was expressly stipulated that no advertising was to be accepted. In our application for registration at the post office for second-class mailing privileges, it was necessary to declare that its columns were public, to the extent that anyone could place an advertisement therein. Without a doubt, as a medium for trade announcements, the Journal is a publication of high character, but any change of policy in this direction necessarily requires action from the society in convention. The cost of printing and mailing the Journal per month, for an ordinary issue, confined mainly to our membership is not more than $200 on the average, the actual cost of printing 3,500 copies of a 32 page issue being only $182. The printing of the last volume of proceedings covering the 1917 convention in New York, alone cost $1,199.75, with a smaller distribution than usual. The 1916 proceedings, a smaller volume, and with printing expense lower, cost, with mailing and postage, $1,579.98. Had we issued a similar volume for 1918, the printing cost, owing to conditions in the paper and printing trade which then existed, and practically still exist, necessarily would have been, approximately, nearly one-third more. All this expense has been avoided by publishing the proceedings of the last convention in the Journal. In addition, we have saved the cost of printing the minutes of the executive board's meeting, which last year cost $89.75, and additional for mailing, and our official programme for the convention, which last year cost, with mailing, $158.00. The cost of the Journal for a year, including mailing, editorial services, and other expenses, is approximately $3,000. On one or two occasions, we have been obliged

F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.
Development of American Products Committee to run a few pages extra, mainly to expedite publication of the proceedings of the last convention, which were published in serial form and completed in four numbers. We have also, at times, increased the number of copies printed, using the excess in our missionary work, and with gratifying success. In addition, the Journal has saved us much in the way of printing costs, as all our announcements, etc., are printed in copies current, and thus distributed among our members practically without cost for mailing and postage. An instance of savings effected is found in the copies distributed at this convention containing the minutes of the executive board meeting and the official programme, at a cost of about $24.00, against the cost of separate printing and distribution of these which would have to be estimated at not lower than $300. As I have pointed out, there is no advertising income from the columns of the Journal, but it might be mentioned that inasmuch as the post office department does not concede to us second class postal rates on copies of the Journal to life members, we have been obliged to set a minimum subscription rate of 50 cents per year, and bill such members accordingly, our form of billing having to be passed upon by the postal authorities. I am pleased to state that many of our life members have cheerfully made remittance of this small amount, some covering a period of years, and those who have not yet done so have neglected through carelessness. With 710 life members our income from this source should be $355, which may be deducted from the annual cost of the publication. Taken all in all, our Journal is a good investment, and really indispensable.

THE WORK OF A YEAR.

Chief among the work of your administration office since our last convention, has, of course, been that attaching to the publicity campaign, and which will be detailed in the report to be made at a later session, covering our promotion bureau. Of the other work, much has been accomplished by our committees, all of whom will make separate reports. I might, however, mention the work covering our opposition to Quarantine Order No. 37. Several meetings were held at our headquarters, attended by members of our tariff and legislative committee, and representatives of outside interests, and your secretary with a large delegation, attended a special hearing before the federal horticultural board in Washington, at which the case of the florists was fully argued. Subsequently at other meetings a lengthy brief was prepared for presentation to the secretary of agriculture, and by appointment your secretary, again, with the delegation, appeared before Secretary Houston to present it. That very little in the way of modifications in the quarantine order resulted is a matter for report, but it is doubtful whether the case of the florists could have been more intelligently cited. It may be that Dr. Marlatt, chairman of the federal horticultural board, and whom we expect to address us at Thursday's session of the convention will deal with this subject from the board's standpoint.

OUR ADMINISTRATION OFFICES.

The wisdom of our executive board in establishing office quarters in New York was amply exemplified during the year just closed. The growth of the society has necessitated a great deal of detail work requiring ample room for its performance. Already, the space available is taxed to the utmost. Very many of our members have found their society's office very convenient, as furnishing a place for the transaction of business and receiving mail, as well as a communicating point, while visiting New York. It has been used to a great advantage for meeting purposes, affiliated and auxiliary societies also sharing in the convenience.

PLANT REGISTRATIONS.

Since the last convention the following new plants have been registered:

THE TRADE EXHIBITION.

Better evidence that business in the florist trade is on a pre-war footing, could hardly be presented than is contained in our trade exhibition of this year. This exhibition has been given an unusual amount of publicity in the trade papers, in the society's Journal, and in a series of about 16,000 form letters which have been mailed over the entire mailing list compiled for the use of our publicity campaign, all with a view of swelling the attendance at this convention, and, inviting interest in the society's work.

WAR EMERGENCY CONGRESS.

The United States Chamber of Commerce last November invited our society to have a committee present at a congress of war service committees representing American industries, to be held at Atlantic City, N. J., December 3-6, such committee to represent the florist industry and take part in the proceedings of the congress. President Totty appointed himself, with W. F. Gude, chairman of our tariff and legislative committee, your secretary, and George Asmus of Chicago, as such committee, and all were in attendance throughout the congress. The committee was admitted to the congress under credentials which relegated it voting power in Group No. 32, and in accordance with the programme, they took part in the discussion of the different phases of the problem of reconstruction as they affected the florists' trade. The committee for its section, presented the following resolution, which was carried:

"The committee representing the Society of American Florists and the allied trades, an organization working under a charter passed by congress and signed by the late President McKinley, do hereby submit the following:

"Resolved, that we recommend the continuance of the war industries board for a limited period. We further recommend the creation of a central committee composed of representatives of the major business interests of the country to take up the work of the war industries during the period of readjustment; also that official recognition shall be given the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, as this body would be of valuable assistance in economic liquidation of leftover war properties; further, the florist industries ask that all restrictions that have been imposed on them as war measures be removed, such as fuel restriction, and the importation and exportation of its products. These recommendations are of vital importance to the florist industry."

George Asmus, Chicago.
Chairman National Flower Show Committee.

The florist trade generally was represented fully and solely by the committee, the Society of American Florists being recognized as a trade organization exerting influence in its principal field. The attendance at the congress was very large, including nearly 5,000 delegates, representing practically every industry. The prevailing idea of the congress was that industry should be allowed in great part to settle the various problems of reconstruction outlined in the congress without restrictions by the national congress which might be derogatory to inevitable reconstruction.

President's Reception.

The social event of the first day was the reception of President Ammann, assisted by other officers of the society and their ladies. This was held in the ballroom of the Hotel Statler, and was largely attended. The decorations were lavish and beautiful, the main setting being a large, red sun of prosperity, rising from which was the inscription. "Say it with Flowers," large rays reaching the ceiling, and between which were the letters, S. A. F. O. H. There were large palms in all corners, and on tall pedestals were baskets of large fronds of the California fern, Woodwardia, made to imitate tree ferns. Large vases of gladioli added color. It was a very handsome effect. The reception party stood in front of the main decoration, those in the receiving line being President and Mrs. Ammann, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Breitmeyer, Benjamin Hammond, J. G. Esler, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Herr, J. F. Sullivan, George Asmus, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Traendly, R. C. Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Pollworth, W. F. Gude, Miss Gude and E. Gurney Hill. There was dancing after the reception and light refreshments were served.

Committee on President's Address.

Your committee on recommendations on president's address wishes before making any specific suggestions in regard to the same, to highly commend its general tone and character, and comperhensive and far-reaching nature. Taken, all in all, your committee must pronounce it one of the best and most thoughtful addresses ever delivered by any president to the Society of American Florists, and this is said with prejudice to none of the past-presidents, many, if not all of whom, have been men of marked ability and foresight.

We especially approve of the recommendations of the president with reference to closer trade affiliation. He strongly urges the need of growers', commission men's and wholesalers' national organizations, and believes that these three branches of our trade should be thoroughly organized, and through their properly accredited representatives, should have a place in the executive body of this society. He further says: "These branches of the trade should not be organized one against the other, as is sometimes the narrow view, but rather for the purpose of co-operation with one another for the mutual benefit of all. This can be done, and will be done, in the very near future, I predict."

We heartily concur in this recommendation. This is an age of co-operation, and of the elimination of unnecessary competition in all lines of human endeavor. We believe that this recommendation of the president's will be found to be entirely practical, and that it will bring forth fruit in the greatest abundance. In order to carry it into effect, and reduce it to positive working form we recommend that a committee of three be appointed by the president of this society to look after and to suggest to leading men in the various affiliated trades, the advisability of taking hold of this suggestion and organizing in each line so that their national organizations would be prepared to co-operate with the S. A. F. along any needed line of effort, and to eventually, so soon as the matter can be mutally satisfactorily arranged, have a representation on the affiliated membership of the S. A. F. executive board.

The president's recommendation in regard to Sunday closing is one that appeals to every moral and religious sentiment, and if adopted, will increase the efficiency of our help, who will, as well as ourselves, be given a needed rest on the Sabbath Day. We would like to see this recommendation unanimously concurred in by this convention, and we urge that such immediate action be taken.

We concur in the recommendation of the president in regard to staging another national flower show as soon as possible.

We also heartily approve the recommendation of the president with regard to the closer co-operation of all members in the use of dealers' helps and tying up locally with the great publicity campaign. Your committee thinks it not outside of its province to also commend the work of the secretary's office in furtherance of this matter ,and we know that any suggestions from any quarter tending to enlarge or improve the efforts now being made, will always be welcome at our headquarters.

In closing, we recommend that every member of this society read every word of President Ammann's address at their first opportunity, and digest it thoroughly. As we stated in the beginning of this report, it is a most far-reaching and well-considered official document, and is worthy of your careful study.

FRED H. LEMON, Chairman.
PAUL R. KLINGSPORN.
S. S. SKIDELSKY.

Tariff and Legislative Committee.

The past year was one of the most eventful of our organization, I might say, in the history of the florists of North America. Numerous regulations, bearing on the florist business in many ways, were promulgated and sent out by the federal horticultural board, making it almost impossible to import anything in the florist or nursery line from foreign countries.

The coal situation, during the first three months of our fiscal year, was very serious, largely owing to the conflicting errors occurring between the national fuel administration and the local fuel administrators. All of this trouble, with the exception of a few isolated cases, was happily ended November 11, upon the signing of the armistice.

SHIPPING.

The embargo on shipping, caused by the concentration of vessels on the Atlantic ocean, to transport soldiers and ammunition, made it very difficult to receive imports from anywhere. This condition was also very much relieved when the armistice was signed.

PLANT REGULATION NO. 37.

The most important work before your committee during the past 12 months, (possibly the most important in the history of our society), has been in connection with the plant import prohibition, known as Regulation No. 37, of the federal horticultural board.

Your committee made every effort to secure the rescinding of this measure, and the substitution in its place of regulations which would do justice to, and not unnecessarily interfere with, the horticultural interests of the country, and which would, by correct methods of inspection, properly and within reason, safeguard the country against an invasion of foreign pests and diseases. However, we were unsuccessful in bringing about these results, and the new regulations have been in force since June 1.

Members of your committee attended the public meeting which was called by the federal horticultural board, at Washington, D. C., October 18, and presented concrete facts and figures, showing not only the interests involved, but also the impossibility of commercially producing certain lines of plants and bulbs in this country, in which not only the entire horticultural trade is commercially interested, but which are demanded by the public, and which by the greatest stretch of imagination on the part of the scientific members of the federal horticultural board, could not be construed as being any greater menace in carrying pests, than hundreds of other non-horticultural subjects, which are not only permitted entry, but which come in, even without inspection.

Wm. F. Gude, Washington, D. C.
Washington Representative.

However, it was evident to everyone present at this meeting, from the introductory remarks made by the chairman of the federal horticultural board, that our efforts would be in vain; that the board was plainly committed to practically complete prohibition, which was substantiated by Regulation No. 37 being promulgated, and officially signed by the secretary of agriculture, November 18.

Your committee's next move was to secure an interview with the secretary of agriculture, and with this in mind, prepared a brief, setting forth its objections to the ruling. This brief, before being offered to the secretary, was first presented to the executive committee of your society, in session at Detroit, January 31, 1919, where it received unanimous approval and signatures of all the members of your executive committee. Armed with this document, we were prepared to meet the secretary, and planned accordingly, and February 5, received a hurried call to come to Washington the following morning, presumably to meet the secretary of agriculture, but were instead presented to the federal horticultural board, with whom we had a session lasting five hours. We were told that the board held out certain inducements. They were not such that your committee could accept. After this second meeting with the federal horticultural board your committee finally, through the efforts of Senator Calder, of New York, and Congressman Bacharach, of New Jersey, were presented by Mr. Bacharach to Secretary Houston, March 1. At this meeting, they also had the support of the legislative committee of the American Association of Nurserymen. Each committee presented its brief to the secretary, who courteously listened to our arguments, and promised to give the presentations made in these briefs due consideration. On March 28, Secretary Houston rendered his decision, in which he supported the regulation of the federal horticultural board, and on the strength of which, Quarantine No. 37, with few minor questionable amendments, is now in force.

Your committee feels that its work in connection with this regulation has not been completed, but before taking further action, requests further instructions from this society as a body. If it is your desire that your committee shall make further efforts to secure satisfactory adjustment of said ruling, a vote to that effect of the society assembled in convention, will greatly strengthen its position, if it should find it necessary to appear before a congressional committee or any other legal body.

Your committee, furthermore, requests that if it is your desire that it continue its efforts to secure changes in this regulation, that it be empowered to employ legal advice, if it finds it necessary or expedient to do so in the course of its proceedings.

Your committee takes this opportunity to express its appreciation to many in the trade who rendered valuable assistance.

National Flower Show Committee Report.

My report to the convention will consist in a brief summary of the situation pertaining to the future shows as it appears to the experienced members of our committee.

First, it is perhaps well to explain to the convention what the committee finds are the necessary principal adjuncts to make a successful exhibition, that is, in keeping with what would be expected of a show that stands for all that the society represents, which means the last word in floriculture. There is no question of doubt in the committee's mind, that as far as the prosperity of the country is concerned, and this has to be taken in consideration because of the necessary gate receipts that help so materially to finance the project, that conditions like the present are ideal. There are several cities that are desirous of securing this exhibition, some of which have, or will in the course of time, erect buildings suitable for our purpose. Your committee feels that almost any city in the Union, with a population of 600,000 or more people, is capable of supporting our exhibition.

The complexing question before our committee is the one pertaining to exhibits. I have been in touch with the largest growing establishments in the United States, also with a number of people, who have been exhibitors at the past national shows, and who we could depend on for support, and I find that there is a very great shortage of large size plants that go to make up our exhibitions. Then, too, the extreme scarcity the last 12 months of plants of all descriptions, and the prices obtained for this stock, has led the committee to believe that it would be very difficult to stage our exhibition until these conditions change. There are some large growers who told me that the passing of the quarantine act, prohibiting imports of a great number of plants that were grown for the past exhibitions, would also be a factor we must consider in the future. Your committee feels that it would be but a matter of a year or two, when we will be better able to know what effect the quarantine act will have on our exhibition.

Then, too, another of our strong supports in the past exhibitions, has been the co-operation received from the private gardeners, who, having in charge the large private conservatories in connection with large estates, were producers of not only many of our novelties, but well grown plants of all kinds. The war caused the closing of a greater portion of these private conservatories as a fuel-saving measure. These conservatories are being restocked, but in most instances it will be some time before we can depend upon their exhibits.

It is true that the features of the past few big exhibitions have not been so much the wonderful specimen plants, as the splendid garden effects, not only roses, but of bulbous plants. These, with the rock gardens, and the excellent exhibitions made by the orchid growers, have been some of the important features. We still can do all of these nicely, and perhaps we will very soon learn to adjust ourselves to the absence of plants, such as the azaleas, etc., except those here now, or which can be grown in this country.

Until our committee can safely rely on the growing interests of this country in supporting the exhibition as it has in the past, we cannot in any degree of confidence start the wheels that are necessary for the launching of one of these magnificent undertakings, which mean so much for the benefit of the trade. It would be an ideal time when we are rocking the country from coast to coast with our wonderful publcity campaign, "Say it with Flowers," to have this exhibition blossom out in connection with it every two years in one of our leading cities of this country. It is too bad to waste this wonderful opportunity that could be gained by this additional publicity.

In making the above statement, I am quoting to you the opinions as expressed to me by the various members of the national flower show committee at my solicitation. Therefore, it is very important that this convention go into discussion, so that the committee may be somewhat enlightened from the suggestions that will come from the foremost men who are present.

Your chairman believes that the spring of 1921 would be the ideal time for the staging of the next national flower show.

Development of American Products.

The year just passed has been a trying one to the florist, who has had to face a period of readjustment unparalleled in the history of the business. By reason of the war, and the necessary fuel restriction to a 50 per cent basis, production was cut in half, and it has not been an opportune time to consider the development of American products. Rather has it been a question of how to meet existing conditions, with only half the amount of fuel that we had previously, and with a very difficult labor situation confronting us. Then came the revolutionary action of the federal horticultural board, placing an embargo upon the importation of the great bulk of horticultural products. This drastic action on the part of the board has made the question of the development of American products probably the most important one for the florist today.

Henry Penn, Boston, Mass.
Chairman Publicity Committee.

Deprived, as we are, of many important plants which we have heretofore imported in large quantities, and which we have depended upon Europe to supply—such plants as orchids, azaleas, rhododendrons, spireas, bay trees, palms, boxwood, etc.—we are now compelled to rely upon our own resources, and, for the present at least, it will tax our ingenuity to produce substitutes for these plants. To a certain extent, we have already been obliged to anticipate the curtailment of the plants, which we have been accustomed to use, and which we have depended upon Europe to supply, by the substitution of other plants. By reason of the restriction on importations occasioned by the difficulty of importing plants under war conditions, we have begun to use increasing quantities of plants like cyclamens, begonias, primulas, cinerarias, calceolarias, and schizanthus, and many other plants will be found that will take the place of those upon which we have depended, and which are now unobtainable.

There is no doubt but that in this great country of ours, with its diversified climate and soil, we shall be able in time to grow many of the plants that we have imported from Europe, just as successfully as they have been grown in that country, with the exception of orchids, our main supply of which is obtained from the tropics, where they are collected from their natural habitat.

Callas, freesias, amaryllis, hydrangeas, gladioli, tuberoses, and other important plants are already being grown in this country in sufficient quantities to meet the demand, and, no doubt, in time, many other plants will be grown just as successfully. Both in California and in the east, great quantities of roses are already grown. Palms, araucarias, azaleas, and rhododendrons also will be produced here in time, but it will require a good many years to produce them in sufficient quantities to meet the demand, and it will require years and years to produce bay trees in the sizes that we are accustomed to handle. We understand that Ficus elastica is being grown extensively in the vicinity of New Orleans, both in the usual trade sizes and in large standards, which in time, will to some extent replace bay trees.

California, with its wonderful and diversified climate, offers great natural advantages for the culture of many more plants than it has already been producing. North Carolina has long been known for the successful production of tuberoses, and, no doubt, other sections of our country will be found to offer advantages for the culture of some particular plant or plants.

Everything now depends upon the resourcefulness of the American grower to meet the present demand for the development of American products. The field is large and the need is great, and "in the multitude of counsellors there is safety." Surely, this is one of the most important and vital subjects that we have confronting us at the present time, and an interchange of views at this time will be welcomed by your committee.

Report of Promotion Bureau.

The report of the promotion bureau presented at the meeting of the executive board last January, related almost entirely to finances.

Since our last convention, the work of the promotion bureau has been carried on with great vigor. At a joint meeting of the publicity committee and publicity finance committee held in Cleveland, January 30, it was decided to aim for a fund of $100,000, instead of $50,000, the mark set for 1918. The committees were unanimously of the opinion that the larger sum would be forthcoming, and the work of collecting same was left to your bureau. At a meeting of the executive board next day in Detroit, at which the committees were present, reports were made by the chairmen of the committees, as set out in the issue of our Journal for March, copies of which have been distributed at this convention. So enthusiastic were the members of the committees and the board at this meeting, that among them the sum of $2,065 was subscribed to the campaign fund, much of it in addition to amounts previously subscribed by some.

Your bureau immediately set to work in an endeavor to raise the larger fund. Large numbers of letters in various forms were sent out, followed by others calculated to sustain any interest excited by the first, and appealing to the better instincts of the prospective subscribers. About 80 articles, containing argument and appeals for subscriptions, have since the opening of the campaign, been sent to the trade papers, each publishing one every week, together with a list of new subscriptions reported. This assistance on the part of the trade press is gratefully appreciated by your bureau, and by your committees. It might also be here mentioned that the same papers published recently our entire subscription list, at actual cost of type composition and paper stock required, thus giving us the benefit of the combined circulation of the four papers at small cost.

To show how the fund was being used, a broadside was sent out over a mailing list of approximately 13,000 florists, instancing one transaction, necessitating the outlay of about $5,000, which resulted in the display of our slogan before 20,000,000 of people; or it could, perhaps, be safely asserted 100,000,000 people, as it is generally conceded that there are five readers to every copy of a national magazine—at a proportionate cost of $50 per million, a wonderfully small cost. The broadside also described and illustrated the various newspaper electrotypes, glass signs, decalcomania signs, lantern slides, and stickers supplied by the bureau and intended to publicly connect any user with the campaign publicity, with the result that much of this material passed into the hands of florists, where they served the purpose not only of individual publicity, but provided that much more publicity for our slogan.

Your bureau has kept careful record of florists using newspaper columns for their announcements, and has repeatedly urged that they incorporate the slogan, "Say it with Flowers," in all their advertisements, preferably using the same script form adopted for the campaign. The reason for this is that the slogan in uniform character is more easily impressed upon the public mind, and is in every way more forcible through familiarity.

The demand for lantern slides has been very marked so far through the year. The first series of slides has been supplemented, in response to requests from many users, by a second series, and many florists have both. The amount of publicity secured through a constant use of these slides in moving picture houses is too immense to be even guessed. Everybody goes to the "movies" nowadays, and the slides, when projected, compel attention.

While there has been a fair demand for our line of slogan "stickers," the trade has not used them as generally as might be expected. Their use on boxes, stationery, and in many other ways, affords cheap publicity to our slogan. It has been argued that the people who see it in this form are already customers, but are they not ordinarily as much in need of a reminder as anyone else? The more they see of the slogan, the better customers they are likely to become.

The distribution of glass signs bearing our slogan for window or wall use, has been large. Since the beginning of the campaign, the bureau has supplied 1,100 of these signs, and they are on display in as many establishments throughout the country. In addition, the bureau has disposed of about 650 sets of decalcomania transfer signs, which are affixed to windows and door panels and display the slogan to advantage. Florists who have not furnished themselves with one or the other of these signs, are missing an opportunity to spread the influence of the slogan, and at the same time connect their establishments with the magazine advertising. The value of such a connection is evidenced by the hundreds of congratulatory letters received from members of the craft who have used our service aids to link up with the campaign. That the wisdom of this course is based upon common sense, need hardly be pointed out. There is not one person present at this convention, but who has been impressed with some slogan in trade use applying to a particular commodity, the name of which is readily suggested when the need for it arises. It is just so with the slogan, "Say it with Flowers." Its suggestive powers are exercised whenever it is seen. How many thousands of men, can we suppose, through seeing that slogan in the florists' shops, in the magazines, in local newspapers, on wagons, or elsewhere, are reminded of a birthday anniversary of wife, daughter, or dear friend. Men are many times more forgetful in this respect than women, and appreciate a reminder, which is not at all mandatory. While the number of signs supplied has been fairly large, it should have been many times larger. The cost of a sign is small, and its acquisition easy. When displayed properly, it is at work continually, suggesting the use of your products to every beholder. The display of even a thousand more signs would mean, at the very lowest estimate, a thousand more sales daily, three hundred thousand more sales yearly. Is it any wonder that our slogan has been valued by advertising experts as worth to our craft a million dollars or more? The use of signs need not be confined to shops. We know of many growers who have procured signs for display at points adjacent to public roads passing their establishments. One grower in the vicinity of New York, on a road traveled by hundreds of automobiles daily, has a sign on each gate post at his entries. While upon this subject, it may be stated that the bureau has noticed, with regret, that some in the trade have, in use, distorted the slogan by injecting a proprietary name, such, for instance, as "Say it with Green's Flowers." This is unnecessary, and inadvisable, and it has a tendency to cheapen, even destroy the sentiment carried in the message of the original slogan.

Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y.
Chairman School Gardens Committee.

The slogan, we find, works in a multitude of ways, and there is absolutely no occasion when the suggestion it carries is not in place. As an instance: Last month, in a middle western town, a committee representing an industrial community, which had raised a war chest on the plan followed by many such committees in different parts of the country, finding in the chest a goodly sized money balance for which there was no real further use, the war having ended, determined to return it, pro rata, to the contributors. The contributors, in grateful appreciation of the committee's action, felt that they should present the committee with visible evidence of their appreciation, but experienced difficulty in deciding what form it should take. In the dilemma, a contributor suggested "Say it with Flowers." The suggestion was unanimously approved, and a beautiful floral "square," six feet by four and one-half feet, was the presentation piece, conveying the sentiment that the committee was "on the square." Who shall say that the slogan did not work in this case?

While a goodly number of florists have taken advantage of the bureau's electrotype service, there are very many others who might do so, with advantage to themselves and the campaign. The electrotypes supplied feature individual advertisements appearing in the magazines so closely that when used in local newspapers the similarity is quite apparent to a reader, who is very likely, if he has been impressed by the magazine announcement, to patronize the florist whose name appears in connection with the newspaper reproduction. This is an important service, and can be profitably used by anyone seeking to draw to himself direct results from the magazine publicity. The electrotypes are good for any length of time, irrespective of the magazine advertising.

The bureau has had the good fortune to secure generous publication of the stories sent out this year for the use of newspapers throughout the country. A judicious distribution of this press matter has resulted in awakened interest on the part of editors and publishers in matters floricultural and horticultural, and in many cases regular departments for the purpose have been inaugurated, the material supplied by various writers attached to their own staffs. It is gratifying to notice that in the main, the material so published, is beyond censure as to quality, and that absurd statements by incompetent writers, so common in matters of this kind a short time ago, are rarely met with nowadays. Our bureau is continually called upon for information on various subjects floricultural, for use along these lines, which information, and any other assistance asked is cheerfully given.

And now a word about subscriptions. In spite of the intensive work done by the promotion bureau, subscriptions have come in but slowly, and the monthly aggregates have not been anything near what might reasonably be expected, nor at all near to a ratio which might furnish a prospect for the completion of the fund of $100,000. Your bureau has sent official letters explanatory of the campaign to every known florist, not once, but several times, always enclosing literature which left nothing unexplained. While these efforts were rewarded with success, it was not such as it ought to have been, considering the great number to whom the appeal for subscriptions was directed, and the fact that the campaign experience of last year, left no doubt as to results. That many hundreds of florists have not responded, simply through carelessness, is quite believed, and the report of the chairman of the publicity finance committee, which will deal with an organized personal effort to obtain contributions, will bear out this belief.

School Gardens Committee Report.

The Society of American Florists has a potent influence of uplift as a representative organization throughout the nation. For several years past, the committee on school gardens has annually put the society in touch with the public schools in places wherever is located a member of this society. There is nothing to-day of more practical importance to break the "high cost of living" than the home garden, and if children are interested in this work, it will not be long before the fathers take an interest in making home premises both profitable and attractive. In all occupations or business, no other equals the ability of the florist to set the example of beautiful home premises.

Your committee reached schools in 782 cities and villages, where members of the S. A. F. are located, urging this work, and telling the school authorities that the local florist would be glad to lend a helping hand.

This work among children is growing. It has taken hold gradually, until according to the bureau of industrial research, it is reported that 4,000,000 school children within the United States are directly interested in school gardening at the present time. The outlook throughout America is that more attention will be paid steadily to this work of usefulness and beauty than ever before, and now that the great war is past, the good work of the florist will be more highly appreciated, no part more so than that which helps to stimulate the children to make home gardens and keep pretty premises, and a florist in any town is a practical benefit.

Smith Memorial Committee Report.

Since our last meeting, your committee has been rather inactive, owing to the peculiar conditions existing in Washington on account of the war.

The amount on hand at our last report was $1,894.10, with interest ($40.59) which makes the amount $1,934.69, of which amount we have deemed it best to invest $1,000 in Liberty bonds and $842 in war savings stamps, leaving a balance of $92.69 in bank.

There have been no collections or donations during the past year.

The Trade Exhibition.

This always interesting feature of the convention was fully up to expectations, excelling in number, size and variety of exhibits, with the possibility of one or two previous exhibitions, all that have gone before. The florist supply men fairly outdid themselves, there being enough stock in several of the displays to check off practically every item in their catalogues. Those of Poehlmann Bros. Co. and the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, H. Bayersdorfer & Co., and the Jos. G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia, Pa., The McCallum Co. and the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., the Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind., the M. Rice Co., and the S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, and the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia., contained a greater and more up-to-date assortment of florist stocks than ever before shown in the convention trade section. Ribbons were also prominent, the leading firms in this line being Schloss Bros., Wertheimer Bros., Cohen & Hiller of New York, and the S. S. Pennock Co., each showing a large number of the latest colors and weaves. There were a number of commercial plant displays, also forcing bulbs, and the greenhouse and boiler manufacturers were out in force. Secretary Albert Pochelon, of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, made good use of the stage to further the interests of this live organization. The following were among the numerous displays:

John Dunbar, Rochester, N. Y.
Botonist.

J. M. Aarons, Cleveland, O., had a space in which he showed Evertite Glazing Cment.

The American Bulb Co., Chicago, showed a line of French and Japanese bulbs, cut gladioli, and florist supplies. Those in charge were A. L. Koehler, D. W. Dumser, Vincent Neil and G. M. Reyburn.

The American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., Chicago, had a large exhibit consisting of a sample section of greenhouse, 36-foot type; also a sectional boiler, ventilating equipment and greenhouse fittings. P. L. McKee and H. N. Nichols were in charge.

Bermuda lily bulbs, raised at the Arlington Farm, Washingtton, D. C., from seed sown in 1916 were splendid stock, being 10 inches in circumference. These were exhibited by Professor T. L. Mulford.

The Atlantic Machine & Manufacturing Co., Cleveland, O., whose display was in charge of Ralph Ditty, staged a Merry Garden Auto Cultivator.

S. Bryson Ayres, Kansas City, Mo., exhibited new celosias, the flowers arranged in vases and baskets.

The W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, exhibited seeds and bulbs and distributed literature and catalogues. H. A. Bertoli, Ralph B. Howe and I. Rosnosky met the visitors.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., featured a new line of Japanese pottery, flower holders, a full line of ribbons and chiffons and general florist supplies. George W. Cohen, Morris M. Cohen and H. Franks greeted visitors at this booth.

The Bergmann-Koropp Co., Chicago, showed winter bouquets and decorations of natural grasses and dried flowers artistically arranged. Victor Bergmann was the representative.

Wm. J. Boas & Co., Philadelphia, had an exhibit of florists' folding boxes. Chester M. Wells was their representative.

Buchbinder Bros., Chicago, showed photographs of refrigerators in flower stores and literature.

The Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia., displayed handsome willow baskets in many unique shapes and colors. F. G. Nelson, A. F. Longren, Robert Newcomb and T. J. Nolan were the representatives.

The Chicago Printed String Co., Chicago, had its product well displayed with M. H. Trau booking business.

The Climax Manufacturing Co., Castorland, N. Y., showed a large and varied line of florist and folding boxes.

The Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, Pa., had a large assortment of finished foliage plants, crotons, dracaenas, arecas, palms, nephrolepis in variety, also cyclamens. This was a very handsome display in charge of Robert Craig, Leonard Seiger and Cornelius Van.

The A. T. De La Mare Co., New York, had an exhibit of horticultural books and literature. A. T. De La Mare was in charge.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., had J. J. Karins on hand, the space being taken up with an unusually good offering of palms, ferns, crotons and other ornamental foliage plants.

The Duro Paper Products Co., Chicago and New York, showed corrugated and folding paper boxes and a full line of white and pink glazed florist boxes. The representatives here were S. Freund, M. I. Hollander and J. A. Barwig.

The John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind., invited attention to a sample greenhouse filled with ventilating apparatus, also a salt sprayer. T. S. Porter was on hand to answer inquiries.

The Excell Laboratories, Chicago, made a display of insecticides, fungicides and New Plant Life. F. A. Zenke was the representative.

The Farnsworth Co., Conshohocken, Pa., demonstrated the Farnsworth condensation pumps for returning condensation back to boiler.

The Florist Telegraph Delivery Association, amid a background of palms, placed a frame work with open doors, through which there was seen a map of the United States, the principal cities being designated by miniature eléctric lights. A number of telegraph lines on poles were connected to these lights and also to sending keys on the platform of the stage on which the entire display was arranged. The inscription over the doors read, "Through the Doors of the F. T. D. and Electricity, we can Deliver Your Flower Wants (Through Our Members) to Your Distant Friends in a Few Hours." At the bottom of each door were the words, "We Are Members." A statute of the figure, "The Good Fairy," was in the center of the foreground, on either side of which was a cardboard pyramid, on which was inscribed, "F. T. D.—Florists' Telegraph Delivery, an association of florists in the United States, Canada and foreign countries, who deliver your flower wants to their city, through us, in a few hours. We are members." It was a very unique display and attracted great attention. It was all originated by Secretary Pochelon and set up under his direction.

The Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., Chicago, had a well-fitted-up space with settees, rugs, palms, etc., with P. J. Foley, Jr., and F. H. Morris in charge.

C. S. Ford, of Philadelphia, was on hand in person, his space filled with artificial flowers, felt lodge emblems and lettering.

R. E. Gebhardt, Chicago, showed an attractive stock of artificial wax flowers with H. W. Miller as representative.

F. L. Gunton showed a double-acting ventilator, working from either top or bottom: a clever idea and practical. He was on hand to explain its merits.

Carl Hagenburger, West Mentor, O., had a fine display of French hydrangeas in flower and stock plants as well as various sizes of dwarf solanums in fruit. He was on hand in person.

The Hammond Paint & Slug Shot Works display was 24 days on the way but had not arrived up to Wednesday night. Framed diplomas won at the Yorktown exposition in 1878 and the gold medal awarded at the Panama-Pacific exposition were on view, however.

George B. Hart, Rochester, N. Y., presented a practical line of florist baskets and Christmas novelties, demonstrating Hart's Handy Handles. Horace J. Head greeted the visitors.

Earl L. Hempstead, Bloomington, Ill., was on hand in person with a display of Insectos, an insecticide, and Deming sprayers.

The Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa., whose display was supuerintended by James A. Heacock and Harry Gould, showed kentias in various sizes.

A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, had an excellent display of florist forcing bulbs, fertilizers and cut gladioli. The representatives were A. Henderson, Jos. Marks and Simon Dernison.

Hitchings & Co., New York, occupied a large enclosed space with comfortable chairs and settees. Large photographs of greenhouses and literature were features here. James M. Brown was in charge.

Allan N. Humason, Chicago, staged baskets, paper boxes and the Proto Feed & Guano Co.'s products. He was assisted by H. E. Humiston.

The Ionia Pottery Co., Ionia, Mich., staged a line of florist pots, wire hanging baskets and wire designs. H. E. Kidder and H. F. Hacker were in charge.

The Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, New York, had hydrangeas, deutzias, pot grown genistas, budded and own-root roses and shrubs. Clarence Perkins greeted visitors.

The Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., featured palms, bay trees, heather, dracaenas and ferns. Julius Roehrs and Thomas Knight were in charge.

The Wm. F. Kasting Co., Buffalo, N. Y., featured labor saving appliances with a soil mixer in operation. The familiar face of Wallace Eiss was seen here.

The Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, exhibited a hot water boiler with which 15,000 pounds will heat 60,000 feet of glass for carnations. A working model of the Kroeschell high-pressure steam boiler, 100 to 350-H.-P., with the threaded two-piping system was also shown. Roy S. Kroeschell and Fred Lautenschlager were the representatives.

C. A. Kuehn, St. Louis, Mo., as distributors, found many visitors who were interested in green and white wrapping paper, with the water mark. "Say it With Flowers."

Lager & Hurrell, Rutherfod, N. J., had crates of freshly imported cattleyas. J. E. Lager was on hand here.

Prof. H. C. Irish, St. Louis, Mo.
Entomologist.

C. U. Liggit, Philadelphia, Pa., exhibited the Macaw fern, a splendid lot of stock in all sizes. Mr. Liggit was in charge.

Lion & Co., New York, showed samples of ribbons and chiffons in good assortment, in charge of Allan Strauss and Morris Levine.

The Lord & Burnham Co., New York and Chicago, invited inspection of its improved sectional iron frame commercial house with side ventilators in 12 foot, six inch sections. Also, a new type sectional greenhouse boiler. This space, which was attractively arranged, being enclosed with columns linked together with velvet ropes and topped with pot plants, was in charge of M. C. Wright, sales manager of the Chicago office.

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., exhibited tradescantias in variety, dracaenas, Polypodium Mandaiana and other greenhouse plants. He was on hand, assisted by Walter Manda.

The McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., was represented with a full line of florist supplies, baskets, wreaths, ribbons, chiffons, etc. George McCallum, H. L. Blind, E. J. McCallum, Earl C. Tipton, Ross E. Adgate and Ralph E. Gay were in charge.

Thomas J. Mead, Newark, N. J., showed ready set concrete greenhouse benches and a sample section showing construction.

The Michigan Motors Co. exhibited a Beeman tractor adapted to farm or nursery field work.

The John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, had a decorated space with chairs, rugs, etc., and displayed sample pipe and greenhouse fittings.

The Moorhead Manufacturing Co., Detroit, Mich., demonstrated its "back to the boiler system" with sample steam trap in position.

The Joseph G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia Pa., made a most excellent display of Christmas wreaths, artificial flowers and designs as well as cut flower baskets.

J. Kier Nielson, Oak Park, Ill., showed a cement and tile greenhouse, bench model. He was on hand in person.

The Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind., made an extensive display of florist supplies of all kinds. This space was enclosed with silvered posts on which were placed large, handsome baskets filled with oak leaves and artificial artificial stock were also a feature.

The Pearce Return Steam Trap Co., Detroit, showed a sample pump and distributed literature. H. V. Pearce was in charge.

The S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa., attracted attention at all times with up-to-the-minute ribbons, chiffons, florist baskets, etc., all in great variety. E. J. Fancourt and Robert Greenlaw represented the firm.

The Peters & Reed Pottery Co., Zanesville, O., showed a line of florist pottery, jardinieres, cut flower vases, new ideas in shapes and colors. S. T. Pletcher was their representative.

F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. J., ably represented by James T. Trevillian, as usual made an excellent showing, among the items of interest being nephrolepis, including the new variety, Victory, while a sport of Teddy, Jr., was a distinct feature.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., displayed an unusually fine and varied assortment of supplies, including vase baskets, prepared foliage, and Christmas wreaths. Those in charge here were L. H. Bergman, W. A. Clark, H. A. Frishkorn, J. Fisher, W. Wampler and W. T. Usinger.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, made a most attractive display, included in which were fancy, colored imitation Jap vases, a full line of florist baskets, bird cages on stands, and a complete line of foliage plants. A large Japanese umbrella covered the center of the space and added to a very comprehensive display. Those in charge were Gus Martial, Miss Grothe, Clif Pruner, J. C. Nielsen and T. E. Waters.

The C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis., had an attractive space in charge of Phil Weil, with hydrangeas, aucubas, small palms and ferns, Japanese plant boxes and artificial flowers attractively staged.

The Quality Brands Co., Cleveland, O., and the Vitaplastic Glazing Co. had a display of glazing putty and greenhouse white paint. Those in charge were E. Lehman and F. E. Dempsey.

The A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, occupied a large room in the rear of the hall, an electric fountain being the central feature. They showed ribbons in a great assortment of weaves and colors, chiffons, folded glazed and corrugated boxes, silvered oak, red ruscus in a mantel grate, water-proof crepe paper, chenille, artificial plants and a large assortment of baskets. Visitors here were welcomed by Jack Quallich, Frank Johnson, Ed. Galavan, A. Anderson, Eric Johnson, F. W. Tredup, R. Leidy, C. Vodicka and Guy French.

The M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa., had an excellent assortment of fancy florist baskets in great variety of form and color, artificial flowers, wreaths, baskets filled with growing plants, etc. H. C. Heilman, J. P. McCarthy and Arthur Zirkman were the representatives.

Max Schling, New York, showed a de Luxe album of artistic floral arrangements, a real work of art; also photographs of floral work in many forms. P. M. Parthemore was in charge.

Schloss Bros., New York, had a fine line of florists' ribbons and corsage ties in great variety in charge of Sam Seligman.

The Skinner System of Irrigation, Troy, O., had overhead watering apparatus with line of pipe in operation outside of the hall. P. H. Bridge and R. R. White in charge.

The Spokane Concrete Flower Pot Machine Co., Spokane, Wash., had a machine in operation making 5-inch and 6-inch pots. H. E. Reimers and C. G. Benley were the firm's representatives.

B. Hammond Tracy, Inc., Wenham, Mass., displayed Gladiolus primulinus hybrids arranged in jardinierres and vase baskets. Mr. Tracy was in charge.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago and New York, made an attractive display of cut gladioli, pot plants and forcing bulbs, a very complete exhibit. George Mohn and W. J. Guille were kept busy greeting visitors.

Wertheimer Bros., New York, arranged a very excellent display of ribbons, with Harry Brandt, Julius Dilhoff and Herbert Hecht in charge.

The George Wittbold Co., Chicago, had an assortment of plants, palms, ferns, cyclamens, ficus, etc. H. A. Cecil was the representative.

Convention Notes.

In this, as in all convention exhibitions, souvenirs were in great demand. The most valuable was that of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, who offered a four-piece set of wicker furniture valued at $200. When visitors to the firm's elegantly decorated room signed the register they were given a number and tag on which was printed, "I Have Mine," to be worn in the buttonhole. On Thursday, the holder of the lucky number, drawn from a hat, received the furniture. A great many people owned this, in their minds, for a day or two. It was won by Mrs. Sydney Beard, Detroit, the winning number being 2379.

The entire layout and arrangement of the trade exhibition was perfect in every respect, the hall was well lighted and very convenient as all the displays were on the main floor. Nearly all of the exhibitors said that the first day's business was a record for a florists' convention.

The florists of the city of Detroit and vicinity were tireless in their attentions, looking to the comfort of the visitors. Vice-President E. A. Fetters was a host in himself in arranging hotel accommodations for the delegates.

Mr. Steinhauser, a guest at the Statler, met with an unfortunate accident, slipping while taking his bath, and striking his head on the tub, rendering him unconscious. He is now declared to be recovering and out of danger.

The arranged vases and bowls of prepared wild flowers and grasses in the Bergmann-Koropp exhibit was a revelation to many retailers, who had no idea that such "weeds" could be made to look so attractive.

The display of evergreens of the Greening Nursery Co., Monroe, Mich., which was used to decorate the main entrance to the hall, made a fine showing and attracted general attention.

The McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, had arranged for a large supply of paper cutters and letter openers for the visitors, but these were delayed by the express company and did not arrive.

President Ammann made a splendid presiding officer, keeping the business of the meetings going all the time, there never being a dull moment during the sessions.

Paul Klingsporn's successful work for the S. A. F. showed his great interest and ability. To secure 55 life and 18 annual members in one year, is a record.

The Ove Gnatt Co.'s white felt hats with tri-color band, on which. "Say It With Flowers," was seen in gilt letters, were very popular and made a great hit.

The twin children of Irwin Bertermann were made happy by presents of shower bouquets of candy made in Albert Pochelon's best style.

Real Pittsburgh stogies for the men and fans for the ladies were the souvenirs of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co.

The Skinner System of Irrigation had a working section of its apparatus at full head on the lawn in front of the building.

Phil Foley made everybody welcome at his hospitable space and presented each visitor with a big smile.

Wertheimer Bros. presented all customers with a copy of their order, which they always took gladly.

Max Schling presented a beautiful booklet of artistic designs, a valuable souvenir for the retailer.

The Burlington Willow Ware Shops' small sharpening stone was a useful souvenir.

Irwin Bertermann's motto is, 'Live young, die young, and be always on the job."

Benjamin Hammond's souvenir was a measuring rule, a very useful present.

The Peters & Reed Pottery Co. gave miniature flower pots to all visitors.

The Vitaplastic Co. gave out felt pennants which bore its name.

The Ionia Pottery Co. presented miniature flower pots.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery.

The meeting of this association was the first formal gathering in connection with the convention proceedings of the Society of American Florists. To the great delight of the members, President Wm. F. Gude was present to take charge of the meeting, which was held in the balcony of Arcadia auditorium, being called to order at 10:15 a. m., August 19. Philip Breitmeyer assisted President Gude, and after asking for attention, welcomed the members on behalf of the Detroit Florists' Club in his best manner. He called attention to the fact that one of the local newspapers had stated that the object of the florist profession was to do good for humanity, and that he believed no craft in this age was ahead of that of the florist, and that he was proud to be a member of it. He then introduced President Gude, who expressed much pleasure in being present at this great gathering of retailers, without which the business would drop away to nothing. He said he was proud to have brought seven members of the Gude family, all of whom were life members of the Society of American Florists. He then called on all present to adopt the Rotary plan of making themselves known, which each of those in attendance, to the number of about 300, did by rising and announcing their name and residence. Mr. Gude then requested all present who were not members to join at once. President J. F. Ammann, of the Society of American Florists, followed with a short address in which he said the national organization was proud of this wonderful child and congratulated the members on the large attendance at a preliminary meeting. He said he believed the retailers were putting the business on the map and raising it to a plane where it belonged, adding that he was glad to see the work they were also doing in raising funds for the publicity campaign.

W. W. Gammage, of London, Ont., spoke of the visit of the officials of the S. A. F. and the F. T. D. to the recent convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association and the great inspiration it had been to the florists of the Dominion. He said the S. A. F. publicity movement was now going strong there and would soon be productive of great results. George Dicks, also of London, told of the work of the F. T. D. in Canada, and of the rapid increase among retailers there, with a chain of F. T. D. stores from Halifax to Vancouver.

Charles H. Grakelow, of Philadelphia, Pa., asked for the appointment of an educational committee to prepare instructive matter toward increasing the interest of all members in obtaining and handling orders, explaining details that would enable the average retailer to overcome obstacles, such as low-priced orders, which are really no hindrance when understood. There was considerable discussion entered into by Max Schling, of New York, F. C. W. Brown, of Cleveland, Irwin Bertermann of Indianapolis and others. Secretary Albert Pochelon said he thought that co-operation between florists in their own cities, where deliveries were sometimes 10 to 20 miles, would settle the high cost of deliveries of small orders. He suggested having the florist in the downtown district turn the order over by phone to his brother in the suburbs, who would be glad to send it a block or two away. Irwin Bertermann thought well of the plan to encourage the smaller dealer to do his best, and so gradually raise the standard. Max Schling did not favor this idea. He thought all orders should be taken, and did not feel ashamed to send $1 orders. In his opinion, florists should "make good" under all conditions. Mr. Grakelow insisted that his suggestion, as he saw it, would help everybody. He spoke of a rapid-fire delivery made with a Philadelphia order for $35 taken at 3:30 p. m. for delivery at a funeral in Toronto, Ont., at 5:30 the same day, which was on hand with half an hour to spare. Philip Breitmeyer stated that the publicity gained by small orders was a great factor in the business, the average of the orders of his firm during the last year being $7.50, as against $5.46 five years ago, while 15 years ago, it was only $1.50 each. He added that he believed that the F. T. D. business had now reached a volume of $3,000,000, all gathered by the co-operative idea. H. G. Walker, of Louisville, Ky., told of having received letters from members who would not accept orders under $3 and $4, and that he was obliged to disappoint a soldier, who wanted to send flowers to his mother on her birthday because he could not pay that much. G. E. M. Stumpp, of New York, said that the average orders of the Tiffany Company, of that city, came to a trifle over $5 each. The vote on the resolution was called for and it passed unanimously, President Gude appointing Messrs. Grakelow, Brown and Bertermann to prepare and present their ideas at the convention of the F. T. D. in Buffalo.

Secretary Pochelon spoke of three important things. He said that the membership was now 1,150, and it was important that each should stand 100 per cent in the Society of American Florists and the publicity movement which meant so much to the business. The guarantee fund made an expense of $2 each. It amounted now to over $12,000, in which each member had an interest. The annual dues will now bring in $11,943. Seven years ago they were only $205. It required a long time, he added, to get "F. T. D." on the members' stationery, but the "Say it with Flowers" slogan was used by everybody, the result of education. Each member could best help himself, and the organization, by the business he created in his own store. The secretary was requested to get out another questionnaire, the answers to be read at the Buffalo meeting. He referred to the clearing house, which had been entirely eliminated, as "the bad bill bugaboo."

Philip Breitmeyer stated that flowers would be provided at the door, and every florist was requested to wear a fresh flower during his entire stay in Detroit. He also announced the various entertainments provided by the Detroit Florists' Club, after which the meeting adjourned.

Ladies' Society of American Florists.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Society of American Florists was held on the morning of August 20. Mrs. J. A. Peterson, president, opened the session with a short address of welcome. On account of the number of entertainment features arranged by the Detroit Florists' Club it was announced that the society would not entertain at this meeting. The secretary reported a gain of 32 new members since August 1. The treasurer reported a balance on hand, August 1, of $275.64. Four of the original members, Mrs. Anders Rasmussen, Mrs. Geo. Kuhl, Mrs. E. A. Scribner, and Mrs. E. M. Gill, have gone on to join the great majority. It was voted that flowers be sent to decorate the grave of Mrs. Scribner, who was the first treasurer of the society. After a lengthy discussion as to the proposed amendment, it was voted that the society bond both secretary and treasurer. The matter of deciding as to the elimination of the secretary's salary, which was laid over from the meeting at St. Louis, was brought up for final action, and the amendment was lost.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy, Wenham, Mass., president; Mrs. Charles Graham, Cleveland, O., first vice president; Mrs. J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., second vice-president; Mrs. Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa., secretary; Miss Perle Fulmer, Des Moines, Ia., treasurer.

American Gladiolus Society.

The exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society which was held in Arcadia auditorium, Detroit, Mich., August 19-21, brought quantities of flowers which Secretary A. C. Beal said had never been excelled in quality, some of the spikes being the finest he had ever seen. The exhibition was staged in the galleries on either side of the hall, and while a trifle cramped, compared with the aisle space, made a splendid showing. A number of made-up baskets and vases were very attractively arranged. The ruffled varieties in the Kunderd collection attracted much attention, while the many fine seedlings exhibited by Joseph Coleman were exceptionally beautiful. Gruelleman's primulinus hybrids were also features.

The election of officers for terms of two years resulted as follows: H. E. Meader, Dover, N. H., president; C. R. Hinkle, St. Joseph, Mich., vice-president; A. C. Beal, Ithaca, N. Y., secretary; Madison Cooper, Calcium, N. Y., treasurer. Executive committee: Joseph Coleman, Ravenna, O.; Lee R. Bonnewitz, Van Wert, O.; I. S. Hendrickson, Flowerfield, N. Y. Cleveland, on invitation of the florists club of that city, was selected as the next meeting place at the time of the convention of the Society of American Florists. One hundred dollars was voted to the S. A. F. publicity fund.

The annual meeting of the society was held at the Hotel Statler on the morning of August 20, a report of which will be given in these columns next week.

SECRETARY BEAL'S REPORT.

It is with pleasure that I present my second annual report. The American Gladiolus Society is in excellent condition and growing in membership. Glancing through the old reports, it appears that the largest number of names ever carried on the books was 210, and so far as I can discover, 172 paid-up members was the largest number ever reported at any annual meeting. It seems that when this society ceased to publish the bulletins, the membership dwindled. In 1917, the late secretary reported 171 names on the books. However, when I took over the work I found but 83 paid-up members. The active membership campaign inaugurated by the society in the spring of 1918 brought the membership up to a higher level than ever before. Last year, the secretary reported a total membership of 265, of which 166 were new. These were all paid up, and there were some old members who it was thought could be counted upon to renew their memberships as soon as conditions became normal. During the year, the membership rose to 280. Since some of these came in under very liberal inducements, and represent beginners in gladioli growing, it is not improbable that a few of them may not renew for 1919-1920. The number ought not to be very large, however, for in The Flower Grower the society is giving the members a definite return comparable to that made by the American Rose Society to its members.

The question of undertaking the publicity campaign is one which should be discussed at this meeting. It would seem that we ought to have at least 500 members. Should we have life memberships, placing the dues from this in a permanent fund?

Some rules or regulations should be made governing the award of our medals to other societies for exhibitions. No requirements are now made whether any of these societies have a definite number of American Gladiolus Society members in their ranks. It would seem to your secretary, desirable to make this requirement, although we should encourage local societies to have gladiolus exhibitions. These questions might be considered by the executive and exhibition committees and action taken if the society approves.

This year the society returns to its former custom of holding the annual meeting and exhibition with the Society of American Florists. Many of our members believe that such an arrangement is helpful to both organizations, and our experience this year would seem to strengthen this opinion. Next year the S. A. F. meets in Cleveland, O., and the question of our next meeting place should be discussed with reference to the advisability of holding our meeting again in the west.

The society lost one member by death during the past year. Evelyn M. Gill, Larchmont, N. Y., president of the Gill Engraving Company, was one of our new members, who did not live to have the opportunity or the pleasure of meeting with the society.

Among the devoted adherents of the gladiolus was W. W. Wilmore, of Denver, Colo., who gave his life to his country while in the service in France. His writings form a valuable contribution to the literature of this flower, and undoubtedly stimulated the interest of a great many persons in the merits of the gladiolus. His enthusiasm and unbounded energy in behalf of floriculture in the west, will be missed very much. Let us hope that among those whose candles were lighted at his flaming torch of floricultural leadership, there may come forth leaders worthy to carry forward the work of telling interestingly the story of the culture of flowers.

Florists' Hail Association.

A large amount of routine business was transacted at the annual meeting of the Florists' Hail Association, held in Arcadia auditorium, Detroit, Mich., August 20. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., president; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., vice-president; James W. Heacock, Wyncote, Pa., treasurer; John G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J., secretary. Directors elected, to serve three years, are E. G. Hill, J. F. Ammann and Anders Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind. The thirty-second assessment will be levied March 1, 1920.

The report of the secretary for the year ending August 1, 1919, showed the total amount paid for losses during the year to be $26,954.01. The total receipts, including last year's balance, were $70,860.79. The disbursements were $39,648.27, leaving a cash balance on hand of $31,212.20. The total number of members at the date of closing the report was 1,604, the total of glass insured being equivalent to 45,131,271 square feet. Unadjusted losses, August 1, did not exceed $1,300.

Florists Not Profiteers.

Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, says: "I have been asked what I have to say about that part of the president's message which proposes an interstate licensing system for business. I am in favor of the enforcement and, if necessary, the strengthening of laws to prevent combinations and forestall artificial control of prices, but I am opposed to putting the business of the country in leading strings, to be manipulated by a lot of jacks in Washington."

Possibly, the senator has heard of the federal horticultural board.

But at present, no one can charge the florists with being profiteers. The cut flower situation reminds me of an old story that originated in Senator Reed's state.

A divorce case was being tried in court. The defendant was a wealthy stockman who had no society aspirations; but his wife had. The judge after listening for a time said: "Lady, I see nothing wrong with your husband, tell me your differences." She replied: "The difference is that I soar up and he soars down."

It is a question worthy of debate by the Society of American Florists and its publicity committees in convention assembled, that when prices of everything else are soaring up, the price of flowers is "soaring" down.

And as all of the florists are taxpayers, here is something from the Journal of Commerce, a business man's paper, that should interest them:

"A few years ago the taxpayer hardly existed, except when he drank whiskey or smoked a cigar. But his business is now carefully scrutinized and he has to tell all about his salary, and the strong arm of the government is laid upon him every time he travels, and the treasury marks him for its own if he pays $10 for a pair of shoes, and a high authority in the clothing trade gives $16 as the price, though there are shoes of lower price.

"And the taxpayer, now that he is thoroughly identified and his resources are approximately known, has not only got to support the government but he has got to support the railroad brotherhoods, and if he does that he need not imagine that anyone else in need of money will overlook him."

No loyal American will balk at supporting his government. The point we wish to make is, that the taxpayers are being called on more and more to support a crowd of tax eaters and so called "efficiency experts" whose greatest efficiency consists in meddling in and hampering other people's business. ness.

EUREKA, CALIF.—According to the Humboldt Times of August 3, marketing of 1,500,000 bulbs by the Cottage Gardens Nurseries is under way, the sales reaching $40,000, which the receiver says, indicates that the company's financial danger point is passed.

Canadian Horticultural Association.

The twenty-second annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, held at Toronto, Ont., August 12-14, an account of the first day's proceedings of which was given in our issue of August 16, page 192, was well attended by delegates from all parts of the Dominion with quite a representation from the United States and its closing marks one of the most interesting meetings of the organization.

The business session of the second day was devoted to the retailers who were honored with the presence of President J. F. Ammann and Secretary John Young of the Society of American Florists; Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, Mich., and Albert Pochelon, secretary of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, also of that city. A motion was offered, and being duly carried, the Canadian Retail Florists' Association was formed with the following officers: George Geraghty, president; V. Mac Alpine, vice-president; S. A. McFadden, secretary; Mrs. P. Waters, treasurer. The executive committee is composed of George Dicks, F. McKenna, A. R. King, F. Smith, J. J. Higgins and Mrs. Hill. Messrs. Ammann, Young, Breitmeyer and Pochelon gave strong talks on the subjects of publicity and cooperation, which resulted in 35 subscriptions to the publicity fund and eight applications for membership in the F. T. D. The afternoon and evening were pleasantly spent in picnicking at Long Branch, where a supper was served, followed by dancing.

The feature of the third session was the address of Herman Simmers, who had for his topic, "Bulbs and Their Future," which brought out many interesting points in the bulb-growing industry, but the consensus of opinion was that this stock could not be produced as advantageously in America as in foreign countries, owing to the difference in labor costs and working hours. At the fourth session, H. J. Moore of Niagara Falls, Ont., presented a carefully compiled report on plant registration.

Officers for the following year were elected as follows: E. B. Hamilton, London, Ont., president; W. E. Grove, Hamilton, Ont., first vice-president; E. J. Hay, Brockville, Ont., second vice-president; H. J. Eddy, Montreal, Que., secretary-treasurer: Executives for three years, W. C. Hall, Montreal, and Sam Jordan, Peterboro, Ont.; for two years, H. J. Moore, Niagara Falls; for one year, V. McAlpine, Sudbury, Ont.

On Friday, the visitors were the guests of the local committee and enjoyed a trip to Queen Victoria park and Niagara Falls.

The trade exhibits proved an interesting attraction and many orders were reported placed for the various supplies.

A pleasing feature in connection with the annual banquet, which was held at the Prince George hotel, was the presentation to Retiring President Douglas of a handsome easy chair.

Mid-West Horticultural Exposition.

The Mid-West Horticultural Exposition, the chief object of which will be to stimulate the production throughout the state of Iowa of flowers, fruits and vegetables, will be held at Des Moines, November 11-14, under the auspices of the Iowa State Horticultural Society. In addition to the displays, there will be demonstrations and lectures on how to increase production, preparing crops for shipment, etc. While competition in the exposition is open to the world, the premium list, however, includes only such products as can be grown or prepared in Iowa to compete with those offered in any other market.

Twenty-six thousand square feet of floor space in the Des Moines Coliseum will be devoted to the exposition. The schedule offering over $5,000 in prizes, now on the press, includes 117 classes for apples of almost every variety grown in the west, with divisions for barrels, boxes, baskets, trays and plates. As a further stimulus to apple production, a sweepstakes prize is offered in eight classes, doubling the premium and giving as well a ribbon for the distinction. A special feature will be one section devoted to edible nuts on plates with prizes for black and white walnuts, pecans, hickory nuts, American chestnuts and chestnut hybrids, hazelnuts, and a collection of each of the above. The vegetable display will be most extensive, the classes announced being as follows: Potatoes, open classes, including Early Ohio, Irish Cobbler, Rural New Yorker, Bliss Triumph, Green Mountain, Burbank and best display, seven classes; potatoes, open to Iowa growers only, Early Ohio, Irish Cobbler, Rural New Yorker, Bliss Triumph, Green Mountain and Burbank, six classes; sweet potatoes, red, yellow and white, five classes; onions, red, white and yellow, six classes; root crops, eight classes; greenhouse vegetables, six specimens in not less than six-inch pots, one plant to a pot; parsley, head lettuce, loose leaf lettuce, peppers, tomatoes, endive and spinach, one class; bunch vegetables, eight classes; green vegetables, ten classes; mushrooms, one class; dried garden herbs, one class, and three substantial prizes for the best displays of vegetables.

In Section D, devoted to flowers and plants, Arthur H. Smith, Boone, Ia, superintendent, there are 10 classes for chrysanthemum blooms, all colors, five for pompons, eight for roses, four for carnations. For chrysanthemums in pots, there are five classes in addition to prizes for collections to cover not less than 100 square feet, as well as collections of pompons, anemones and singles of not less than 15 plants. Decorative stock in pots arranged for effect to cover not less than 100 square feet will be a feature and palms and ferns will be represented.

Considerable space will be given over to entries of home canned and dried fruits and vegetables by individuals, boys' and girls' clubs and canning clubs.

Copies of the premium list and other desired information may be had upon application to Hon. Wesley Greene, secretary of the Iowa State Horticultural Society, Des Moines.

Providence, R. I.

DEMAND SUFFERS DECLINE.

There has been a decided falling off in business during the past week. The supply of asters and gladioli have exceeded requirements, causing a depression in prices and waste. The latter has been excellent stock and no fault could be found with the flowers. The best asters are still to come and there will be many late ones this season and from present indications they will be welcomed more than ever before. The rose supply continues limited and this condition helps to maintain prices. Cut flowers have a heavy call and summer business in this line offers some encouragement, even with a street car strike, now of two weeks' duration. The Premier roses grown locally are exceptionally fine, having both excellent color and splendid keeping quality. H. A. T.

St. Louis.

MARKET SHOWS LITTLE LIFE.

The market continues slow with a fair supply of stock. A few good gladioli are seen, but the majority are of poor quality. Roses are coming in better, among them quite a lot of new stock. Some very nice Prima Donna are seen, but the bulk of the supply is Russell. Tuberoses have been commanding a fair price this year in the absence of the usual big variety of stock. Asters have been a complete failure this year. Not a good aster deserving the name has been seen on this market. In greens, the market is well supplied. Smilax is the only exception, but within a few weeks the new cut should be in the market.

NOTES.

The August meeting of the florists' club was held at Wm. C. Smith's farm in St. Louis county. About 60 attended and had a fine time. The main business transacted was the election of the officers for the ensuing term, which resulted in A. H. Hummert being reelected as president; A. S. Cerny, vice-president; J. J. Benecke, secretary; Wm. C. Smith, treasurer, and Oscar Ruf, trustee for the three-year term. After the meeting, Mr. Smith invited the visitors to a lunch and refreshments. Everybody had a good time, and complimented the host on the fine condition of his stock in his greenhouses. He has some particularly fine cyclamens and begonias for the fall and winter trade.

The "Presidential Special" for Detroit got away as per schedule with about 30 florists and their families from this city. A number of out-of-town delegates met the local party and accompanied the St. Louisians.

L. Jules Bourdet's son, Andre, who has been in France for the last year and a half in the American army, returned home last week. Everybody in the trade was very glad to see him and joined his mother and dad in saying "Welcome Home." J. J. W.

Rochester, N. Y.

BUSINESS MAINTAINS GOOD BALANCE.

Business during the past few weeks may be said to have been fairly brisk, and there has been considerable funeral work. A few carnations have been received, but they are only fair in quality and very small in size. Asters, in lavender and white, are arriving and are good. Gladioli are used extensively, as they lend themselves well to work of almost any kind. Small quantities of rubrum and auratum lilies are seen. Roses, during the past week, have been scarce, most of the supply coming from the eastern markets.

FLORISTS' CLUB OUTING.

For the first time in a number of years, the florists held their annual picnic at Grand View Beach, more than 250 being in attendance, visitors being present from Lyons, Leroy, Pittsford, Brockport, Albion and other cities in the western part of the state. Under the direction of a caterer engaged for the occasion, an excellent luncheon was served. The feature of the sports programme was the ball game between the greenhouse force of J. M. Kelly and the store force of F. J. Keller, resulting in a score of 13 to 12 in favor of the former. There were also a number of other interesting and amusing athletic events.

NOTES.

Horace J. Head, now with George B. Hart, in the capacity of traveling salesman, has returned from a successful Canadian trip.

E. C. Armbrust and wife have returned from a pleasant sojourn to Mt. Monadnock and various points in New England.

CHESTER.

OBITUARY.

Charles Spengler.

Charles Spengler, 62 years old, for over 40 years well and favorably known in the trade of New York, died at his home there, August 11, after a lingering illness of a complication of diseases. His retail business was located at 342 Second avenue, and he had been in that neighborhood for a number of years. As a boy, he entered the business with the old firm of Hanft Brothers. Funeral services were held, August 14, interment being in the Lutheran cemetery, Middle Village. A widow and two sons survive him.

A. F. F.

William Amos.

William Amos, one of the founders of the Cut Flower Exchange in New York, died at his late residence, Amityville, L. I., August 17. He was about 70 years old. He was born in England, but had been in this country many years, having a range at Woodside, N. Y., from which he retired several years ago. A widow and five grandchildren survive.

Personal.

Fred H. Howard, of Los Angeles, Calif., left Chicago, August 17, for Portland, Ore., where he will join President J. D. Eisele, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., enroute to California.

THE Detroit convention of the Society of American Florists has gone down into history as one of the best business meetings on record, with a very large and representative attendance.

Plant Quarantine No. 37.

IMPORTS FROM CONTIGUOUS COUNTRIES.

Importations of nursery stock, other plants and seeds from contiguous countries, the entry of which will not be attended by serious risk to the agriculture, horticulture, and floriculture of the United States, are permitted by an amendment to the plant quarantine act, according to an announcement by the United States department of agriculture. The amendment known as "No. 3 to regulations supplemental to Quarantine No. 37," is effective August 16, 1919. Under it, the secretary of agriculture may issue permits, when applications are made, authorizing the entry into the United States of such nursery stock, other plants and seeds when they are free from disease and insect pests, and it is known that their entry will not be attended by serious risk.

Importations under this new regulation are limited to specific classes of nursery stock, plants and seeds which can be considered as peculiar to such contiguous countries, and are not mere reproductions of imported stock from foreign countries, and which are not available in sufficient quantities in the United States. It does not apply to plants and seeds governed by special quarantines and other restrictive orders other than Quarantine No. 37, which is now in force. In addition to the certificate as to freedom of pests required in connection with all plant importations the invoice covering the material offered for entry under this regulation must be accompanied by a certificate of a duly authorized official of the country of origin, stating that the material has been produced or grown in the country from which it is proposed to be exported.

Belgian Window-Glass Industry.

Belgian window-glass factories did not, in general, suffer very much from the German occupation, and would have been able to operate very quickly after the armistice if there had not arisen very great difficulties in transportation, which brought about a shortage of food and raw materials, according to Consul Charles R. Nasmith, at Brussels.

The last of February and in March two factories started up, one of which uses the old process of glass blowing by hand, and the other produces by means of machines. The other Belgian factories are very anxious to begin operating, but they have had to deal with very great difficulties in regard to labor. The workmen demand not only very high wages but also certain new conditions under which they are to work—and it has been very difficult to come to an agreement. If an arrangement is made this will mean the lighting up of nine to 10 more ovens, with a monthly production of 12,000,000 to 13,000,000 square feet.

According to the last statistics, the average monthly production of the Belgian window-glass factories for the first seven months of 1914 was 20,000,000 to 25,000,000 square feet. The two factories which are operating at present are producing together about 2,000,000 square feet per month. The present cost price of the glass, compared with the price in 1914, is about four times as much. It is likely, however, that it will be lower later on.

Formaldehyde.

For approximately the past 10 years, THE AMERICAN FLORIST has been recommending the use of formaldehyde, in solution, for the better keeping of cut flowers, particularly in the hot summer months when stock such as asters and other flowers with soft stems and foliage will foul the water overnight. Health authorities will not permit the use of this drug in milk, which while it keeps it sweet, prevents fermentation and interferes with digestion when it is taken into the stomach.

Its action is the same, when used to prevent deterioration of foliage of cut flowers, three drops in a quart of water, keeping the stems and foliage sweet and clean for 48 hours. The best method of applying is by means of an ordinary dash bottle, which holds about a pint of water. To this add a teaspoon full of formaldehyde. A dash or two of this solution in a quart or two quart jar is sufficient. It has no apparent effect on the life or lasting qualities of the flower, but prevents fermentation or decay of the stems or foliage. In the hot weather, the fungus in the cutting bed or box of seedlings will sometimes carry them off in a night. The same formaldehyde solution, or about a tablespoonful to a gallon can of water, will check this at once, as it effectually prevents all forms of fungus growth. Formaldehyde is a stock article, and can be procured in small quantities at any drug store.

Department of Agriculture Year Book.

We are in receipt of the Yearbook of the United States department of agriculture for 1918, included in which, among other interesting features, are the following articles: "The Old and the New in Corn Culture," by H. Howard Biggar, bureau of plant industry; "The Place of Rye in American Agriculture," by Clyde E. Leighty, in charge of eastern wheat and rye investigations; "Some Effects of the War upon the Seed Industry of the United States," by W. A. Wheeler and G. C. Edler, bureau of markets; "Farm Woodlands and War," by Henry S. Graves, forest service; "How Weevils Get into Beans," by E. A. Back, bureau of entomology; "Sisal and Henequen as Binder-twine Fibers," by H. T. Edwards, bureau of plant industry; "The Commercial Apple Industry in the United States," by J. C. Folger, bureau of crop estimates; "Arable Land in the United States," by O. E. Baker and H. M. Strong, office of farm management; also lists of the agricultural colleges and experiment stations in the United States and names and addresses of state officers in charge of co-operative agricultural extension work.

German Trade.

Germany wants new trade outlets and has already been working toward that end, according to the Boston News Bureau. The advantage will be taken if possible, through American firms willing to lend their names and assistance to furthering the trade of German houses. Belief that their German identity would militate against them here has caused their representatives to endeavor to cover their movements. The loss of direct connections in this country through the activity of the alien property custodian and the seizure of property in Great Britain will take years to remove if it can ever be effected.

A RARE OPPORTUNITY

For One or Two Live Men.

A modern retail flower and seed store in the heart of Lowell, Massachusetts a thriving city of 120,000, requiring a force of five people and delivery truck and chauffeur, is offered for sale, together with 35 000 feet of glass, which supplies the store, well stocked and ready to continue where I leave off. The greenhouses are ideally located on the bank of the Merrimack river, between two cities, Lowell and Lawrence, two miles from Lowell and six miles from Lawrence, providing a good market between the two cities. This is an established business of thirty years' standing, and has grown steadily in size and reputation. The reason for my selling is ill health. Any man who understands will see that what I am offering is a life experience and an opportunity seldom offered.

STOCK IS IN GOOD SUPPLY.

Stock is in good supply, but business the past week has not been as brisk as it might be, although it compares favorably with that of the same period of last year. Gladioli are in heavy supply and in good demand at all times. Practically all the stores are featuring them in quantity, and while most of the stock shows the effect of the hot weather, there is a certain amount of very good flowers, especially in some varieties. Asters are seen at some of the stores in quantity, and are moving well, especially in the better grades, which command high prices. American Beauty roses continue to clean up well each day at high summer figures. Mrs. Charles Russell and Columbia are selling nicely, and there is a good call for Sunburst and Killarney Brilliant. Roses in general are in fair supply, and are reaching the market in fairly good condition. Gypsophila is practically sold out and more could be used to good advantage in this market. Some of the supply houses bought heavily in this line this year, which cleaned up both the local supply, and that which reached here from Colorado this season. Lilies are in short supply. Daisies, calendulas, snapdragons, cornflowers, milkweed, pond lilies and other miscellaneous stock is to be had. There were many visitors in the wholesale market this week, most of whom were on their way to the Detroit convention, consequently the supply houses were quite busy and booked some good orders. Vacations are in order everywhere, but at the same time everyone is busy making preparations for the fall trade.

NOTES.

Herbert A. Clausen, of the America Flower Shop, Denver, Colo., spent several days here this week on business, and then left with the local delegation for Detroit to attend the S. A. F. convention. He will visit several of the large eastern markets after the convention, and will stop off here on his way home. He called on his old friend, T. D. Long, at Vaughan's Seed Store, and of course, the two old "Denverites" had a pleasant visit. Mr. Clausen learned, while talking with E. F. Winterson, that he used to work in Denver in his younger days.

J. H. McGorrish, who is opening a new store under the name of the Art Floral Co., Des Moines, Ia., at 515 Grand avenue, was a visitor this week. He is a graduate of the Culver Military Academy, Culver, Ind., and had a pleasant visit with John Poehlmann, who also received his diploma from the same school.

The Bohannon Floral Co. had the order for the Plamondon wedding last week, which included a large church decoration. Mr. Bohannon and wife left this week for a visit in California.

The Bergman-Koropp Co., manufacturers of artificial foliage, are located at 4553 Elston avenue. This firm was one of the exhibitors at the Detroit convention this week.

Miss Nettie Parker, secretary of A. T. Pyfer & Co., arrived home from a trip to Yellowstone Park in time to join the local delegation to the Detroit convention.

J. L. Raske is comfortably settled in his new store at 176 West Jackson boulevard, which is a great improvement over the old stand a few doors east. Everything has been arranged to render service, and it is a pleasure to find a place so laid out that not a minute is lost in the filling of an order. Mr. Raske has Duncan Robertson with him, who needs no introduction to the local trade, owing to his past record in this city.

Charles Drissler, with Wietor Bros., received a letter from Charlie Kohn, who was with the American troops overseas but returned some time ago and has been in an eastern hospital several months. He is taking up a special course in landscape gardening at the expense of the government and has the best wishes of all his friends here for every success in his new undertaking.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is showing some of the finest outdoor asters that have reached this market this season, and are bringing $7 per 100 in the best grade. The grower that is shipping them in is using the overhead irrigating system, which is certainly proving to be worth while this season when one considers the low prices most of the stock has averaged so far.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is supplying its trade with some fine pink gladioli, which reached here from northern Michigan. No one at the place seems to know what particular variety it is, but it is worth investigating.

Zech & Mann report business as brisk with a strong demand for gladioli, which are arriving in good supply at this establishment. Roses are more plentiful here, with Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia having a good call.

Geo. A. Kuhl, of Pekin, who has been at the Presbyterian hospital, expects to return home this week. Mr. Kuhl greatly regretted his inability to attend the convention this year.

Phil Schupp, of the J. A. Budlong Co., and Peter Duris, of the Central Floral Co., decided to attend the convention at the last moment, leaving Tuesday noon, August 19.

The shipping trade has been good right along at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store and the local demand has been as good as can be expected and much better than last season.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner are giving their establishment a new dress of white paint. Henry Arnold is doing the decorating and is making a mighty nice job of it.

The Joseph Foerster Co. is pleasing its trade with some especially well-grown gladioli, particularly Schwaben, which are certainly fine.

Herbert Hansen is back on the job at Peter Reinberg's store after a pleasant vacation in Michigan.

Andrew McAdams is at St. Luke's hospital, recovering from the effects of a serious operation.

Miss Franc Hancock arrived home this week from the east.

BEST SUMMER DEMAND IN YEARS.

Trade is in much better shape just now than it has been for many years at the corresponding season. There seems to have been only a slight let up in the buying by the public. In former years, summer months have always been looked upon as a lean period for the grower and retailer, but it does not hold good this year as nearly all the stores find plenty to do right along. The florists' windows are beginning to take on a touch of autumn with the large displays of chrysanthemums and asters. Chrysanthemums are coming along rapidly, and now may be had in yellow, white and pink. Golden Glow is improving in quality every day, and is to be seen everywhere. They bring $2.00 per dozen. Early Frost is much in demand, but as yet, the supply is somewhat limited. There is also a pink variety coming in, but is in short supply. Asters have come along with a great rush, and have dropped considerably in price. White and pink are the best sellers. Light lavender is also in demand. The purple and rose colors move slowly, the public apparently not being interested in these shades. The supply of roses is fair. There are none too many of the better grade arriving. Quite a lot of the stock is mildewed and is hard to dispose of, except for funeral work. There are no Russells at present. Some extra nice Hadley is seen, and is a good seller. Of the other varieties, Columbia and Ophelia move best. Cecile Brunner is again in short supply. Mrs. Aaron Ward is also quite scarce. The gladioli supply still keeps up. Good stock retails at from $1.25 to $1.50 per dozen. Sweet peas are still to be seen, and nearly all of the stock being handled now is first class, the stem and color being good for so late in the season. The light colors move best. There are no cattleyas or other orchids of any kind to be had. Many inquiries for this stock are received every day. Gardenias are beginning to arrive a little more freely now, and it is not expected that this item will be in short supply again. Snapdragons are rapidly going off crop. There is a plentiful supply of dahlias in all grades, but it is only first class stock that finds a market. The street peddlers are handling the bulk of the cut. Zinnias are coming along slowly, and are being largely used in decorative work. The supply of carnations is beginning to shorten up, and until the new crop comes along, they will not be so plentiful as heretofore. All outdoor stock is in ample supply. Pot grown celosias are much in favor at present, owing to the excellent quality offered.

NOTES.

A very interesting flower show was held by the California State Floral Society, August 8, at Yosemite hall on Golden Gate avenue. The room was crowded during the day and evening to see the fine display of dahlias and other seasonable stock that was placed on exhibition. It must be said that the quality of the dahlias shown was extra good. A very comprehensive display of perennials was also staged. No admittance fee was charged and the expense of the show was borne by the society.

The stock of nephrolepis and other foliage plants at the Ferneries, of which H. Plath is the proprietor, is all in great condition. Mr. Plath also has a fine lot of primulas coming along for the holidays. It is also worthy to note here, that he is the only grower in the trade in this neighborhood who allows his employes a half holiday on Saturday. Since putting this rule into effect, he finds that his employes work better, and are more contended and he Enomoto Bros. have a large acreage devoted to chrysanthemums again this season. They are now cutting Golden Glow. They have also a large collection of pompons growing at this nursery. Their carnations are coming along rapidly, and they expect to have a large cut shortly from the new crop. They feel confident that the shipping trade will be a success again this fall, as far as chrysanthemums are concerned.

Domoto Bros.' range of glass is fast getting into shape for the coming season's trade. The large rose houses are making a fine showing now, and all the newly planted stock is making excellent growth. They are giving all the new eastern varieties a trial. Their nursery stock all looks to be in first class shape. They have a fine collection of Japanese plants in all varieties.

Nels Peterson, proprietor of the Peninsula Nursery, is sending in a cut of carnations that would be hard to excel anywhere. This grower's stock always commands a premium in this market. As a grower, Mr. Peterson has few equals in this vicinity. He has quite a few novelties, which he is trying out this season. All of his cut is disposed of in this city.

Julius Eppstein, proprietor of the St. Francis Hotel Flower Shop, has had a busy week with decorations. He says his trade has been greatly hampered by the scarcity of orchids. This flower is one of his leading specialities, of which he handles great quantities. He is looking forward to a busy season, and is arranging to handle it all in an expeditious manner.

The Charles C. Navlet Company is making attractive window displays of new dahlias at their Market street store. Mr. Navlet has been on a visit to the various seed growers in the state. He also expects to do a heavy plant trade this season, and has contracted for a large supply of both fruit and ornamental trees.

The Western Evergreen Co. has a large force busy just now getting their fall supply in shape. They have a number of men gathering decorative greens in the woods all the year round. Their shipping trade has reached large proportions, owing to the fact that they are always striving to please their customers.

Arnold Belli, of the Art Floral Company, has returned from a vacation spent among the Sante Cruz mountains. While there, he paid a visit to all the prominent gladiolus growers, and was greatly impressed by the large proportions this business has assumed near that city.

The Francis Floral Co. says they are much pleased over the way trade has kept up this summer. They have been busy right along with decorative work. They are showing some extra good chrysanthemums this week, and report an active demand for all the stock they can get.

H. Kooyman says the demand for florist supplies from out of town has been a great help this summer. He is quite satisfied with his bulb trade, especially the fall freezia end of it, which he says was extra good.

William Kettlewell, of Burlingame, is making a beautiful showing of his new dahlias this season. They are doing so well that he is in hopes of making a display of them at the dahlia show next month.

J. Kruse, of Piedmont, is sending in a fine cut of Cecile Brunner roses and adiantum. He will have his range in first class shape again this season, as he has now developed an adequate water supply.

Shibuya & Tchida are sending in a nice cut of early pink chrysanthemums. They have many thousands of plants under cloth houses, all of which are in the best of shape. JAMES T. LYNCH.

Toledo.

DEMAND SHOWS BETTER CONDITION.

Summer business this year just about equalled that of 1918. There has been a very light call for funeral work with a rush now and then. During the past week, however, trade showed some indications of picking up, and there was quite a demand in this line. There is considerable influenza here now, but as yet it has not developed into the more violent kind that caused so many deaths last fall. Although health authorities predict that this dreaded disease will come back, florists here would rather not see it do so, no matter how much business would result. Despite the extremely hot weather, the market has held up well and the quality of the flowers that came in was excellent. As usual, the variety was not great. For some weeks, this city has had an adequate and excellent supply of gladioli, which are bringing good prices. Asters are now coming in and are of fair quality. The supply is none too great, however. Roses have been scarce at times, but on the whole there have been sufficient to supply the light call. Shasta daisies and other summer flowers are being used to help fill in. Retail florists, with whom the writer has conversed lately, are all optimistic, and look for a continuance of good business this fall and winter.

NOTES.

The retail florists' association held its mid-summer meeting at the flower shop of S. N. Peck on Superior street. Due to the hot weather, the attendance was rather light, but made up in enthusiasm. In the absence of President Helen Patten, who is on her vacation, Treasurer S. N. Peck presided. The S. A. F. convention was the principal topic for discussion, and all present seemed anxious to attend. The present inquiry into profiteering was discussed as to any possible relation it might have to florists, but there has never been any price-fixing in this city. Ways and means of creating more interest in the organization were discussed, and a campaign for members will be inaugurated in September.

This has been clean-up week at Schramm Brothers, in which every member of the organization jumped in to systematize stock rooms, clean up the office, and in general, brighten things up for the fall trade. The large sign that fronts this establishment, has been repainted. Frank Schramm and Albert Lehmann have returned from a northern trip, and George Schramm, manager of the retail department, leaves this week for Traverse City. Business has been fair. Frank M. Schramm will attend the S. A. F. convention from beginning to end.

Tom Magee, of the Scottwood Greenhouse, has returned from his vacation in northern Michigan, much recuperated. This was practically his first outing in 26 years, and Tom enjoyed the experience so much that he plans to go back north during the latter part of September.

A miniature electric fountain, artistically surrounded with beautiful roses, is used with good effect in the present display in the window of Mrs. J. B. Freeman. Business has been quite lively at this store during the past week.

Miss Helen Patten, president of the local club, has a cottage on the bay shore, where she spends most of her evenings during the summer.

MODERATE SUMMER BUSINESS.

Business is fair for the time of the year, but is not brisk enough to take up everything that comes into the market. Green goods, generally, however, and cut ferns in particular, are meeting with a heavy demand. Roses are in fair supply, and when fancy, sell fairly well. Asters are plentiful, but the choice offerings are somewhat limited in quantity. A good supply of gladioli is available. Other offerings are rubrum lilies and snapdragons.

NOTES.

Cupid was busy among the local florists last week. Miss Clare Murphy, of the William Murphy Company, was married to Lloyd Barnes, of Wyoming, at Cedarville, Mich. After the ceremony the couple started on a six months' auto honeymoon trip. Frank Volz was married to Miss Dorothy E. Brown, of this city, while Al Horning married a young lady from Covington, Ky.

Wm. Mayhall and wife are the proud parents of a baby boy born August 15. He has been named after his grandfather, Edmund Gillett Mayhall. Both the mother and the baby are getting along splendidly.

C. E. Critchell has been having an extraordinary demand for ferns for this time of the year.

H. J. Vanderhorst and his son were in this city on a buying expedition this week.

H.

Columbus, O.

GLADIOLI SWAMP THE MARKET.

The trade is fairly swamped under the abundance of gladioli, which are now in evidence in all varieties and colors. Some of the florists are advertising bargain prices to reduce the congestion, offerings being as low as $1.00. Asters are also in good quantity and share with gladioli the prominence of being used for about every purpose. Marigolds and other garden flowers only supply the place of fill-ins for funeral work and general decorative use. Roses are in fair supply, but demand for hothouse stock is at low ebb at this time of year. Business is dull. Inquiries among the trade disclose a very sanguine state of mind with respect to fall and winter business. Purchases of fancy baskets, crockery and other sundries have been unusually large.

NOTE.

H. W. Kropp, owner of the Cottage Rose Garden and the Neil Floral Shop, returned August 15 from a three week's trip to Yellowstone park and other points in Colorado. He was accompanied by Mrs. Kropp. A stop of a few days was made in Chicago to look over the market and place orders.

BUSINESS EXCEEDS THAT OF 1918.

Trade during the present summer, showed considerable gain over the corresponding period last year, and all indications point to a fine fall demand. Gladioli and asters are at present flooding the market and move slowly. There is not an overabundance of salable flowers, with roses limited in supply and not the best in quality. Cosmos is good and sells readily. Sweet peas are very poor. Rubrum lilies are quite plentiful at $10 per 100.

NOTES.

A. Leuthy has a fine, healthy looking stock of palms and dracænas, in addition to ferns, for the fall trade and reports demand better than in previous years.

Welch Bros. Co. has enjoyed a splendid summer trade, and good sized shipments of florist supplies are now being received.

A. A. Pembroke has finished re-loaming his houses and has started his carnation plants, which are looking better than ever.

Gills Bros., of Lynn, report a good crop of cyclamens, begonias and ferns coming on for fall.

Henry M. Robinson & Co., have a busy establishment these days.

S. K. G.

TRADE CONDITIONS CONTINUE UNCHANGED.

The market during the past week proved uninteresting. Shipments were small and the quality in general poor. Asters have become more plentiful and are the principal item in the limited demand. There is no glut, however, unless it may be said to be in inferior roses. The steady stream of transient trade is no more and the retailers have plenty of time to prepare for fall business. There have been some good crested ferns seen lately which have worked in splendidly for funeral arrangements.

NOTES.

Charles R. Jones, superintendent of Druid Hill park, has two beds of chrysanthemums in fine condition. They are solely for the use of the city and are a great credit to the grower. Mr. Jones is responsible for the bulk of the stock furnished to make the parks and squares in this city among the most attractive in the United States.

In addition to those previous mentioned, the following are attending the S. A. F. convention at Detroit. Mich., this week: Fred Bauer, Isaac Moss and Andrew Anderson, accompanied by their wives: E. Stevenson and Miss Stevenson.

Fred Bauer, of Govans, has made extensive improvements at his range. With the aid of his two able assistants Charles Wagner and Colin Campbell, he produces large quantities of fine pot plants.

John Halliday, formerly of the firm of Halliday Bros., has retired from the florist business and is now a successful insurance man.

The president of the florists' club has sent out notices that the main topic of discussion at the next meeting will be that of coal.

Isaac H. Moss is increasing his retail capacity and has made quite an improvement in his office. G., JR.

Kansas City, Mo.

RAIN ENDS LONG DROUGHT.

This city and vicinity has enjoyed relief from the long drought as the result of three very heavy rains and some hail, but not serious enough to cause any damage. On August 15, there was recorded the heaviest dew for this month in many years. Gladioli are now the leaders in cut flowers and wholesale at from eight to 12 cents. In roses, Ophelia and Russell are showing improvement. Asters are still very poor and do not move well, owing to the smallness of the flowers, although there is some good home-grown stock. This supply is limited, however.

NOTES.

H. Kusik & Co. report stock more plentiful, especially roses, gladioli and asters. Henry Kusik left for Chicago, August 15, where he will spend a few days, after which he will attend the S. A. F. convention at Detroit, Mich.

William L. Rock and wife and Mrs. Simpson are motoring through the lake country and the north and will be absent about six weeks. Walter Oberg of the Rock forces is now enjoying his vacation.

Miss Elizabeth Hayden is back after spending an enjoyable vacation in the north. Miss Mary Hayden has left for an extended trip around the lakes and other places of interest.

John Klauss, of Greenwood, Mo., and Bernard Barbe, of this city, left, August 14, for an auto trip to Chicago, from which point they expect to make the trip to Detroit by boat.

P. A. Sexton is glad to report the arrival home safe of his son, Levi, on the day that "Dad" had a birthday. Levi has been with the armed forces in France.

Arthur Newell has received a message from Fred Hurst, that he is on his way to the United States after service in France.

T. J. Noll & Co. have had fine business and have handled good home-grown stock of gladioli, roses and asters.

A. Mohr reports everything at his establishment in good shape and expects good returns the coming season.

August Luther has his range in fine shape and reports excellent summer business.

GLADIOLUS

They are in full crop. Our stock includes many novelties and all the standard varieties. Always a good supply of America, Augusta, Francis King, Panama, etc. $5.00 and $6.00 per 100.

If you will leave the selection to us we can offer you Gladiolus at very attractive prices. We ship Gladiolus mostly in bud, insuring arrival in good condition. You are obliged to carry some stock during the summer months, and you have less risk of loss in Gladiolus than any other flower you can buy.

THE LEO NIESSEN CO., 1201 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Philadelphia.

ROSE DEMAND SLIGHTLY IMPROVED.

The business of the past week has been, as one of the large establishments describes it, "pretty punky." It is certainly the ebb season of the year, the tide being far out, and let us hope, about on the turn. There is a slight improvement in the roses, Columbia, Premier and Russell, being in the first selection, distinctly better summer stock than anything ever offered before at this season. Double White Killarney is about up to the standard for this time. There are some good asters, but the great majority hardly get a look, and are jobbed out to the street men. Gladioli are still a quantity stock; only the very best sells, fully half of the shipments hardly returning more than express charges. Hydrangeas are plentiful and in demand from those with decorative or funeral work. Quite a few callas are seen, cut in bud, or with flowers not half opened; in consequence, they do not bring even half price. A few good Easter lilies are in demand and sell up clean. There is fine larkspur. Cattleyas are very scarce. The first Golden Glow chrysanthemums were offered by Berger Bros. August 15. They were fine flowers from the Bickmore greenhouses at Wallingford.

THE DAHLIA CROP.

Immense shipments of dahlias have, in many quarters, been the expectation, as soon as their season opened up. "All who look for such quantities, will be disappointed," said one of the good judges of the market. "The recent heavy rains caused a spongy rapid growth, and the violent storm, August 14, played havoc with many of the plants, breaking them off at the surface of the ground. In my opinion, there will not be any too many high grade flowers, and while there will not be the great demand of last season, or the exceptionally high figures, yet the business and prices should be much better than before the war."

NIESSEN-PENNOCK BASEBALL.

The "evening up" match as they call it at Leo Niessen's, when their baseball team again plays the S. S. Pennock nine, will take place at Richboro, near Churchville, Montgomery county, Saturday, August 30. Elmer Gaehring extended an invitation to have the game played at his country place, where following the contest, he will entertain all present with a dinner to be followed by a movie show in the evening. The teams, rooters and invited guests will make the trip in autos, to arrive at 3 p. m. Both nines have been working hard and all claim this will be a "regular" game.

NOTES.

In figuring out the feasibility of taking advantage of air space above tables or beds of growing plants, Robert Craig says the advantages are to be considered as against the disadvantages, and judgment given to the weighty side. Plants suspended close to the glass, get all the light and air possible, and if they are not allowed to suffer for water, improve rapidly. They, however, cast a shadow on the greater quantity of the stock beneath, and depending on how this growth is hindered, if any, determines whether it is good practice or not.

When the alterations to the new store of Emil, the Florist, on Kensington avenue, are completed, and which now only await the erecton of a conservatory or show house, he will have one of the most up-to-date establishments in that section of the city. A large garage in the rear, across both properties, gives in addition to providing room for his own cars, renting space for others, from which he obtains quite a revenue. Emil is a hustler who has climbed up from the bottom, and is still looking for room at the top.

C. U. Liggit says that in his experience he has never noted such a shortage of all kinds of greenhouse stock. Field carnations are in great demand, all the standard varieties now bringing $16.00 per 100, and the same rate by the thousand. Referring to Lilium giganteum, he states that the Japanese lily growers have formed an organization and fixed a schedule of prices which are adhered to absolutely and that one importer has no advantage over another, all having to pay exactly the same according to the grade of the bulbs.

Mrs. Catherine Cooper, daughter of Mrs. Jane Carroll, Darby, Pa., lost her son, William, 18 months old, August 14, by drowning, under conditions most distressing. New greenhouses under construction necessitated the removal of a boiler. This left a large hole which recent rains filled with water. The boy was missed, and was finally found by his father in the bottom of the excavation. This had not been protected as it had never held water before and was quite a distance from the house.

J. Otto Thilow spent last week motoring to and about Lake Placid and Lake George in New York state. He found it so cool that ice froze on the water pitcher in his room. He is loud in his praises of the wonderful highways of New York state. He says they have cost $50,000,000, but are worth every cent of it, and return big revenue from the thousands of visitors that motor over them.

In addition to the trade representatives, the convention party from this city will include, E. A. Harvey and wife, Edward Ross and wife, Charles H. Grakelow, Mrs. S. Swisher and sister, John Albrecht, Arthur Lanser, J. C. Schmidt, James W. Heacock and wife, C. U. Liggit and Ernest Zeiger.

Wm. H. Koehler, who finds Asparagus plumosus a good crop, is installing a pipe watering system to care for this stock, which is planted in ground beds in several of his houses. He finds this satisfactory and a great labor saving device.

George Carpenter and wife celebrated their silver wedding anniversary in July. There were many guests to extend congratulations, and gifts of silver as lasting souveniers of the occasion.

Carl Corts is off to the country, vacationing in the sylvan meadows of Brandywine, not far from the Chester county carnation belt. Carl always is partial to country life.

S. S. Pennock will spend a week's vacation at Weekapang, near Westerly, R. I., where he will nurse his hay fever and amuse himself by pulling flounders out of the bay.

DULL MARKET REMAINS UNCHANGED.

There has been no improvement in the condition of the cut flower market since our last notes were written, nor can any material improvement be expected for some time to come. A great stock of asters, gladiolus and various other outdoor stocks continue to arrive. There is a very light supply of orchids, and as there is always some call for them, cattleyeas have wholesaled for $2 per flower and upward, but it is only in exceptional cases that any buyer will pay such prices. The American Beauty market continues in poor condition, and the surplus scarcely brings enough to pay the expressage. A few of the better quality of tea roses move fairly well, but the surplus is hard to move. There are no white lilies on the market, but the supply of L. rubrum is on the increase with a fair movement for the season. Lily of the valley is also a scarce article, but the white bouvardia, which is plentiful, makes a fair substitute.

August 19.—The continued cool, dark and rainy weather is greatly reducing the supply of all stocks, with a consequent stiffening of prices. The late and large asters are going as high as $4 per 100; the best gladioli about the same.

NOTES.

Myer, Madison avenue and 58th street, had the casket cover and much other family work for the funeral of the late Andrew Carnegie, whose remains were laid to rest August 14, in Sleepy Hollow cemetery, Tarrytown, N. Y. Mr. Carnegie, it will be recalled, was a native of Scotland, and love for the land of his birth was a strong attribute of his character. It was therefore appropriate that among the funeral designs were wreaths of Scotch heather and thistles. The casket cover was of cattleyas and fresh sago leaves. Many Hadley and Russell roses and quantities of lily of the valley, white bouvardia and heliotrope were also used.

Fred Howard, of Los Angeles, Calif., who has spent the past two months in travel in France and the British Isles, arrived at this port, August 9. Seen at the Hotel Breslin, where he stayed while here, he stated that, considering the tremendous strain of war, France and Great Britain endured, their horticultural business is in remarkably good condition. Mr. Howard is in fine health and spirits, but being once more on American soil, it feels good to him, and he will be glad to see California again. He left for the west on the evening of August 13.

William G. Polykranas, son of George J. Polykranas, the wholesaler, who entered the United States army as a volunteer two and a half years ago, recently returned from overseas, where he spent 18 months. He was in the headquarters company of the Fifth Division, and saw service in the battles of Argonne, Meuse and Trappelle sectors. He was in the Argonne-Meuse sector 104 days. His division was the first to occupy a German town. He has re-entered the wholesale business with his father.

Frank Pignataro, who spent 16 months in France with Co. B, Seventh Infantry, Third Division, United States army, is now with McKenney, Fifth avenue and 42d street, for whom he had worked before entering the army. He bears the marks of three shrapnel wounds, which kept him in a hospital for two months, but he is all right again.

For those who enjoy the shade of fine trees, and a landscape resplendent with flowering shrubs and plants, Bronx park is now a mecca. The fine collection of dahlias is coming into bloom, and the gladioli, hydrangeas, and other seasonable flowers, are all worthy of admiration.

Thomas Daniel, who for the past 14 years has conducted a retail store at 212 Fifth avenue, Brooklyn, has leased a much larger store, corner of Fifth avenue and Union street, and is having it filled up in strictly modern style. It will be about the largest retail store in Brooklyn.

A man who recently filled out an application for a position as gardener at Vaughan's Seed Store, gave the following as former employers: King Edward VII, four years; King George V, three years, and Lord Rothschild, four years. Should be allright.

Walter J. Sears, son of William P. Sears, the well-known retailer, returned from France two weeks ago, where he served one year in headquarters company 9, Second Division, United States army. He saw much of the horrors of war, but came out unhurt.

Bonnet & Blake, the Brooklyn wholesalers, had a new automobile stolen from them, August 11, and to add to misfortune, on the next day a careless driver backed his truck against the front of their store, doing considerable damage.

Edward Brenner, well known in the wholesale district, has opened a wholesale store at 101 West 28th street. He is an experienced man, having been for a number of years with Geo. C. Siebrecht, and later with J. J. Coan.

James Duffy, well known in the retail trade of this city, who spent over a year in France with the "Wildcats" of the American army, is now managing A. T. Bunyard's store during the latter's absence at Newport, R. I.

Brand Whitlock, minister to Belgium, who returned on the Nieuw Amsterdam, August 16, stated that considering what that country has suffered, agricultural conditions are in encouraging shape.

John Dailledouze is on vacation and Papa Eugene is as busy as any of the boys on the place. Paul and Henry, when last heard from, were in British Columbia.

On August 13, carnation planting was being actively carried on at the Hession range, Flatbush. Heavy rain fell that night, but the weather turned cooler.

A. T. Bunyard came down from Newport, R. I., last week. He says that business is good at that fashionable resort. He conducts a summer store there.

Manager Perry of Charles A. Dard's store, has returned from a trip to England and is now with his family in the White Mountains.

A. Demeusey, of Flatbush, took time by the forelock in planting carnations, and they are now rooted and looking well.

Extensive improvements are being carried on at the store of James Weir, Inc., Pierrepont and Fulton streets.

Miss Ethel Frankel, bookkeeper for Mrs. Leikens, is spending a vacation of several weeks at Avergne, L. I.

Miss Mollie Sims, bookkeeper for B. S. Slinn, Jr., is spending a month's vacation in the Catskill mountains.

The United Cut Flower Co., 111 West 28th street, is handling a good quality of the dahlia, Elsie Burgess.

IMPROVED WEATHER AND BUSINESS.

The past week was a busy one for the local florists, as weather conditions were very favorable for an increase in the trade, which was noted throughout the week. Not only was there a good call for funeral work, but counter trade showed a noticeable improvement. Cool weather prevailed, with several good soaking showers, which helped out the asters and dahlias, particularly, and also improved the quality of gladioli, which are slightly on the decline in regard to quantity, although there are some excellent blooms offered. Asters are improving in size, Comet being the largest variety on the market. However, the general crop is not as good as last season, as the very dry weather the first part of their season seriously hampered their growth. In outdoor flowers, there is a good variety offered, including hydrangeas, golden glow, snapdragons, which are of much improved quality, dahlias, which are increasing in quantity daily, lilies, daisies, delphiniums, statice, phlox, tuberoses, calendulas, corn flowers, and gypsophila. Auratum and rubrum lilies are moderately plentiful. The first-of-the-season chrysanthemums have arrived on the market, but as usual they are small in size and large in price.

NOTES.

A. Shive and wife, of the Flick Floral Co., Mr. and Mrs. Richard Blossom, of the Blossom Floral Co., and Miss Junetta Schoch, will all motor to Toledo, O., this week, where they will be joined by Miss Marguerite Flick. The party will attend the S. A. F. convention at Detroit.

George Doswell, of the Doswell Floral Co., is spending a week in Chicago. He will visit the growers and the wholesale and retail markets. Miss Bonnie Doswell, of the same firm, will leave soon for St. Louis, Mo., where she will visit her sister, Mrs. H. J. Wickman.

The stock in the greenhouses of the Freese-Knecht Floral Co. is looking exceptionally good. They have just finished replanting their entire rose stock, in addition to new stock of Premier, and other varieties.

Clem Lanternier and wife, who have been visiting relaives and friends in Toledo, O., will be joined by Mr. Lanternier this week, and will attend the Detroit convention.

Edgar Wenninghoff has returned from a week's vacation, which included a motor trip to Cedar Point, O., and a boat ride on Lake Erie. H. K.

E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, 216 Prospect Avenue, S. E., Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

ALFALFA seed conditions are good.

NEW CROP Wisconsin white clover is coming into market.

THE red top grass seed crop in Illinois is about normal.

SACRAMENTO valley, California, has 6,000 acres in mustard.

SUGAR BEET fields at Greeley, Colo., will yield only about half a crop.

THE turnip seed crop is said to be 38 per cent above that of last year.

VISITED CHICAGO: J. F. Bonner, of Stokes Seed Co., Moorestown, N. J., going to Detroit.

THE Willamette valley, Oregon, is harvesting a big crop of medium red and alsike clovers.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, Chicago, is taking care of its mail orders for winter vetch this week.

BEAUMONT, TEX.—H. E. Furry, proprietor of the Beaumont Seed Co., is visiting friends in Chicago.

THE railroad administration should make mixed carload freight rates no higher than the rate for each item.

CHICAGO freight rates on holly from southern points have been advanced to 79 cents per 100 pounds, over 25 per cent.

CARL CROPP, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, left August 18 for California. Mrs. Cropp accompanied him to Colorado Springs, Colo.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade August 20, were as follows: Timothy $10.50 to $11.50 per 100 pounds. October $12.25 bid.

COLUMBUS, O.—Harry Springer, for a number of years traveling representative of the Livingston Seed Co., has assumed the management of large farming interests at Washington Court House, O.

VISITED DETROIT, MICH.: J. C. Vaughan, Chicago; J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston, Mass.; A. Henderson, Chicago; C. W. Scott, New York; L. H. Archias, Sedalia, Mo., attending the convention of the Society of American Florists.

WICHITA, KAN.—The Marlow Seed Co. has increased its capital stock and doubled its cleaning and warehouse capacity. Harry Sunfield, formerly with the A. A. Berry Seed Co., Clarinda, Ia., is now a member of the firm in charge of the grass and field seed department.

THE W. W. BARNARD CO., Chicago, reports, that while not in a position to make a definite statement of comparison, store sales, generally speaking, have exceeded those of 1918, while the filling-in from the wholesale trade has been lighter, total volume of business, however, showing an increase over that of last season.

LEONARD H. VAUGHAN, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, and family, returned from Colorado Springs, Colo., this week, making the trip by auto.

Illinois Seed Law Conference.

The conference of seedsmen called by Director Charles Adkins, of the Illinois department of agriculture, at 10 a. m. August 14, was held in his office at Springfield. The rules and regulations issued by the department of agriculture relative to the enforcement of the seed law were discussed, and judging from the spirit of co-operation manifested by those present, and also their expressions of satisfaction of plans proposed, there seems to be no doubt but that there will be the utmost harmony between the seedsmen and the department of agriculture. In holding such conferences as this, it gives both parties interested in the enforcement of the law an opportunity to go into the various points in detail and work out a plan satisfactory to all. Mr. Adkins expressed himself as being very much pleased with the attitude of all in attendance. Those present at the meeting were: Director Charles Adkins, Assistant-Director H. H. Parke, Chief Seed Analyst Albert C. Wilson, H. H. Miller, of Funk Bros. Seed Co., Bloomington; Leonard H. Vaughan, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago; C. Q. Dunlap, of Illinois Seed Co., Chicago; B. F. Maag, of Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago; E. E. Elder, of American Mutual Seed Co., Chicago; Roy Kellar, of Geo. Kellar & Sons, Quincy; A. G. Dohm, Carlinville; W. G. Eckhardt, county adviser, DeKalb; Geo. L. Pfeiffer, Jr., Arcola; S. Janssen, of Janssen Seed & Floral Co., Springfield; C. A. Beebe, Forreston; Chas. E. Pendarvis, agronomist of E. G. Lewis Seed Co., Media, and Leonard R. Condon, of Condon Bros., Rockford.

The rules and regulations adopted at this conference will be printed in bulletin form in connection with the seed law, and sent out to the seed dealers at an early date.

ALBERT C. WILSON,
Chief Seed Analyst.

Fertilizers and Farm Machinery.

Declaring that the increase in the prices of fertilizers and farm machinery of every kind is entirely out of proportion to the increase in the price of farm products, and that the present prices for those necessities make it impossible for the producers to make any reduction in their prices for farm products, Congressman Flood, of Virginia, in a resolution just introduced in the house of representatives, has called upon the federal trade commission to make a thorough investigation of conditions in the fertilizer and farm machinery industries. The increased cost of living is due in large extent to the increased cost of food products, declares Representative Flood, and that increase is due, in a large measure, to the increased prices of fertilizer and machinery.

The federal trade commission is authorized by the resolution to inquire into the increases in the price of fertilizer and machinery for the purpose of determining whether there was any necessity for such increases. A report is to be made to the house of representatives at the earliest possible date, to be used as the basis for legislation to reduce the cost of those articles.

Sugar Beet Acreage in 1919.

The area planted to sugar beets in the United States was the largest on record, reaching 890,400 acres, or 200,700 more than in 1918 and 83,000 more than the largest previous area, that of 1917. The condition of the crop July 1 was 78.9 per cent of normal as compared with 89.8 per cent for a 10-year average. Allowing an average percentage of abandonment the forecast this year is for 7,230,000 tons. Assuming a yield of 262.5 pounds of sugar per ton of beets, which is the 10-year average, production will be about 949,000 short tons compared with 765,063 tons in 1918.

Clover Seed Situation in Michigan.

Michigan's clover crop this season, which must be depended upon for seed production, according to the Michigan Agricultural College experiment station, East Lansing, is much below the average, owing to the serious injury to stands during the summer of 1918, and it is therefore apparent that the acreage available for seed this year and during the coming season will not be large, compared with former years. The same condition prevails in many neighboring states. During 1918, it was estimated by Secretary of State Coleman C. Vaughan, that the total yield of clover in Michigan was 73,980 bushels from 75,371 acres, or an average yield of .98 bushels per acre. The normal acreage of clover in the state is 800,000, which would require almost double the quantity produced during the past year for a successful seeding.

VAUGHAN'S GIANT PANSIES

VAUGHAN'S INTERNATIONAL PANSIES

Vaughan's International Pansy Mixture was first offered by us in 1889. We import from all the best European sources. Each year has added to the quality of its flowers and variety of the colors. We buy every year novelties of known merit to improve the mixture; it is always complete, always the latest and always the best mixture. We add to all Pansy Mixtures which we now buy more than 50 per cent of the choicest named kinds obtainable, each in correct proportion. This is one of the Specialties that has established the reputation of Vaughan's Flower Seeds, and one which we maintain most carefully. Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.50; ½ oz., $5.00; oz., $10.00.

Vaughan's Giant Pansy Mixture.

Embraces, besides all the separate shades and colors, five special strains not listed elsewhere, and which can only be had in this and our International Mixture. This mixture includes the richest reds, coppers and bronzes, together with the most delicate rose and pink shadings, all the distinct colors of Trimardeau and the splendid Cassier strain. Trade pkt., 50c; ⅛ oz., 75c. oz., $5.00; ¼ lb., $18.00.

Vaughan's Cut Flower Mixture

This mixture is put up by ourselves and contains mostly light colored sorts. We have sold this mixture for several seasons to some of our Chicago cut flower growers, who have realized big returns from the sale of flowers. Pansies are as easily grown as violets, require less care and bring better results. Trade pkt., 25c; ⅛ oz., 60c; oz., $4.00.

New Early-Flowering Giant Pansies

The new strain produces its giant flowers about four weeks earlier than other known types. In March, when the old type pansies hardly show any buds, the plants of the new strain bore from 3 to 5 of their giant flowers. Early-Flowering Giant White, Yellow, Light Blue, Dark Blue and Mixed (Four Colors). Trade pkt. (300 seeds), 35c; ¼ oz., 70c; oz., $5.

Chicago Parks Bedding Mixture.

This is a mixture made by ourselves from 20 different and distinct varieties of this type. While the flowers of this strain do not grow as large as those of the Giant Pansies they excel them by a much greater number of flowers to a plant. Trade Pkt., 25c; ¼ oz., 60c; oz., $2.00.

Vaughan's P. P. (Popular Price) Mixture of Pansies

This mixture, like all "Vaughan" mixtures, is made up by ourselves from separate colors and strains of the Giant and Chicago Parks Bedding types and will furnish a large variety of colors with a good proportion of giant flowers. Trade Pkt., 25c; ⅛ oz., 50c; oz., $3.00.

NEW EARLY-FLOWERING or WINTER-BLOOMING

GIANT PANSIES

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe Winters and to bloom right on into the Summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, eye.
15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with eye.
16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
17. CHARM OF MARCH Dark velvety blue
18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations, 500 seeds, 25c; 1000 seeds, 40c; ⅛ oz., $1.10; ¼ oz., $2.00; oz., $7.50.

10. KENILWORTH GIANT EXHIBITION is the very finest complete mixture ever sent out. Seed, carefully saved only from marked plants of all varieties, with the largest and best shaped flowers and richest coloring. It is impossible to convey an adequate idea of the delightful variations in color and markings of this unrivalled mixture. 500 seeds, 30c; 1000 seeds, 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.35; ¼ oz., $2.50; oz., $10.00.

12. KENILWORTH GIANT PRIZE is undoubtedly the largest flower and longest stemmed Pansy in the world The enormous flowers are of perfect form and of great substance. Petals overlapped and undulating. The rich colorings and markings are widely varied, some flowers being almost self-colored. 500 seeds, 30c; 1000 seeds, 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.35; ¼ oz., $2.50; oz., $10.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago June, 1920.

DOVER, DEL.—The Burton Orchards have been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000.

LOCKPORT, N. Y.—Estimates given by 10 establishments in Niagara county, indicate that with the exception of grapes the fruit crop in this section will scarcely average 50 per cent of average yields.

BULLETIN No. 458, issued by the New York agricultural experiment station, Geneva, describes tests showing that nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium have a marked beneficial effect upon the wood growth, yield and quality of grapes, under the title "A Test of Commercial Fertilizers for Grapes."

Insect Helps Control Others.

Entomologists of the United States department of agriculture report in Bulletin 766, the result of experiments with the parasite, known as Compsilura concinnati, a fly of European origin that may become of far reaching importance in the control of the gypsy moth, brown-tail moth and other serious pests of similar character. Since the establishment of the compsilura, the white marked tussock moth, the cabbage worm, celery worm and fall webworms have practically disappeared or their ravages lessened in some sections.

Ass'n of American Cemetery Supts.

The annual convention of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents will be held at Cincinnati, O., September 24-25, with headquarters at the Hotel Sinton. An interesting programme has been aranged and a large attendance is indicated. The members of the local convention committee are William Salway, Spring Grove Cemetery, Cincinnati, Carl E. Kern, also of Spring Grove, J. C. Cline, Dayton, O., and M. M. Jones, Newport, Ky. The present officers of the association are: W. H. Atkinson, Trenton, N. J., president; H. S. Adams, Jamaica Plain, Mass., vice-president, and W. B. Jones, Highwood, Pittsburgh, Pa. sectretary-treasurer.

Summer Flowering Trees.

Several trees with handsome or interesting flowers bloom in the Arboretum in July and August. All these and many summer flowering shrubs should find a place in gardens which are chiefly used during July, August and September; that is, in many northern seashore gardens. The most important of summer flowering trees here are the lindens. Some of the species begin to flower about the middle of June, but in the Arboretum collection are linden trees which are covered until the end of July with their beautiful fragrant flowers beloved of bees. In the meadow on the right-hand side of the Meadow road there is a large collection of these trees with many species, hybrids and varieties. Among them are trees of great beauty of habit, and trees which can be successfully used in New England to shade streets and roads and to decorate parks. A careful study of the linden collection in the Arboretum during June and July will repay lovers and planters of trees.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, July 17, 1919.

Rose Stops Clock.

While the Great North of Scotland Railway Company's clockmaker was ascertaining the cause of the stoppage of a station clock, he found that a shoot from a rose tree growing on the platform had found its way underneath the wooden super-structure of the station building, forced its way up between the outer and inner linings of the wall, and thence right into the movement of the clock, which it brought to a complete stop.—British Horticultural Trade Journal.

Sumac in Demand.

Sicilian sumac, which contains 30 per cent tannin, is in much demand owing to the scarcity of the supply of oak and hemlock bark. Sumac is worth from $2.50 to $4 per pound, and tons of it go to waste in this country. Its value can be estimated when we consider that we send annually to foreign countries $30,000,000 for tanning material, an important factor in the present high cost of shoes.

STERLING, ILL.—Mrs. Ella M. Hurd has opened a flower shop in this city.

WOOSTER, O.—The state horticultural society has selected the agricultural experiment station in this city as the place for its fall meeting, September 10.

E. TURBAT & CO., Nurserymen, Orleans, France

We have the pleasure to advise the American Nursery Trade that our new WHOLESALE CATALOGUE will be posted to any nurseryman in the U. S. A. who will apply for it.

Our catalogue is as much complete and as much interesting as it was previously, but we cannot incur the great expense of posting it to all the nurserymen of the United States of America without a special demand, for the following reasons:

1st. We are very short of Fruit and Rose Stocks, which will be sold out early.
2nd. We have a superb assortment of Young Deciduous and Evergreen, Ornamental and Forest Trees, Shrubs, Hardy, Herbaceous, Etc. New, Rare or Noticeable Trees and Shrubs, and Hardy, Herbaceous, New and Other Rose Trees, which are prohibited at the entry in the U. S A. if destined for selling at once, but which are allowed to enter if they are destined for the propagation work, and if the importer has obtained permission from the Federal Horticultural Board at Washington.

We are at the full disposition of the nurserymen or florists of the U. S. A. who desire to buy these articles, and we will be very pleased to answer their demands, regarding catalogues and general information.

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

H. W. Selby, Philadelphia, Pa., President; C. W. Waid, Grand Rapids, Mich., Vice President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., Secretary; Eugene Davis, Grand Rapids, Mich., Treasurer.

THE first cargo of Spanish onions has arrived on the New York market.

THE Kaw Valley, Kan., potato market is stronger, prices cash to growers, field run; $2.50-$2.65.

Cantaloupe Damage in Calafornia.

Cantaloupe growers in Stanislaus county, Calif., have suffered severe losses this season from a blight which has not been serious before. The trouble, which is different from the well known watermelon blight, has been determined by Professors W. T. Horne and C. W. Woodworth to be the mosaic disease, which has heretofore been most common on tobacco.

California Vegetable Standardization Law.

The new and expanded California fruit and vegetable standardization law went into effect July 27. Deceptive packing must cease. While the old law was still in force, Sacramento County Horticultural Commissioner F. C. Brosius condemned 73 boxes of Merced tomatoes because their top layers were notably better than those underneath. A number of wholesale dealers have had to repack boxes of tomatoes packed deceptively.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, August 19.—Cucumbers, Climax baskets, 25 cents; celery, Michigan, crate, 75 to 90 cents; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 20 to 25 cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $1.50; tomatoes, 4 baskets, 50 to 75 cents.

New York, August 18.—Celery, per doz. roots, 20 to 75 cents; cucumbers, 40 to 60 cents per dozen; mushrooms, $1.00 to $2.50 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 6 to 15 cents; lettuce, per package, 75 cents to $2.25; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.50.

Cabbage in Ohio Menaced by Yellows.

Reports from different sections of the state indicate that the cabbage industry of Ohio is seriously threatened by a disease called yellows, according to the agricultural college extension service. It is characterized by the yellowing of the leaves and the general decline of the plants, which, in many cases, appears while the plants are still in the seed bed. As the leaves turn yellow, they become detached from the stalk, and in the case of more mature plants, the stalk may become almost bare of leaves. This disease is caused by a fungus which is capable of living in the soil in the absence of members of the cabbage family for an indefinite period. The disease is hastened in its spread by continuous cropping, or too short a rotation. It is also more likely to develop during dry hot weather. Some growers observe that it appears worse upon sandy than upon clay or loamy soils. The control of the organism largely centers about the use of clean seed, planted in disease-free soil, the practice of long rotations, and the development and use of disease resistant strains.

Leaky Potatoes.

A leaky potato is rightly named, according to a moving-picture film that has just been issued by the United States department of agriculture. If you squeeze a leaky potato in your hand, it will contract like a sponge, fall apart, and nothing will be left of it but a mass of rot.

How the "leak" disease gets into the potatoes is shown in the motion picture, which is to be exhibited in the California delta region, where the trouble causes large losses. The hoe-shaped forks that are used in this region for potato digging, often pierce the tubers, and the wounds thus made allow the entrance of the fungus that causes the disease, which is always on the watch for a point of attack. It is also shown that the common practice of breaking off the knobs or second growths from the tubers, likewise opens the way for the "leak" disease. The lesson of the film is that potatoes, which are damaged in any way, should not be stored or shipped with sound tubers.

The department has also issued a motion picture, showing the magnitude of the potato industry in California, how efficient methods of farming and shipping have been developed, and how losses can be prevented.

Soil Sterilization.

Soil sterilization is receiving more and more attention from greenhouse growers. There are several factors working to that end, one being the scarcity of labor. Under present conditions, it will eventually be cheaper to install sterilizing equipment than to attempt to change the soil by removing it and replacing it. Another factor is the tendency to specialize in one or two crops. The everlasting repetition of the same crops, gradually but surely develops a heap of trouble, and last, and of greatest importance, expense of operation.

This high cost of doing business, makes it absolutely necessary for any one to carry transactions through to a finish, allowing nothing to remain undone that would help to produce a grand total. In other words, if sterilization is a help in production, we cannot afford to do without it. It has been definitely proved that thorough sterilization is a cure for many ills under glass, hence, the wise grower should investigate its merits.

We believe that of the three methods, formaldehyde, hot water and steam, the latter is by far the best and cheapest. Some growers have already installed powerful steam boilers for the express purpose of sterilizing their soils. For details of plans, we would advise beginners to address their state experiment stations, as most of these publish very good instructions in regard to this subject. Whatever the method employed, we would urge beginners to be sure and do a thorough job, as everything depends upon that. The exposure to live steam must be long enough to permit the heat to penetrate the last particle of earth, and kill any germs or spores hiding there.

Where growers find it impossible to sterilize their growing houses, we would advise at least treating the plant houses, and in the absence of any equipment, remove the plant bed soils and clean the bed, using the old hot lime wash to disinfect the benches. Then with fresh earth, a new start is made, which goes a long way towards success. Strong, healthy plants do not readily yield to disease, while sickly stock seldom recovers in mid-winter when light is weak.

MARKETMAN.

Vegetable Markets.

Vegetable market values tended moderately downward during the period August 12-18 under heavy supplies, both homegrown and carlots. Further irregular declines occurred in potatoes, onions and cabbages. Southern and southwestern potato stock is being supplanted by increasing northern shipments and prices incline toward lower levels. New Jersey sacked Cobblers were irregular at $3.75-$3.90 per 100 pounds f. o. b. and Giants at $3.05-$3.35 and strengthened to $3.50 at the close. Consuming markets quoted New Jersey sacked Cobblers fairly steady at $3.50-$4.40. Virginia Cobblers were offered in a few eastern markets at $5-$6 per barrel. Kansas Early Ohio ranged $3-$3.75 per 100 pounds. Colorado Round Whites ranged $4 in western consuming markets. Onion values continued to sag, especially in western markets, closing dull, weak and unsettled. New Jersey yellow stock held steady at $2-$2.50 per hamper and red stock at $2-$2.75 per 100 pounds sacked. Massachusetts sacked yellows ranged $3.75-$4 in Philadelphia and New York but small sizes included went at $2.50-$3 in Boston. Middlewestern stock followed a weaker general range of $3.50-$4 per 100 pounds.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS
THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

Thursday's Proceedings.

The convention met pursuant to adjournment, Thursday morning, President Ammann in the chair. He announced that the judges and tellers of election were all present, the ballot boxes prepared and that at promptly 10 a. m. the polls would be declared open and so remain until 11 o'clock, or until all in line had voted, and would then be closed. At the appointed time, the polls were closed and an adjournment taken until 2:00 p. m. to permit of the counting of the ballots.

At two o'clock, the convention resumed its deliberations, President Ammann officiating. R. C. Kerr read the report of the judges of the trade exhibits, floor supplies section, which on motion of A. T. De La Mare was received and made part of the records. Judge of Elections John G. Esler reported the result of the ballot as follows: For president, A. L. Miller, 234 votes; J. F. Sullivan, 187; for vice-president, F. C. W. Brown, 379; for secretary, John Young, 386; for treasurer, J. J. Hess, 377; for director to serve three years, Herman P. Knoble, 273; Paul R. Klingsporn, 256; Irwin Bertermann, 256. The following officers were therefore declared elected by President Ammann as reported in our last week's issue, page 255; A. L. Miller, Jamaica, N. Y., president; F. C. W. Brown, Cleveland, O., vice-president; John Young, New York, secretary; J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb., treasurer; director for three years, Herman P. Knoble, Cleveland, O. There being a tie as to the remaining director, there was no election. A special committee appointed by the chair, consisting of J. G. Esler, R. C. Kerr and W. J. Pilcher retired with the candidates affected by the tie and later reported that both had decided to abide by the toss of a coin, Paul Klingsporn winning on his choice, "heads," and he was thereupon declared duly elected as director for the term expiring in 1922.

In the meantime, J. F. Sullivan moved that the election of A. L. Miller be made unanimous, which motion carried, and Mr. Miller was called upon for a speech to which he responded, saying that he highly appreciated the honor conferred upon him and would do all in his power to further the interests of the organization, and while he did not profess to be an expert in society management, he would do everything possible for the trade. The president then remarked that he was glad to have the proud honor of being succeeded as president by a gardener, and although Mr. Miller did not claim to be an orator, he knew him to be a real worker who would be ace high in whatever position he was placed. He himself was part orator and part gardener. E. G. Hill said that President Ammann was a notable exception to the rule that an orator and a gardener could not co-exist in the same person. Paul Klingsporn, who was also called upon for a speech, said he was just an ordinary wholesaler and had never expected to stand any chance against two such well-known florists as Herman Knoble and Irwin Bertermann, the latter a prominent worker in the profession for many years and with a far greater reputation than himself. He thanked the convention from the bottom of his heart.

Charles H. Grakelow presented the report of the judges of trade exhibits, division of novelties and new varieties in plants On motion of R. C. Kerr, the report was adopted and made of record. President-elect Miller suggested that a vote of thanks be extended to the exhibitors, but was informed that this would be taken care of in the report of the committee on final resolutions. Director-elect Knoble thanked the convention for the honor conferred and pledged himself to give the very best service he possibly could in his new office. Secretary John Young and Treasurer Hess were called upon and each responded in a fitting manner Vice-president-elect F. C. W. Brown was also called upon for a speech but was not in the hall at the time.

Frank R. Pierson referred to the death and valuable services of Past-President William J. Stewart, and moved the adoption of the following resolution:

"Be it remembered that,

"Whereas: The Almighty, in His wisdom, has called to eternal rest our beloved past secretary and ex-president, William J. Stewart, of Boston, Mass.; and

"Whereas, this society has been always appreciative of, and will always bear in cherished remembrance the indefatigable labors of our lamented coworker, Mr. Stewart, in the founding of and in building up this organization, and his constant interest and zeal for its success; therefore, be it

"Resolved: That a copy of this resolution be mailed to the widow and family of Mr. Stewart, and that a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this society."

W. A. Manda seconded the motion to adopt the resolution and suggested that a rising vote be taken as a further mark of respect. The resolution was therefore adopted by rising and unanimous vote.

On motion of J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, a telegram of regret was ordered sent to his old time friend, one of the pioneers of the society, J. D. Carmody. On motion of Philip Breitmeyer, a similar telegram was sent to ex-President Patrick O'Mara. On motion of J. J. Hess a like telegram was sent to ex-President Robert Craig. On motion of C. Loveridge, similar action was taken as to George A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill. On motion of J. F. Sullivan, a similar telegram was sent to John A. May, Summitt, N. J., pioneer member. On further motion, it was ordered that floral remembrances be also forwarded to each of the above.

Philip Breitmeyer auctioned off the exhibit contributed by the Skinner Irrigation Company of Troy, realizing $100, the same to be applied to the publicity fund.

President Ammann referred to the fact of the great divergence of views among florists, nurserymen and others interested as to Ruling No. 37 under the quarantine act, some being opposed, some in favor, and some neutral, for which reason the officers of the society had decided, if it were possible, to have present at this convention some representative of the federal horticultural board to furnish enlightenment on this subject for the benefit, not only of those present, but the entire trade of the country, and also as a help to the board itself, and for that reason Dr. C. L. Marlatt, of the federal horticultural board, had been invited to address the convention on the subject. President Ammann was pleased to announce that Dr. Marlatt had accepted the invitation and would address the convention and immediately after Dr. Marlatt's address the committee on tariff and legislation would present their report, final action upon which would be deferred until after the discussion which might follow Dr Marlatt's address. Immediately after Dr. Marlatt's address, Chairman W. F. Gude, of the committee on tariff and legislation, presented his report, final action on which was deferred until after the discussion of Dr. Marlatt's remarks.

Quarantine Resolutions.

Following the discussion of Dr. Marlatt's address, S A. Anderson, Buffalo, N. Y., moved the adoption of the following resolutions which were seconded by W. A. Manda, and duly carried:

"WHEREAS, on June 1, Quarantine No. 37 with regulations, became effective, prohibiting further importation of many plants and plant products and raw materials essential to the conduct and expansion of our business, and places burdensome, expensive, and unnecessary restrictions on the importation of other important classes of horticultural products and

"WHEREAS, the members of this society require, and consider themselves entitled to, real constructive regulation and efficient inspection, and are not satisfied with destructive business-wrecking regulations as a substitute, therefore, be it

"RESOLVED, that the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, at its annual meeting held in Detroit, Mich., August 19-21, attended by 1,500 delegates, unanimously protest against these drastic regulations; also the methods used by the federal horticultural board in promulgating them, and be it further

"RESOLVED, that this convention respectfully offers the following constructive suggestions:

"1. That Quarantine No. 37 with regulations be rescinded, and that in its place, such regulations be made as by correct methods of inspection will, within reason, properly safeguard the country against the invasion of foreign pests and diseases, but which will not unnecessarily interfere with the horticultural interests of the country.

"2. That at least two members of the present federal horticultural board of five bureau chiefs be replaced by practical horticulturists, who will not be entirely out of touch with the horticultural trade and its requirements.

"3. Or that three practical horticulturists be added to the board's present membership of five.

"4. That this reorganized board call hearings at a time when those interested can attend, giving separate hearings to each of these important classifications: (1) orchids; (2) bulbs and roots; (3) nursery stock; (4) roses; (5) dracæna canes and other similar raw materials. And be it further

"RESOLVED, that the secretary be requested to send a copy of this resolution to the members of the house committee on agriculture."

It being stated that E. G. Hill, among others, had either signed or approved the foregoing, Mr. Hill stated that he did not believe he ever signed it, and if he did, he had no business to in the light of facts that came to him afterwards, and he wished to make that explanation.

Presentation to President Ammann.

An agreeable digression affording relief to the suppressed excitement pervading the meeting following the quarantine action, came in the shape of remarks by Charles H. Grakelow, of Philadelphia, in presenting to Retiring President Ammann, on behalf of the society a handsome testimonial of esteem. Mr. Grakelow said:

"With your permission, at this time I would like to introduce the present diversion to take your minds off the discussion that we just had. I ask you to go with me to Ostend, or the great city of Paris, or London, among the dealers in precious stones, or down into Maiden Lane, where may be found on display the most wonderful gems. Gaze with me on the scintillating diamond, on the elusive lustre of the pearl, on the richness of the ruby and the garnet, vying in its brilliant coloring with human blood, and I defy any of you gentlemen, among all those gems or jewels, to point out one that will compare in worth with the wonderful value of the jewel of faithfulness. To be as brief as possible, Sir, at this time, I ask you to accept as an acknowledgment of our appreciation of you, and the extraordinary services that you have rendered this association in the faithful discharge of your duties as president during the past year, this concrete expression of our appreciation of your having exemplified to us the sublime jewel of faithfulness, perhaps the most striking that we have ever had."

Accompanying these remarks, Mr. Grakelow opened a morocco covered casket, displaying an elaborate solid silver service and presented the same to Retiring President Ammann.

Response of President Ammann.

"This is once you have it on the speaker. I am delightfully surprised. I hope I am agreeably appreciative of this token of your kindness to me and my loved ones, which will ever be cherished, I assure you, in our memories. The small service that I have been able to render you in performing the executive duties of this office have been attended with pleasure. It is a privilege to be associated with men of your character and influence. It seems only a few years ago, when I sat at the feet of men into whose faces I am looking here today, who pioneered the way of this great society, this wonderful organization; men like J. C. Vaughan, E. G. Hill, Robert Craig—oh, so many whom I could mention. How I wondered at their marvelous ability to serve. Oh! How thankful I am at having had the opportunity of at least making an attempt to be of some service to you. At a time like this, we are reminded of the reply that our Master gave to the question of the rich ruler, "What can I do to be saved?" When I think of the parable of the Good Samaritan, I feel how wonderful it is to help others by the wayside as we go along; how wonderful it is to be co-operative one with another. Oh! what it means to be connected with an organization that represents what our society does. How we realize, when we look back, that our business has been uplifted through the spirit of co-operation and brotherhood that has been infused into this work as we have gone along in our 35 years of existence. We are also reminded of the wonderful teachings of Paul in his letter to the Corinthians, especially that contained in the twelfth chapter just preceding that wonderful thirteenth chapter, where he speaks of love, and in the twelfth chapter of the unity of the body that links every member of it one to the other. So I admonish you at this time, to work in unity under the leadership of our new administration. Let us continue with this great work and assist to build up this great land of ours through the profession that we represent, which caters to the highest ideals of the American people. In that way, our influence may spread out unto all the peoples of the earth. The world has been bleeding and much of it is yet in mourning and in sorrow. At this time, after the exchange of ideas with this representative of our national administration, we hope to be bound in closer union.

"All I can say to you, fellow-members, and I say it from the bottom of my heart, speaking for myself, and also in behalf of my loved ones, we will cherish this token as long as we live, and thank you one and all."

W. A. Manda now offered a resolution of appreciation and thanks to Dr. Marlatt for giving his valuable time and journeying to Detroit to address the convention. The motion was carried by unanimous and rising vote.

The report of the tariff and legislative committee not having been acted on when previously read, on motion of F. R. Pierson, was received and made part of the record, and the recommendations therein contained calling for expenditure of money were referred to the executive board with power to act.

Secretary Young read the report of the national flower show committee, which on motion of Michael Barker, of Chicago, was received and the recommendations concurred in.

Secretary Young read a number of communications, viz.: One from E. Turbat, of the Federation Nationale des Syndicats Horticoles de France, Paris, inviting the American horticultural trade to join an entente between the British, Belgian, French and Italian horticultural trade, with the following objects: First, an examination of the situation of the international horticultural trade as the result of the war; second, decisions to be had as to eventual resumption of commercial relations with both the neutral countries and the enemy, and third, any other questions relating to international horticultural trade matters. Mr. Turbat stated that a similar invitation had been sent to the secretary of the American Association of Nurserymen, and asked whether it would be possible for the latter, together with the S. A. F., to name a joint committee to further this proposition? The communications were ordered filed.

Secretary Young also read a letter from Z. D. Blackistone, president of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., advising that the florists of that city had decided to have a "Say it with Flowers" week," Octotber 5-11, every store to be specially decorated and myriads of flowers shown. Thousands of blooms will be given to hospitals and similar institutions as an example of "Say it With Flowers"; every florist in town to push, advertise, talk, and do everything else except eat flowers during that week. Mr. Blackistone offered a similar suggestion to all of the cities throughout the country. On motion of Secretary Young, the above communication was received and referred to the publicity committee to see that it be given the widest publication through the Journal of the society and the recognized trade mediums. Secretary Young also read a letter from T. P. Langhans, secretary of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Company, suggesting that a day of the year be selected when flowers are very plentiful to be termed "Flower Day" when an automobile parade be held, the cars to be decorated with seasonable flowers, and bearing the society's slogan, "Say it With Flowers." Further days might be established, such as a "customers' day" or "benevolent day," when hospitals and other institutions could be recognized at minimum cost. On motion, this was also referred to the publicity committee.

Secretary Young read a letter from the John A. Keller Co., Lexington, Ky., suggesting a form of notice to the express companies to be placed on all express shipments with the idea of minimizing mishandling or damage. The letter was referred to Secretary Young, for correspondence with the Keller Company.

Secretary Young then read the report of the committee on memorial resolutions to deceased members, Michael Barker, chairman, and on motion of Mr. Barker, the same was adopted by rising vote and with bowed heads. Secretary Young called attention to the movement that has been set on foot in Buffalo to erect a suitable monument to the late William F. Kasting, and stated that contributions for this purpose could be forwarded to William J. Palmer, 302 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y., who is acting as treasurer of the committee. It has already raised $1,200, and desires to raise $300 more.

Secretary Young called attention to the gratifying character of the trade exhibition at this convention, which had been one of the most successful in the history of the society, and only second to that large exhibition held in Chicago. There were 85 exhibitors in different lines, and $5,300 worth of floor space was sold.

Paul R. Klingsporn, Chicago.
Director-Elect Society of American Florists.

President Ammann read a letter from Past-President Theodore Wirth, regretting his inability to be present and participate in the discussion of Quarantine Order No. 37.

Professor L. C. Corbett, of the bureau of plant industry, United States department of agriculture, was unable to be present, but was represented by F. L. Mulford, landscape gardener of the same bureau, who stated, that if desired, he would read the paper entitled "Opportunity of the Society of American Florists in Present Day Plant Propagation," but that as the hour was now quite late, he believed Professor Corbett would be satisfied not to have the paper read at this time, provided that he could have the assurance that the matters contained in the paper would receive attention by the executive board of the society. On motion of H. B. Dorner, the paper was received and made part of the record, and the recommendations therein referred to the executive board, with power to act.

The committee on final resolutions, through its chairman, W. W. Gammage, presented its report. On motion of Mr. Gammage, the report was adopted as read, and made part of the record. Mr. Gammage, referring to the fact that all florists are now preaching publicity, and "Say it With Flowers," moved that flowers be sent to each of those whose names were enumerated in the final resolutions as a further evidence of the appreciation of the convention, the cost of same to be paid out of the funds of the society. The motion carried, and the secretary authorized to put same into effect.

On motion of President-elect Miller, a vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. R. E. Darbee, of San Francisco, for the beautiful floral remembrance which she had placed on the president's table, and which President Ammann commented on, it having kept in such excellent condition.

On motion of President-elect Miller, a vote of thanks was unanimously adopted to the retiring president for faithful and efficient discharge of his administrative duties and conduct of the proceedings of this meeting. The above motion was put by Past-President R. C. Kerr. Retiring President Ammann thanked the convention, and assured them that the pleasure was all his and would long be remembered by him.

No further business offering at this time, on motion, the convention now adjourned without day.

Committee on Final Resolutions.

Your committee on final resolutions has the honor to submit its report, as follows:

We recommend for your unanimous adoption by rising vote the following resolutions of thanks:

Whereas, the society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists has now been assembled for three days in its thirty-fifth annual convention in the delightful city of Detroit, and being now about to depart for our several homes and carry back to our friends there word of the magnificent welcome and hospitality we have here enjoyed, such of us as are guests and visitors here, desire to take this opportunity at the close of this most successful meeting to properly acknowledge our indebtedness to all who have contributed to our happiness, comfort and enjoyment, and while the list is a long one, its length testifies to the elaborateness of the preparations made, and we can testify to the thoroughness with which every detail has been carried out, therefore be it

Resolved, that we hereby tender out of full hearts our thanks and appreciation to the following:

To the Rev. J. M. Barkley, for his eloquent opening prayer.

To Hon. Thos. P. Penniman, city counsellor, who welcomed us officially to Detroit as the mayor's representative.

To F. C. W. Brown, of Cleveland, O., for his able address on "Selling Flowers by Telegraph."

To Major P. F. O'Keefe, of Boston, for his illuminating and helpful address on "Publicity," the topic of the hour, which is most interesting and valuable to us as individuals, and as a craft.

To Dr. C. R. Marlatt, of the federal horticultural board, of Washington, D. C., for his courtesy in accepting our invitation to address us on a topic of vital importance.

To Prof. L. C. Corbett, bureau of plant industry, United States department of agriculture, for his splendid paper on "The Opportunity of the Society of American Florists in Present Day Plant Propagation."

To the management of the Hotel Statler, for special courtesies and concessions in making reservations for us in preference to their regular patronage.

To H. L. Woods, proprietor of the Arcadia auditorium.

To the Detroit Golf Club for hospitalities and courtesies.

To Joseph Streit, who was in charge of the bowling arrangements that are such a feature of our meetings always.

To the Detroit & Windsor Ferry Company, on whose elegant boat, the charming moonlight excursion was enjoyed Wednesday night.

To the Detroit News, for invitation to visit their plant, one of the largest printing establishments in the world.

To the Towar Creamery Company of Detroit.

To the American Gladiolus Society, for its exhibition, which attracted deserved attention.

To the City Press Association, through whose good offices we were given valuable space in the Detroit newspapers.

To our own trade press for reports of our meetings that will appear in their valuable mediums.

To the management of the Ford plant, for invitation to their immense and world known works.

To the Detroit Florists' Club, and the many untiring and efficient committees, working under the appointment and direction of their president, J. F. Sullivan, whose many good offices would bring such blushes to their cheeks if we enumerated them all, that we spare their embarrassment by only at this time making specific mention of the brilliant reception to our president and executive officers on Tuesday evening at the Hotel Statler, and the boat ride, which was so largely attended.

To the ladies' auxiliary of the Detroit Florists' Club for their overwhelming kindnesses and many courtesies to our ladies, who will long remember them with pleasure, this including the theater party at the Temple theatre and the ladies' luncheon.

To the Detroit Rotary Club, for entertaining at luncheon those of our membership who are Rotarians, and, finally,

To the many firms who joined in the magnificent trade exhibit, which it was an education to our members to inspect and enjoy.

We shall leave the beautiful city of Detroit with regret and carry home with us memories as fragrant as the flowers that adorn its parks and public places. Truly, in Detroit they "Say it With Flowers."

J. GAMMAGE Chairman.

Report of Judges on Trade Exhibition.

NEW PLANT VARIETIES AND NOVELTIES.

We, the judges to report on novelties and new varieties in plants, beg leave to make the subjoined report and suggest to the board of directors the following awards:

Honorable mention to C. U. Liggit, Philadelphia, Pa., for Macawii fern, a sport of Scottii, a fast grower, more compact and as good a keeper as Scottii. Stock is not being disseminated.

Cultural certificate to George Wittbold Co., Chicago, for extra well grown cyclamens.

Cultural certificate to the C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis., for a fine display of aucubas.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., are highly commended for their excellent collection of fine palms and highly colored crotons.

Honorable mention to W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., for Juniperus Mandianum, Dracæna Longii and Dahlia Mandiana.

Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa., highly commended for a remarkably clean collection of palms.

Honorable mention to the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., for foliage plants and evergreens.

Special stress is laid on the new fern, Victory, of F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., a sport of Teddy, Jr., with a rapid growth and a branching at end of fronds, making it a shapely plant that should be a commercial success, and we recommend it most highly—a bronze medal; also that honorable mention be given for the display of Tarrytown and Moss ferns.

H. P. Knoble, Cleveland, O.
Director-Elect Society of American Florists.

A certificate of merit to Max Schling, New York, for three most beautiful, artistic steamer baskets.

The Greening Nurseries, Monroe, Mich., are highly commended for display of evergreens.

Honorable mention to Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, Pa., for a beautiful display of foliage plants.

Honorable mention to Jackson & Perkins, Newark, N. Y., for lilacs.

Honorable mention to John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y., for new gladiolus, White Americus.

A. L. MILLER, Chairman.
IRWIN BERTERMANN.
CHARLES H. GRAKELOW.

FLOOR SUPPLIES SECTION.

We, the following judges, appointed by you to pass on the exhibits at the convention in session in Detroit, respectively submit the following report:

That a certificate of merit be awarded to the A. L. Randall Company, Chicago, because of the care and attention and diversified quality of the exhibit made.

That a certificate of merit be awarded to Poehlmann Bros. Company, Chicago, because of the unique arrangement and artistic care displayed and the diversified material shown.

That honorable mention be awarded to Wertheimer Bros., New York, because of the wide range of ribbon materials and pleasing manner of exhibiting same.

That the following firms be highly commended for complete display of florists' materials in their various lines; Burlington Willow Ware Company, Burlington, Ia.; Cohen & Hiller, New York; M. Rice Company, Philadelphia, Pa.; Ove Gnatt Company, La Porte, Ind.; Pittsburgh Cut Flower Company, Pittsburgh, Pa.; George B. Hart, Rochester, N. Y.; Jos. G. Neidinger Company and S. S. Pennock Company, Philadelphia; R. E. Gebhardt Company, Chicago, and C. S. Ford, Philadelphia.

That special mention is made of the exhibit and material of the Bergmann-Koropp Company, Chicago.

Particular attention of your judges was drawn to the very clever and serviceable novelties displayed by the exhibitors. We feel that to enumerate the articles might be an injustice, for, owing to the great variety, we might overlook some of the important introductions. We believe that greater initiative was displayed in the creation of new ideas at this convention than at any previous meeting of the society.

R. C. KERR, Chairman.

OTHER JUDGES' REPORTS.

Reports of other judging committees have failed to reach us up to time of going to press.

Publicity.

Address of P. F. O'Keefe, Boston, Mass., at the convention of the Society of American Florists. Detroit, Mich., August 19-21, 1919.

I think next to my love of advertising problems, I love flowers best. From my office window, I get a fragrant breeze that blows across from the famous Boston public gardens, over Boston Common and busy Tremont street. It shakes the geraniums and other flowers that I have as companions during my working hours on the little stretch of roof which a thoughtful architect provided in the offices we occupy nine stories above the street for a roof garden. These flowers help me, and I like to think that the breeze that comes to me through the window, has just left the flowers in our public garden, a garden set in the center of our business section, which Boston will ever retain in its very heart of hearts to "Say it with flowers." Am I sentimental? I do not think my friends would say so, and yet is there a man living who can truthfully say that flowers have no influence upon him?

"Flowers make a brighter business day." You remember this slogan we carried in our advertising that appeared in color last spring in the magazines. Every man who saw that advertisement was reminded in it of a truth he knew to be so. How many have acted upon it? How many business men have done what we told them would make the tedium of toil less tiresome? I know there have been a great many who acted directly upon our suggestion to put flowers, either cut flowers or growing plants, upon their desks, but the value was in the influence of that advertisement, and of the others—taking roses home to the wife, remembering the birthdays, the anniversaries of our friends. This influence has taken root and prompted some sort of action to our advantage and theirs.

TO MAKE PEOPLE THINK.

If you make people think, if you touch a responsive chord; you may not possibly always get them to act immediately just as you directed, but you will get them to act. For instance, a man reads an alluring automobile advertisement. He is reminded of the delights of motoring by the picture surrounding the car, of rolling country with beach or country club or mansion not too far away, of prosperous, happy people in and about the car, and he says to himself: "Everybody's motoring nowadays—I'm only living once—why not live right? I'm going to get an automobile." He may not buy that identical car, but he will buy a car. All the automobile advertising that is creating a demand for the better things of life, is helping every manufacturer of automobiles whose product is made known to the public. Now when we advertise flowers, we have no competition like the automobile manufacturer. When we tell people how one of the country's greatest executives has always a vase of flowers upon his desk, because they make a brighter business day—he says they keep him from being lonely—we do not expect every other business man to immediately do likewise. We make people think of flowers in a new way. We know they will not read our advertisement and run out, and instead of "Saying it with flowers," say it with a toy balloon, a brass band, a marble statue or a hat rack. We have brought their minds to a point where they will remember to act on their finer feelings, to give them a regard for the finer things of life, and if it is not flowers for themselves they buy, it is flowers for someone they want to know they are thinking about.

HOW ADVERTISING WORKS.

The man who decided after reading the automobile advertisement, that he would be a car owner, did not, we can safely say, go right out and buy a car. No, that advertisement only started him. The next day he changed his mind. The day after, he was sure he couldn't afford it, and for several successive days, he thought nothing more about it. Then he saw another automobile advertisement, and forgot everything else to go back to the place he had left off. He surely wanted that car. From wanting it, he grew after reading more and more automobile advertisements, to feel that he couldn't live without it, so in time, he bought one.

That is the way all advertising works. For those who have the means to gratify every wish, it needs but little advertising to make them act, or where the desire can be gratified without much financial outlay, it can be counted on working fast. But, in the case of those who can gratify every wish because of financial resources, they probably have no need of what you have to offer, and in the case of small articles, where the money consideration is small, you must sell in tremendous quantities to make your business pay and so keep on advertising to broaden your field. Then too, where the money consideration is small, you must remember the service that small articles gives is also small, and can be dispensed with without much sacrifice, and so we must keep building by our advertising more and more desire for the goods we have to sell.

ADVERTISING FLOWERS.

Flowers come under the head of articles requiring comparatively small outlay. We must therefore keep our advertising going. To popularize anything, it requires persistent and insistent reiteration, not repetition of the same thought expressed in different ways, but nationalizing a thought by continuous advertising.

We are popularizing very rapidly indeed our slogan, "Say it with Flowers." It is fast becoming one of our national sayings, a national institution, and is today without question, an asset which you gentlemen possess that is worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. It is an asset which, unlike any other that I can think of, has the practical ability of being divisible among a lot of business men scattered over our entire country. The example which it sets is one that, once cultivated, grows from one person to another in each community, and from one community to another. Those who read see it from the pages of their favorite magazine; those who travel, see that not only has this slogan been acted upon in their community, but in the other communities they pass through, and is not the business pulling vehicle of one man, but of thousands. It is on the florists' delivery automobiles, and it is in the newspapers.

Geo. Wienhoeber, Chicago.
Who Joined the F. T. D. at Detroit.

MORE ADVERTISING NEEDED.

But—yes there is always a but—but, we have been too lenient with our ammunition. Our aim has been excellent and results good, but our shots too small and far between to really get a good rich reward. Remember, that while it is true that in our field, we are without competition, we have not, like the automobile people, hundreds of others working on the sentiments of people to stir them to action and buy flowers. That is up to us to do.

I do not, however, want you to think that we have not even in the short time we have been conducting our national publicity campaign, attracted some outside help. We have. And it has been of much assistance. We have brought about a use for flowers in pictures. You must have noticed among the magazines you read, the tendency of artists to introduce flowers into their "copy" magazine covers, advertising displays and illustrations for fiction. All this has helped.

President Wilson advised flowers for the proper celebration of our national glorification of peace day. The mayor of Baltimore, in a public proclamation, has taken up the thought, and it rests with the florist in each community to do his part to keep this praiseworthy movement going. But we will be expected to supply more and more material to this growing demand for more news about flowers, more ways to "Say it with Flowers."

COST OF A NATIONAL CAMPAIGN.

We should go with a few words of greeting to every family in the United States every little while. Perhaps you may think this would require a fortune. What does it cost to advertise? It costs really less to advertise nationally than you gentlemen pay individually in your own community, that is, per capita. The cost of successful advertising on a national scale is not large. For instance, if you were to spend one cent per family per year for advertising, your expenditure for the year would be about $220,000. The average total expenditure for advertising space in 56 leading magazines, is less than one quarter of this sum. In other words, the average national advertiser buys less than $50,000 worth of space per year, or less than one quarter of a cent per family in the United States. The larger user of space spends a million a year in national publications, five cents per family, or one cent per person in that family. How does he get it back? He does a business of about $120,000,000 per year, or on a scale of $5 per family, one dollar per person; $50,000 worth of space per year, therefore, represents the average of all the advertising, taking the smallest and the largest advertisers, the adequate and the inadequate, and altogether it makes quite a striking average. In our advertising, we select such mediums as we know will reach the family from whom, due to their environment and resources, we can expect a response.

BULK OF OPINION.

But while we are speaking of response from advertising, remember it is the bulk of opinion that really attains the results. Everybody cannot afford a Packard or a Pierce Arrow car, but the masses do their share in building up prestige for these cars by what they think of them. John Jones, when he can afford a Pierce Arrow, buys one because he knows the masses will pay tribute to his standing and his judgment when he rides in it. He feels that they know he has "the goods," to use a slang expression.

AN INTERNATIONAL MEDIUM.

When your line is established in the life and language of the people, which means all classes—everybody—you have added one more international medium of exchange. Any one of us, indiviually, would have the greatest difficulty in making our wants known or ourselves understood, but due to advertisements, Mary Pickford, Gillette Safety razor or Bull Durham, all speak the same language in any dialect, in any country, and even to those who do not read or write. We can and intend to make our slogan, "Say it with Flowers." as well established and embedded in the language of the people, as is Victrola, Kodak or Ivory Soap.

POWER OF ADVERTISING.

Advertising is the greatest force for good that we possess. America is known abroad as the land of the advertisement. It is too bad for those who live abroad, that advertising in the way we, in this country, have grown to depend upon it, did not exist there. Had it, the world war would not have happened. The horrors and futility of it could have been flashed too quickly in the public prints had they been as free as ours, and so spread from mouth to mouth, and from mind to mind, and stopped the war before it began. We are taught here to get our impressions from the printed page. That is why we will never here have a Bolshevik Russia. Only where life has been not quite thoroughly Americanized, will we see trouble such as Chicago experienced in its race riots. By thoroughly Americanized, I mean brought under the influence and guidance of men who conduct our newspapers, our magazines, our advertising, our big manufacturing and commercial developments. It is a chain interwoven for the mutual protection and mutual advancement of all. Without our manufacturers, who are our advertisers of one sort or another, our newspapers and magazines could not exist, and without the guidance for bringing into being and crystallizing the best public thought, which is the true function of our newspapers and magazines, we would now be wondering a little what the future might not hold for us of troubles to be more than dreaded. Advertising is truth, whether it be in the display of the goods you sell, or of the merits or demerits of a people. It is the mirror of ourselves, our business, our ambitions, our aspirations, our faults.

TRUTHFUL ADVERTISING.

Each year, advertising becomes more believable and advertisers get a little older. Most lies are told by children, not with the intent to deceive, but inspired by the alluring necessity—for securing emphasis. The new advertiser wants to attract attention in a babel of voices all demanding a hearing. So he shouts and screams and bellows with best of intention and with little result He means no harm, but just wants to be heard and does not realize that his voice is cracking. As he grows older, he learns that red after all has only 60 per cent of the strength of black, and that to be believed is more than just to be heard. As advertising grows, it grows milder and stronger.

A GOOD ADVERTISEMENT.

What then is a good advertisement? Should we make it brief and to the point? Most people will tell you so, and most people believe they know all about how good advertisements should be written. Or should it tell all in one letter? as the classified boys put it. "People haven't time to read—make the ad short and snappy," is what nearly everyone will say. Mail order houses that receive direct orders in answer to their advertisements, know what pays, and what does not, what people read and what they do not read. And yet, strangely enough, all mail order advertisements are often very long. There was one sucesssful advertisement that proved very profitable that had 2,200 words in it. People must therefore read long ads, or these many worded ads would not pay. On the other hand, Cream of Wheat advertisements often have no text at all—just a picture. With no other means of sales promotion, a great business has been created by this pretty picture advertising alone. Another great business uses pictures that are not pretty ones, and quite subservient to the text, and makes a tremendous success from that form of advertising.

It does not, after all, matter very much, you see, just how you convey your ideas to the public. The public does not stop to worry over sentences. It stops, it looks, it listens, and goes on its way. They've got your meaning, no matter how you tell it to them, but they judge you according to your own standard. Are you sincere, do you mean it? If you are, if you do, the public knows and acts as you want them to. I have seen advertisements written and changed and re-written, pictures made and remade and made again, and in the end after all the revisions, after all had stirred the broth, the original and first advertisement was selected because it was the only one that told the story convincingly.

Mrs. Albert M. Herr.
Sec'y-Elect Ladies' Society of American Florists.

Those who contribute to this campaign the most, will by the very nature of all rewards, reap the greatest harvest from it. The automobile manufacturer who does not advertise, may be said to get some benefit from the advertising of those who boost the game along, but if you look to see who are really making the fortunes, who are reaping the biggest rewards, you will find it is the manufacturers who contribute the most in investment in advertising. Every cent that any member of the S. A. F., has contributed has been invested to return to him 10 and 100 fold. Those who have not contributed, will in the end, by the very nature of things, get less than nothing from it. They will be as those on the outside looking in, learning to the full the meaning of those words. "Alas, now it is too late."

MERCHANDISING ADVERTISING.

Giving merchandising ideas to florists would be easy. It is as easy as giving a mother reasons why she should be careful of her children's health. Reasons why she should buy a certain kind of stocking for her children to wear. You do not need to tell her. I do not need to tell you my ideas on merchandising. And mother knows more in a minute what she wants for her children than I or any other would know in a year. I can only tell what kind of a stocking I have to advertise. She will judge whether she wants it after I have told her about it. I cannot tell her what she ought to have. She knows. And so, with you gentlemen. You know more in a minute about your own particular individual business of selling flowers, and plants, than any outsider can know. I am only for the purpose of interpreting your business to the public, of telling them what flowers will do for them for a finer, sweeter life, and I leave the inner workings of your own business to be discussed among you, and I offer only to aid with what suggestions you ask me for, when your own ideas have been set forth.

FUTURE PROSPECTS.

I am optimistic for the future. We are already able to see light ahead. It is an encouraging sign that business is calmly adjusting itself, both for its work in this country and abroad. The nation which brought a world war to a crashing, final finish, is not to be discouraged by the task of getting back to its normal peace time pursuits. In spite of high prices, or of uncertainty as to this or that aspect of the labor situation, the future, as I see it, is full of promise. Should there be anyone here who has any misgivings, I would suggest that he run over in his mind a side of the business aspect he may have overlooked. Just bear in mind that the value of our farm production this year amounts to $25,000,000,000. That figure represents the buying power of American farmers for the coming year. For the year ending last June, our foreign trade totalled $10,000,000,000. One half of the manufactures entering into international trade last year were the product of the shops and factories of the United States.

PEOPLE PURCHASING FREELY.

A survey of the country finds people of all classes purchasing freely. One of the best signs of the underlying confidence among business men is to be seen in the number of industrial plants throughout the country that are making large additions to their equipment and otherwise planning for expansion. For the past three months, business men have been going ahead with increasing confidence. In textile, leather, automobile, and other lines, demand already exceeds supply. The starting of new enterprises, furnishes additional evidence that the country is rapidly getting into its right stride. The first four months of this year saw the new capital issues of approximately $2,500,000,000. Nor is this increasing activity confined to bare necessities. The public is buying as never before.

NO CAUSE FOR PESSIMISM.

We will have little cause for pessimism when we fully appreciate how enormous has been the development of our national power. Our manufacturing capacity has been vastly increased and improved by the war. We have built up a great merchant marine. New industries have come into existence and have been solidly established. We hold the greatest accumulation of gold in the world's history. With that as a basis, our reserve banking system is equipped to handle our vast credit problem. Behind all that, is our vast wealth of natural resources which enable us to produce over 60 per cent of the world supply of cotton, copper, oil, coal, corn and practicly one half the world's iron, zinc, lead and other metals.

We hear much of the perilous job of financing Europe from people who do not know that that task is being cared for now. Within the past few months, upwards of $300,000,000 has been supplied France, Belgium and other countries by banking syndicates, while another $100,000,000 has been supplied by American industrial firms. Most of this money is being spent here in the United States for goods and merchandise. Pittsburgh, Chicago and New York firms joined in a single contract for the rebuilding of the French industrial city of Nancy, amounting to $250,000,000, with a prospect that half a billion might be needed. If we look round carefully, we see neither reason for fear at our own future, nor any doubt as to our ability to aid Europe with her problems.

HIGH WAGES DEVELOP DESIRES.

One of the most encouraging features of the present business situation, is the free buying on the part of the people, as a whole, of so called luxuries. The high wages during the last year of the war have developed desires among the masses for the best of everything. Articles, previously regarded as too costly for consideration, are now sought and paid for without protest. This new spirit suggests opportunity for the florists of America. It opens up immense possibilities for adding new thousands to the growing number who are learning to "Say it with Flowers" on every occasion.

Reference to opportunities, brings to my mind a subject which is now recognized as a highly essential part of every programme for business expansion, whether the business be the making of pins or the raising or selling of flowers. I believe that closer co-operation and a greater use should be made of our promotion bureau, which acts as a clearing house for ideas in the florists' trade; where all new schemes for promoting the sale of flowers are collected for the benefit of all the members of the society. In a number of cities throughout the country, there are well organized movements for encouraging the use of flowers as window decorations at home and even in office buildings and factories. In others, there exist co-operative schemes for the use of flowers as window decoration by shoe stores and department stores. I cite these as suggestions which might be fully developed through the efforts of the society. As I have already said, I believe the coming year will be one of exceptional prosperity. Prophets of evil we will have with us. You will continue to hear a grumbler here and there predict the early tolling of the funeral knell for business, and a cheerful idiot recognizing the future only as a tinkle of bells.

Publicity Finance Committee Report.

It is my opinion that there has been no work taken up by the national organization that has meant so much to every person engaged in our industry, and that the campaign, as inaugurated by the society in New York two years ago, has brought results far beyond our fondest expectations. To those of us who have had in charge the financing of this wonderful project, it has seemed, from the results obtained the first year, that we ought to have easily doubled our first year's quota of $40,000 by this time. Over half of the year has passed, and we have about $47,000 in subscriptions to date. If contributions in the same proportion continue until the end of the year, it is possible we may reach the $75,000 mark. This might indeed seem a large amount, but when the results obtained are considered, and in some instances the profits of one firm have increased that much and more in one year, it seems in the light of a business proposition, that instead of being solicited, the shrewd business man should readily see that publicity is one of his greatest assets, and not only be a big subscriber, but a help to our committee in securing subscriptions from others. It has been a very difficult and an uphill task to get together the fund we now have. It is true that we have had wonderful support from the officers of the society, and also from some of the business men throughout the country. It is not to these few that I am alluding, but to the great majority. If some one was to come along and show the average grower a device where he could save 10 per cent on his coal bills, he would be ready to invest thousands of dollars, but the results obtained through the national publicity campaign can show results that are not only savings, but earnings of a great many times this amount, and yet, where are the business men of our profession when it comes to supporting their own advertising campaign?

There are a number of other industries who have closely watched our campaign, and are so satisfied with the results obtained, that they are closely copying our methods in all but one thing, and that is, their insight to realize what such a campaign means to their trade by starting out with sums ranging from double to three times the amount of money we spend. The average subscriber to the fund has had to be approached, not only through our mail campaign, but by paid solicitors. This is indeed a deplorable condition when the results obtained are considered.

BEST TRADE SLOGAN IN THE COUNTRY.

Chairman Penn and his committee are to be congratulated on having contracted with the P. F. O'Keefe Agency. It was Major O'Keefe, of this agency, who recommended our slogan, "Say it with Flowers," which is conceded to be by the brightest advertising men in the country, the best trade slogan ever known by any commercial industry, and which is rapidly becoming a "byword" to the people of the United States and Canada, and I may also add, that they are using it in Europe. I was very much impressed to find that several customers at our retail stores, when inclosing a card with flowers, had used our slogan as one of the best expressions they could think of in connection with the gift. All of this was obtained with the expenditure of about $60,000. The enormous amount of publicity matter that is appearing in the magazines, shows that the advertising brains of this country are unanimous in their opinion that this medium ranks first. Evidently the magazines are realizing this, as the rates in most publications have advanced from 50 to 100 per cent. This is another reason that there will have to be more money raised, if we wish to have the prosperous conditions the trade is now in, continued.

ALL BRANCHES OF TRADE BENEFITTED.

A year or more ago very few men in our profession thought that there would be any building of greenhouses for some time to come, and yet the greenhouse builders are extremely busy and behind with their work. Considering the high cost of material, this is evidence for itself of the success of the campaign. There is no branch of the industry that has not shared in the prosperity, and when statistics show us that the amount spent for flowers per year for each individual in the United States is only 57 cents, it can easily be seen what the possibilities are. It perhaps will be interesting to know in what proportion each branch of the trade has subscribed, and while the figures I now give you may vary a trifle, they are very nearly accurate.

	Amount	No. of subscribers
Wholesale florists	$ 4,814.00	66
Nurserymen	450.00	5
Greenhouse builders	500 00	5
Seedsmen	550.00	16
Dealers in florists' supplies	1,485.00	25
Retail florists	17,968.00	1,220
Growers	9,811.00	470
	$35.578.00	1,807
F. T. D.	$1,500.00
Clubs, societies & organizations	600.00	2,100.00
Total		$37.678.00

CUMULATIVE RETURNS WILL BE LARGE.

There is an ironclad rule, that the space in the magazines must be contracted for three months before the date of circulation. The committee has been hampered very much by not being able to make definite appropriation, and has lost out on some of the best publications, and the choice of space, for this reason. I point this out to the people who have subscribed for one year only. I hope in the near future, that we will have contracts with subscribers for four year periods, and that the total amount will be at least $100,000.

The results obtained in the coming few years, undoubtedly will be much greater, for it must be remembered that the great agitation for publicity has aroused the country so that florists in all communities are banding together and organizing to carry on a local campaign that will tie up with the national. Also wonderful work is being done by the promotion bureau with its sale of dealers' helps, and articles they have been successful in getting into the papers throughout the counry have been of enormous aid. Secretary Young has had to bear the burden of this additional work. He has accomplished much that is truly wonderful, and saved the subscribers thousands of dollars. I wonder if the business men in our profession have ever stopped to consider that the solicitation of the fund by mail and otherwise, has cost them quite a few thousands of dollars, when this money might have been spent for advertising space. Articles have appeared weekly in the trade papers pointing out the fact, and yet despite all, the responses have in no way been in proportion to the results expected.

EQUITABLE PROPORTION PLAN.

I wish to point out here a plan of procedure, that if adopted where possible, might help solve the problem of an equitable plan of assessment, and whereby everybody would pay his correct proportion and allow for 75 per cent of the money so collected being used in the local community, evolved through the hard and earnest effort of President Ammann. The St. Louis florists have adopted the following plan: 'To charge every retailer purchasing flowers at commission houses, for advertising. That is, if the retail florist purchased $25 worth of flowers, he would be charged 25 cents for advertising; the grower to be assessed one-half of the one per cent as his share. The commission house, as their share, are to be collectors and distributors to an advertising committee, who have in charge the matter of properly using it for advertising purposes. Twenty-five per cent of this fund is to go to the national publicity campaign. The balance to be used locally. This method has also been used in Milwaukee, Wis., where the results were so great, and the increase in the business so noticeable, that the amount assessed was doubled, the only difference being, that they have not as yet decided to give twenty-five per cent to the national fund. Thus everybody pays exactly alike, and in proportion to the amount of business done, and it is surprising with ever so small an assessment, the amount obtained runs into thousands of dollars.

One per cent of what the retailer buys in cut flowers, really amounts to one-third of the one per cent of his total business. In other words, he secures an extraordinary amount of publication for the sale of flowers, and as figured out by the leading retail florists of this country, from three per cent to five per cent of his gross business is the amount he should spend for advertising. If this is so, he still has about 90 cents left out of every dollar he ordinarily spends for advertising. Does it not show to him clearly that he is securing any number of times more publication and saving for himself a great lot of money?

The grower is affected in the demand for flowers, keeping up the prices to a much higher level, therefore, his half of the one per cent is hardly noticeable when the difference in his receipts are considered. Such a campaign, conducted locally, could take care of any glut season and save the grower considerable money.

RECOMMENDATION TO ABOLISH COMMITTEE.

I am now going into discussion as to the future conduct of the affairs of those who have in charge this important work. Those of you who are familiar will remember that through a recommendation of ex-President Patrick Welch, the national publicity committee was originated, to be composed of five members, one to be retired each year, the incoming president to appoint his successor. Their duties were to have in charge all matters pertaining to publicity. At this time, the national publicity campaign was but a thought, and it was only after a wonderful paper read by W. F. Therkildson on "Publicity" at the New York convention, and the recommendation that came from him, who was then chairman of this permanent committee, that the convention voted unanimously to approve of his recommendation. And, then and there, the project was launched. After further discussion, Chairman Therkildson suggested that a special committee be appointed to have in charge the raising of money to finance the campaign. After a debate, a motion was passed that a committee of five be appointed to have in charge the financial end of the campaign. Since then the committee, of which I am chairman, has acted on all appropriations, superintending the collections of funds, etc.

The wise selection of the O'Keefe Agency, has left very little for the publicity committee to do. Major O'Keefe, and his associates, with the assistance of Chairman Penn, have demonstrated that they are entirely efficient to prepare very good copy and sketches that go to make the advertising effective. His suggestions to the committee have proved conclusively that he has wonderful ability in placing money where it will do the greatest good. At the last joint meeting of both of our committees, held in Cincinnati, it was decided that the railroad traveling expense of the two committees, was a very large item, and I suggested that the publicity finance committee, of which I am chairman, be abolished. After considerable discussion, President Ammann, who presides at these committee meetings, secured an expression from all of the members present, and it was the unanimous opinion that one committee should handle the entire detail, working on similar lines as the national flower show committee. One man retiring each year, means that there will always be on the board, men of from four to five years' experience in the handling of the campaign. Each member of the committee could be delegated with a certain department to take care of. You are all aware that the principal work must be done by the secretary and his office force, and suitable appropriations must be made to establish a methodical and systematic method of procedure. If there were only five members to be considered in calling a session of this important committee, they could have a meeting more often, and of course, results obtained would be better. And at the conclusion of my report, I am going to offer to the committee a resolution that will make this effective at the end of this year. I point out to you the danger of having an appointive committee, whose term expires each year, in charge of such an important work. The feasibility of this action will appeal to all.

POSSIBILITIES IN BILLBOARDS.

At a recent joint meeting of the various trade interests in Chicago, the Wholesale Growers Association of Cook County proposed a billboard campaign, having in view the easy matter of obtaining sites for the erection of billboards, with nothing but our slogan, "Say it with Flowers," through the country. They offered to erect boards at their own expense. There are any quantity of locations where greenhouse plants are, and where the railroads pass and automobile traffic is heavy, and you can imagine what an increase in publicity could be gained by the thousands of billboards all over the country with our wonderful slogan, "Say it with Flowers." I am about to have an interview with one of the largest billboard agencies in the country, and perhaps may have something further to say on the method and cost later.

FINANCES.

The following is the brief summary in total of the financial conditions of the campaign up to August 1.

Total amount of fund	$ 42,068.50
Of this amount has been collected	35,518.75
Balance due and unpaid	6,549.75
Cost of magazine advertising to date	24,933.24
Drawings, plates, etc.	2,187.81
	$111,258.05

SUBSCRIPTION BY STATES.

Secretary Young's report, as a member of our committee and in charge of detail, will be more comprehensive to you. His report will give in detail the expense and work of the promotion bureau. It may be interesting to the convention to know the amounts subscribed by each state, which are as follows:

Illinois	$ 5,887.50
New York	55,607.50
Pennsylvania	5,055.00
Ohio	3,347.00
Michigan	3,182.00
Masssachusetts	2,651.00
Misssouri	2,045.50
New Jersey	1,808.00
Wisconsin	1,377.00
Connecticut	1,219.00
Indiana	1,022 50
Texas	892.00
California	878.50
Iowa	633.00
Minnesota	540.00
Maryland	511.50
Colorado	446.00
Washington, D. C.	405.00
Kentucky	356.50
Rhode Island	338.00
North Carolina	236.00
Canada	215.00
Utah	168.00
Oklahoma	127.50
Virginia	125.00
Louisiana	200.00
Maine	100.00
New Hampshire	95.00
Georgia	92.00
North Dakota	80.00
South Carolina	77.50
Kansas	68 50
South Dakota	60.00
Florida	55.00
Vermont	28.00
Idaho	20.00

It must be borne in mind that the principal work has been accomplished by our committee, as 90 per cent of the $47,000 now subscribed is for four years, and as I said before, if the present ratio of the subscriptions is kept up on a four year basis, there ought to be at least $65,000 for the publicity committee to start with on the first of next January.

I wish to say for the members of both committees, that they have responded to every call, and have given me every assistance possible, and to them you owe a debt of gratitude for this service. I know that I speak thoughts of all of the members of our committee, when I say we all feel gratified in knowing we have not labored in vain, and feel happy to think that we have been part of this great movement, which has done so much to bring prosperity to the florist business.

RESOLUTION TO ABOLISH COMMITTEE.

Following is the resolution referred to in my message, that will abolish the finance publicity committee, and put all the work into the hands of the publicity committee as originally intended:

"It is hereby resolved that the committee known as the finance publicity committee be abolished December 31, 1919, and that the work of financing and appropriating moneys to take care of the national publicity campaign be added to the duties of the national publicity committee."

GEORGE ASMUS, Chairman.
W. R. PIERSON.
F. L. ATKINS.
HERMAN P. KNOBLE.
JOHN YOUNG.

Publicity Committee Report.

There is greater need today than ever for the florists generally to continue the national advertising campaign and to further the uses of our slogan, "Say it with Flowers," so that whenever the public have something particular to give or do, they will unconsciously think of flowers. The keeping of our slogan always before them will, in time, generate this idea, so that it will be dominant and imbedded in the thoughts of people as never before. We have always had the finest product that nature can bestow, yet we fail to take advantage of the most important function needed to stimulate the greater use for more flowers, and advertising is the needed force.

When we consider the fact that for so many years prior to our taking up this campaign, we managed to get along so well what may we expect when all the florists tie up to this campaign, using their advertisements in their own localities? It will be a growth beyond imagination.

Just note how Uncle Sam is sending out his message through the United States department of labor. Here is his message:

"If you are not advertising, then advertise because it saves money for you and it reduces the price to the consumer.

"Advertising prevents profiteering. It insures honest profits and makes them permanent.

"The message of the United States department of labor to merchants and manufacturers, and to all progressive American business men, is to advertise.

"Tell the public about your goods. The consumer has plenty of money. He is willing to spend it, and we want him to spend it on American-made products. The easiest, quickest and most economical way in which this can be accomplished is by advertising.

"Start your campaign right now."

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR,
W. B. Wilson, Secretary.

Need we have better evidence of its worth?

Granting the fact that we have also started a national campaign, and as chairman of the publicity committee, in surveying our past work, I note the florists have not awakened to the possibilities, else we would have had our $100,000 oversubscribed by now. But probably the balance will be forthcoming soon so that our plans may be carried out to a 100 per cent result.

We should be very proud that our campaign started when it did, and that so many other trade organizations are now emulating the example of the S. A. F. to such a degree that we are constantly called upon to give data, etc., about this campaign of ours. When we have been using publicity long enough, the effect will be so general that its continuity will be assured for all time, and behind it will come the movement necessary, that is, of retailers using more space to extol the merits of flowers, so that the sale will be greater and broader.

During the months of January and February, 1919, we appropriated $5,000 for advertising, because no money seemed to be in sight at the time, and your finance committee did not want to obligate the society beyond the amount of money on hand.

The work that we did with this $5,000 during those months was the most amazing advertising that I have ever known of, and I have been studying and spending money for advertising for a number of years.

Consider for one moment, if you will, that with this $5,000 we reached over 20,000,000 people in this country, impressing upon them our wonderful slogan, "Say it with Flowers." When you consider that very few national magazines are confined to one reader, you will understand what a magnificent investment this $5,000 proved to be.

The following is a list of publications that we used during January and February, together with their circulations:

The next meeting of the publicity committee and finance committee was held at Cleveland early in the year, and an appropriation of $26,000 was made for large advertising in the following national magazines:

Literary Digest	One page	March 22
Outlook	200 lines	March 29
Red Book	200 lines	April
Collier's	½ page	April 19
Hearst's	200 lines	April

Collier's	½ page	May 31
Literary Digest	Two columns	May 17
Metropolitan	Full page colors	June
American Magazine	200 lines	June

Our color page in the so-called "Quality Group" magazines was a most striking piece of work and evoked favorable comment from all.

Our third schedule of the year is now running in the magazines and again, because sufficient money was not on hand, we were obliged to cut down our space, but the results of that investment also were amazing.

We are using about 26 national mediums during the months of July, August and September, the total cost of which will be approximately $5,000.

We expect to appropriate immediately $35,000 or $40,000 to be used in big space during October, November and December. In the October magazines, our present plan is to try to increase the sale of chrysanthemums. In the November magazines, we will dwell on the idea of everybody using flowers for Thanksgiving, and in the December publications elaborate upon the Christmas thought and spirit, and urge sending flowers as Christmas gifts in place of the usual things that are sent.

We now have several men on the road soliciting subscriptions, but Secretary Young and George Asmus, chairman of the finance committee, will tell you more about that detail.

Your publicity and finance committees have had several meetings during the year in various parts of the country. They have worked unceasingly to make this advertising campaign bring results. We, who are in close touch with the work, feel that it is the best thing that the florists of this country ever did, and we hope that those who are not contributing at all, and those who are not contributing to their fullest extent, will think a moment, and ask themselves if it is fair to let a few carry the burden of this great work.

HENRY PENN, Chairman.
THOMAS H. JOY.
S. A. ANDERSON.
GUY W. FRENCH.
EDWIN J. FANCOURT.

Washington Representative's Report.

The past 12 months has been an eventful one for your Washington representative, particularly the first three months of our fiscal year, during which time the coal situation, which you are all so familiar with, created much concern, and much work for your representative at the capital, owing to the fact that many local fuel administrators did not seem to understand the national orders, and the everlasting "work or fight" order, which cropped up all over the United States as a big bug-a-boo, and which frightened many of the florists into closing up their places, and many employes quit their positions on account of the local draft boards not understanding their orders. This also caused your Washington representative much concern. However, be that as it may, the war is now over and the work or fight order is obselete, but the question of adequate help still concerns us very much, and as for the coal situation, while there is no embargo now, unless those who have not already secured their coal for the coming winter, get it on the ground at once, they may find themselves without coal to carry them through the coming season. This is due to several causes, such as not enough miners to dig the coal, insufficient railroad facilities to distribute the coal, and various other causes. However, I sincerely hope that the fuel situation is not as black as it looks, because the last several seasons caused enough anxiety without having further fuel troubles this year.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE CONVENTION.

Obedient to a call from the National Chamber of Commerce, President Totty, Secretary Young, George Asmus, chairman of the national flower show committee, and the Washington representative attended the convention of that organization at Atlantic City, N. J., December 3-4, 1918. The convention was probably the greatest gathering of business interests ever held in the United States, there being upwards of 400 business firms represented.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY MEETING.

The annual meeting of the American Rose Society was held June 2. The members assembled at 1214 F street, where they were received by the florists of Washington, and taken in automobiles for a ride through Potomac park, before going to Arlington Farm, where they inspected and judged the rose garden. They then reentered the automobiles and proceeded to the home of Mrs. Charles J. Bell, "Twin Oaks," where they inspected her rose garden and grounds, after which light refreshments were served.

COAL AND SHIPPING DIFFICULTIES.

For nearly two years, the restrictions on coal, on account of the war, gave many of our members much concern. The situation happily righted itself when the armistice was signed, November 11, when the coal embargo was lifted.

I will not go into details on the shipping proposition, which has been taken care of with the end of the war and the action of the federal horticultural board.

WORK OR FIGHT ORDER.

The "work or fight" order frightened many of the men engaged in the florist business, causing them to seek other employment and also brought much unrest. This was through the ill-advised draft boards, who gave out the information through the country, that men in so called non-essential businesses must either secure essential employment, or fight. On September 14, 1918, the following letter was sent out and published in all the trade papers, and notwithstanding these publications, there were a number of people who left their work or shut down business altogether in order to secure more essential employment:

"Important to all Florists Throughout the United States of America."

"Statements have gone abroad, that an order issued from General Crowder's office at Washington D. C., placing the florist business on the non-essential list, and that florists must seek other occupations. This I have never believed and do not believe it now, but the fact is that these statements have gone out, and succeeded in disorganizing help to a very large degree in the florist business. In view of the above statements which have come to me from various parts of the United States, I called on General Crowder at three o'clock, Friday afternoon, September 6, and he personally assured me that the florists had not been classed as non-essential, nor was there any idea of doing so. This statement coming direct from General Crowder should in a measure alleviate the discontent among the florists, especially the heads of departments."

All these rumors were unofficial, so far as the war industries board was concerned.

Most of you will remember on the Thursday of our last year's convention, there was published, what was supposed to be an Associated Press story, that all must secure essential work or fight. I said then that I did not think it was true, but the story had the effect of frightening many men into leaving their employment and going to work for the shipping board or in munitions, where unskilled labor could earn much higher wages, and from that time on until the armistice was signed, this monster would not down, but would loom up at different times in various places.

ROSE GARDEN.

The rose garden which is conducted by the department of agriculture, in co-operation with the American Rose Society, now contains 700 varieties. During the year, additions have been made to the extent of three varieties. Twenty-four concerns were requested to contribute plants to the garden aggregating 161 varieties. Sixteen replies were received, and three firms sent plants totalling fifteen and consisting of three varieties. Fortunately, at the time the executive committee of the American Rose Society visited the garden this year, the weather was propitious, and the roses were in better condition than at any previous meeting of the committee. The condition of the garden was creditable, considering the difficulty of securing labor with the limited funds at the disposal of the department.

The work of Dr. Van Fleet in breeding hardy garden types of roses has yielded exceedingly interesting results. There are now in the trial grounds between 3,000 and 4,000 seedlings, and among the mature plants, which have been selected out of the previous generations of seedlings, there are five or six remarkably promising new varieties which the committee of the American Rose Society feels warrant introduction. These plants are not only interesting because of their inflorescence, but because of their foliage and habit of growth. While they have not yet been tested out in a wide geographical way, yet it is believed from the parentage which has contributed to these varieties, that they will carry rose planting into regions not now well supplied, with hardy sorts which bloom profusely. One of the remarkable plants is a hybrid form of Rosa rugosa. The inflorescence in this hybrid consists of a large number of small perfect roses from three-quarters of an inch to an inch in diameter, borne in clusters of from 12 to 20 roses each, and the great number of flowers borne by the plants give them the appearance of a large bouquet. Another of the new forms carries a flower considerably brighter and somewhat larger, but with markings quite similar to that of the American Pillar. As this is a bush type of plant, and is very floriferous, it promises much. These two sorts are outstanding in their inflorescence, but others are very excellent for their class. No attempt is here made to describe the several sorts, but merely to call attention to the fact that an important contribution in the form of new sorts is awaiting introduction and distribution.

The rose garden, which is jointly maintained by the department of agriculture and the American Rose Society, is distinctively a test garden. The arrangements entered into between the department and the society were for the express purpose of determining the adaptability of varieties of roses to the soil and environmental conditions of Washington, and for the purpose of affording the department material to study roses in general, as well as for breeding purposes. As a result, many have been disappointed in the appearance of the rose garden maintained at the Arlington farm. Those who visit the farm in the future should distinctly understand that the garden is a test garden for the purpose as above stated of determining the relative hardiness and adaptability of varieties, and not a show garden. Acting upon this viewpoint, the executive committee of the American Rose Society, at its annual meeting in June, considered the plan of attemping to establish in the parks of Washington, a show garden, which should be based upon the results of the test work carried on at the Arlington farm. It is believed that this plan of maintaining test plots and show gardens will yield the largest return to the interested rosarians of the country.

It is a significant fact that a considerable portion of the correspondence growing out of the publication of the Rose Annual has to do with the report of the committee on the behavior of the varieties of roses in the several field test gardens. Mr. McFarland clearly brought this out in his discussion of the matter, and commented upon it as a significant indication of the character of information which appealed to rosarians the country over. The importance, therefore, of the maintenance of the test gardens as the one at Arlington, is clearly indicated in the reaction by the public on the information carried in the Rose Annual.

EXPERIMENTAL WORK.

There will be submitted to the chief of bureau, who we hope will transmit it to the secretary of agriculture, an estimate and request for $35,000, to undertake work, under glass, with the standard florist crops, including roses and carnations in particular, and for the purpose of erecting and maintaining a small range of greenhouses to be devoted to investigational work, which may be of benefit to the florists of the country. In addition to this, we are also asking for a small fund to be used in conducting efficiency tests on the heating plants used by the florists throughout the country, in order that we may co-operate with them in an effort to make their fuel consumption more efficient and economical. A preliminary study has been made of the results obtained by the florists and vegetable forcing industries, and we are convinced that changes could be made in many establishments which would benefit the owners and operators of these ranges, and it is this type of work which we feel, in addition to the actual investigational work in connection with florist industries, that could be undertaken by the department with great profit to the industry.

BOTANIC GARDENS.

On the first day of the present session of congress, Senator Moses introduced a bill to acquire 22 additional acres for the botanical gardens in the heart of the city of Washington. This bill is to be taken up as soon as the railroad labor and the league of nations are out of the way. Representative Norman J. Gould, chairman of the library committee, under whose jurisdiction the botanic gardens come, is very much in favor of the enlargement of the gardens. Both Senator Moses, chairman of the district committee in the United States senate, and Congressman Gould, chairman of the library committee in the United States house of representatives, are very much interested in the national capital, and we expect this project to become a reality before long.

PROSPERITY.

The past year, throughout the length and breadth of the land, so far as I can understand, was a very prosperous one for nearly all florists. While in some cases, the crops were very much curtailed, the addition in price more than made up for poor, indifferent or short yields. The outlook for the coming year is unusually bright, and the next 12 months should be the best that we have ever experienced in our business.

I want to take this opportunity to thank all who have helped to make the work of the Washington representative lighter. With grateful thanks for the continued confidence reposed in me, the Washington representative, the above is respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM F. GUDE.

Presentation to William F. Gude.

Charles H. Grakelow, Philadelphia, Pa., far-famed for his eloquence, made a brilliant speech, mention of which was made in last week's convention report, in presenting William F. Gude, Washington, D. C., with a handsome diamond ornamented Croix de Guerre. He said:

"The last of the boys in khaki are coming back from the other side, many of them shell-shocked and in a deplorable condition. We find of the goodly number returning, that there are a fair percentage who wear upon their left breast the Croix de Guerre and various other insignia testifying to valiant service rendered; not because they were more valiant and braver than any of their comrades in arms, but because of their being advantageously placed at the proper time when valor was called for, and they responded as only Americans can. God Almighty, in His infinite wisdom, sent those boys to crown 'Old Glory' with success on the other side, and vouchsafed to us stay-at-homes the opportunity to do wonderfully effective work in backing up the heroes who were at the front.

"We find certain figures among these stay-at-homes standing out conspicuously, pre-eminently towering head and shoulders above the others in what was accomplished; not, I say, that they were more interested in these United States of ours, but they were 100 per cent efficient when the opportunity presented itself, and their advantageous location was such, that when the call to duty came, they were there 'on the job' and immediately responded.

"You will all agree with me that in the past two years the Society of American Florists never occupied the public stage more frequently nor waged a more aggressive campaign, and its entire and crucial activities centered at the nation's capital in the District of Columbia. Its cause was there championed and put forth in the most unmistakable terms—and justly so—by that man who has very few equals, and no superiors, in his position as Washington representative—good old Billie Gude.

"It is especially fitting that we follow the example set by France in her awards to military heroes, to whom she has presented, whenever deserving, the Croix de Guerre; that we should crown our heroes, also, with the Croix de Guerre of the Society of American Florists, and especially, that we should thus recognize our great debt to that man through whose untiring efforts and convincing arguments, favorable action was secured from the authorities at Washington, and legislation that created a sure foundation for the structure of the future of this wonderfully essential profession of ours.

"So I say at this time, Sir, I occupy an enviable position in the full realization of which words seem to fail me and the throat responds not, as affectionate emotion asserts her authority. Neither can any pen record this feeling of gratitude and appreciation, because man never made a pen that could hold enough ink to jot down our loving affection, and our appreciation of what you have done for the American florist; and in testimonial of all this, I would ask you at this time, if you will not kindly accept from the boys of the Society of American Florists, this, their Croix de Guerre of virgin gold, that metal which represents all that is ideal to man in its purity and permanence. This we give you, knowing that you will keep it in place right over your heart, that at every beat it may be a reminder of our full recognition of your many deeds that inspired this presentation. In the center of this emblem, the goldsmith has seen fit to carve a rose, the symbol of our profession. In the heart of that rose, there scintillates a diamond, the purest of all stones. Inscribed on this face are the letters: 'S. A. F.—1919.' and upon the reverse side it reads. 'Honor Award to William F. Gude, Instar Omnium,' meaning 'an example to emulate.' Attached thereto are the colors of our country, bespeaking the nation-wide results of your endeavors in our behalf. This is surmounted by a gold bar inscribed—'Service.'

"Wear it! May the good God vouchsafe to you years of happiness, health and prosperity, in order that we, the recipients of your many kindnesses and efficient service, may be able to partially repay what you have done for us. Our 'God bless you!' goes with it."

Convention Recognition by Detroit Times.

In "Bring Flowers," Mrs. Hemans touches tenderly upon the universality of the use of "God's thoughts in bloom." Their's is a language that fits every occasion, grave or gay. Scenes, incidents, forms and faces, survive in the wafting fragrance of flowers. When they were showering floral tokens upon Daniel Webster, the little girl who brought him a bunch of mignonettes, gave the great orator the most exquisite pleasure. The old-fashioned flowers grew in the garden of his boyhood home. He saw his mother's face in the mignonettes. One American city, at least, employs petalled loveliness for advertising purposes. Portland's "festival of roses" is one of the annual attractions where rolls the Oregon.

This is the nearest this column can come to saying welcome with flowers to the Society of American Florists as they proceed to garland one of our leading hotels with their decorative deliberations.

When you do say it with flowers, be careful that no one cuts in on the line. An ardent swain told his heart's desire that the floral remembrance he would send her numbered a rose for each beautiful year of her redolent life. The member of the Society of American Florists who made up the bouquet, desiring to show his appreciation of a good customer, generously doubled the order, and sent the token upon its sweet anniversary mission. And now the rejected gallant is as melancholy as the lonely maiden who sang, "If the rain makes the roses beautiful, mother, why doesn't it rain on me?"—Detroit Times, August 19, 1919.

Convention Echoes.

There can be no question that the Detroit convention, if not the largest in point of attendance, certainly has that distinction in the record of visitors or members from all parts of the United States and Canada.

The trade exhibition, which for the war period, made a very poor representation, took a great bound forward, and good judges say it was the largest and most representative ever staged by the society. All the exhibitors were unanimous that it was by far the best ever, in business transacted. Three, four, and even five representatives, were kept busy at some of the larger exhibits, booking orders at rush periods, and many not so well provided felt they lost out in this respect, missing considerable business. A few of the comments are as follows:

Robert Craig Co.—"Wonderful business; by far the best we ever had at any convention."

J. G. Neidinger.—"A record breaker with us; could not wait on them all."

C. C. Pollworth.—"Business fine; saw many old, and made lots of new customers."

C. U. Liggit.—"A splendid business; sold thousands of the Macawii fern."

A. L. Randall Co.—"We came splendidly prepared for a large business, but it greatly exceeded our expectations. We made many new customers."

Chicago Printed String Co.—"Much greater business than we hoped for."

Jos. Heacock Co.—A wonderful business; the best we have ever done at a convention."

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—"By far the best business we have ever had at any convention. We are more than satisfied."

Bergmann-Koropp Co. — "Splendid business; they came so fast we could not wait on them."

Vitoplastic Co.—"Very well satisfied."

W. J. Boas & Co.—"Much pleased with business; made many new customers."

Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co.—"More than satisfied; greatest boom for our business we could possibly have had."

S. S. Pennock Co.—"Our best convention; saw more of our trade than ever before."

Ove Gnatt Co.—"Beyond our fondest expectations. We will vote for a convention every three months. We are more than satisfied."

George B. Hart.—"Great business, especially in Christmas novelties. We will never miss another convention."

The McCallum Co. — "Delighted! great business; too busy to show goods properly; wonderful opportunity to meet our customers."

A. N. Humason.—"Could not have been better; business far greater than we looked for."

C. A. Kuehn.—"Every retailer seemed to want our new "Say it with Flowers" paper; booked many more orders by far than we expected."

J. C. Vaughan.—"Wonderful business. Seven men and the chief none too many; never before took near so many orders at a convention."

American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co.—"Would like this to be continuous. A huge success."

John A. Evans Co.—"A whole lot better than we expected; will be on the job every time."

American Bulb Co.—"Very good business indeed. Saw old customers, and made many new ones."

Julius Roehrs Co.—"Filled all our order books. Happy and contented."

Peters & Reed Pottery Co.—"We doubled the best work in any previous convention."

H. Bayersdorfer & Co.—"Never had a better business; could have done more with additional help. They came too fast for us."

Schloss Bros Co.—"A splendid business; better than ever before."

Michael Bloy and Miss Helen Wicks had charge of the F. T. D. display and secured a number of new members for this organization.

John H. Pepper, at the publicity table, sold a large quantity of dealers' helps and received a number of subscriptions.

The Bowling Tournament.

That the bowling contest is one of the most popular of the recreation features of the conventions, was evidenced by the large attendance, and the great number taking part in the single and team games. The Recreation building at Detroit, is, without doubt, the largest and best fitted up place of indoor amusement in this country. The floor, on which the games were rolled, contained 22 alleys, on which the entire individual—both ladies and gentlemen—and team contests were held at one time.

The teams entered were Cleveland, Chicago, Buffalo, New York, Milwaukee and Detroit. While all the aggregations had their rooters, Chicago and Cleveland appeared to be the best backed, and every strike and spare brought forth tremendous shouts, particularly the double headers. Cleveland led at the end of the second game, with 45 pins, but Chicago put on a great spurt in the last game, rolling up the fine total of 914, beating Cleveland by 72 pins. The money prizes for the teams, which were very liberal, were won as follows:

TEAM.	TOTAL PINS.	PRIZE.
Chicago	2563	$50.00
Cleveland	2481	40.00
Detroit	2391	30.00
New York	2354	25.00
Buffalo	2113	20.00
Milwaukee	2020	15.00

The high man on each team then rolled one game for the individual championship and the New York Florists' Club prize of $25, which was won by Herman Knoble with 200. He also rolled the high single game of the tournament, making 225 in his second game. Each of the high total scores on each team won $5. They were: Allie Zech, 577; H. Knoble, 566; C. C. Kirkpatrick, 553; Chas Sandiford, 519; W. R. Pierson, 501; A. F. Kellner, 458. Allie Zech also received a life membership in the S. A. F.; H. Knoble, $10; C. C. Kirkpatrick, $5, and Chas. Sandiford, $2.50, for highest number of pins in three games.

Special prizes for highest average by the Detroit team were won as follows: C. C. Kirkpatrick, score 553, J. J. Karin's prize, handsome set of florist knives; C. H. Channer, second, with $15 worth of flower pots, and Jos. Streit, $10 worth of flower pots.

In the individual contests consisting of two games in which there were 50 entries, the prize winners, scores and awards were as follows: C. L. Seybold, 346, bowling ball; J. J. Beneke, 333, one hundred cigars; L. Jones, 332, vase basket; D. F. Weeks, 329, Johnston's Dictionary; E. Holznagle, 327, bowling ball bag; John Able, 320, umbrella; Peter Papes, 316, umbrella; O. Oelschig, 309, cuff links; C. M. Balluff, 308, stick pin; John Warneke, 307, stick pin. The complete scores in the individual contests will be found below.

Presidents, past, present and future, had a two-game contest, for honors only, the scores being as follows: Philip Breitmeyer, 316; George Asmus, 287; Frank Traendly, 277; A. L. Miller, 260; August Poehlmann, 221; Phil Foley, 218; E. G. Hill, 186; R. Vincent, 129.

The ladies entered into the games with as much spirit as the men, those with a little experience making very creditable scores, and others who persisted in making "poodles," or rolling the ball in the gutter groove, appeared to have as much fun as those with more skill.

Light refreshments were served during the evening. The contests were started at 8:30 o'clock, and continued until nearly midnight before the finals were rolled.

American Gladiolus Society.

As briefly announced in last week's issue, page 269, the American Gladiolus Society, held its annual meeting and exhibition in the Arcadia auditorium, Detroit, Mich., August 19-21, the time and place being the same as that for the convention of the Society of American Florists. The exhibition was staged in the balconies of the large building and presented a display of unusual beauty, the consensus of opinion being that at no former meeting of the society, had the quality been excelled. Among the many displays that attracted unusual attention was the exhibit of ruffled varieties of the Kunderd entries, as well as many promising seedlings. There was a very good attendance of members who expressed interest in the meeting and the exhibition tables.

The election of officers for terms of two years resulted as follows: H. E. Meader, Dover, N. H., president; C. R. Hinkle, St. Joseph, Mich., vice-president; A. C. Beal, Ithaca, N. Y., secretary; Madison Cooper, Calcium, N. Y., treasurer. Executive committee: Joseph Coleman, Ravenna, O.; Lee R. Bonnewitz, Van Wert, O.; I. S. Hendrickson, Flowerfield, N. Y. Cleveland, on invitation of the florists club of that city, was selected as the next meeting place at the time of the convention of the Society of American Florists.

The judging was in capable hands, the awards in the open classes being made by Dr. Frank E. Bennett, St. Thomas, Ont.; Mrs. A. H. Austin, Wayland, O., and Jelle Roos, Milton, Mass., and for the non-commercial classes, J. R. Munsell, Ashtabula, O.; Professor C. A. Hottes, Columbus, O., and G. Zeestraten, Bemus Point, N. Y. The results of the judging will be found in another column.

PRESIDENT KUNDERD'S ADDRESS.

I shall have to do as I did a year ago at Buffalo, that is, read my address to you from notes. It is so easy to produce and grow beautiful, new gladioli, and so hard to talk, that I have preferred to put in most of my time with the gladioli, and but little to preparing speeches. I find it a great pleasure to work with my flowers, and they never talk back, while it is quite expensive to talk, sometimes; in other words, I am neutral on that subject.

It is certainly a great pleasure to me to meet with the American Gladiolus Society this year, and especially so, since our members and growers have been so successful in staging such a magnifcent collection. There can be no question of the success of the future of our society, with advancement of the gladiolus in the hands of such an enthusiastic organization. It is now 10 years since our society was organized in Boston, Mass., and its success is no longer in doubt. How can it be otherwise when we are at work with the grandest flower that grows?

Although the gladiolus does not possess the sweet odor of the carnation and rose, it far outrivals them both in its gorgeous stateliness and great variety of form and color. The gladiolus has been so busy in working out an unequalled color scheme and newer types, that it has not had time to acquire sweet odors, but some of our successful originators will undoubtedly be able in the future to also teach it that very refined accomplishment.

We are only beginning to generally appreciate in this country the beauty and pleasure of our gardens and home ornamenation and surroundings with plant life, and no other flower will be more popular and widely known than the gladiolus. Its ease of culture, certainty of blooming, and its general adaptability to almost every soil and climate, will certainly give it first place in the floral world and popular esteem. It requires experts to grow beautiful roses or carnations, or a marvelous orchid, or grand chrysanthemum in most parts of our country, but any child can grow some beautiful gladioli almost anywhere. Then no wonder all the world is catching the enthusiasm of our members for this wonderful flower. Each year will find its popularity increased by leaps and bounds, until it will be grown in countless millions.

This brings me to the consideration of bulb prices for the coming year. Perhaps some of our members would like to discuss this question at this meeting. Another question of importance to our members is the consideration of the much discussed, and cussed, question of the Quarantine Act No. 37.

In conclusion, I wish, in behalf of our society, to extend my thanks and appreciation to both our secretary, Professor Beal, of Cornell University, and Madison Cooper, publisher of that valuable floral magazine, The Flower Grower. I also wish to thank the society, and express my appreciation for the honors conferred upon me by its members.

THE AWARDS.

National Association of Gardeners.

The annual convention of the National Association of Gardeners opened in the ball room of the Hollenden hotel, Cleveland, O., at 2 p. m., August 26. The address of welcome was made by F. C. W. Brown, of Cleveland, in the absence of W. G. Waite, director of public utilities, who was to have given the address but was unavoidably detained. Mr. Brown made a plea for cooperation and organization and for voicing opinions of the members on the floor of the convention hall; that cooperation did not mean agreeing to everything presented, but meant an honest expression of difference. The response was made by ex-President Thomas W. Head, of Chicago, who spoke of the surprises that he had met with so far in Cleveland. He gave the union depot a send off, calling it a product of 1865; but he also spoke of the beautiful estates he had visited, which were indeed a surprise to him; that the rhododendrons were the finest he had ever seen in the west. He found more autos than any other city in the union here, and he was willing to admit it, for he had come within a second of being run down by them.

President Robert Weeks was next introduced by Mr. Brown. He made a plea for the uplifting of the professional gardener, and for the service department, which the organization was contemplating establishing. He said: "If we are to make this association a factor for service, we must advertise it more; we must have a fund for publicity—such a fund as the Society of American Florists have established. I bespeak your earnest attention in this convention to the problems of health; to the enlisting of young men in our profession. If we are to secure the right standard of young men, we must elevate our profession. The great stumbling block seems to be the social standing that a gardener receives. It is only by elevating the social standard of our members that we shall obtain social standing. Diplomas should be given showing the standing in the association. This will prove to be a great uplift to the profession." He then went on to speak of quarantine ruling No. 37. He termed it a serious setback to horticulture, and spoke of its absurdities and inconsistencies of the measure, which is a fact very well known. He recommended that rigid inspections should be substituted, and that the association should go on record to endeavor to secure some modification of this ruling. Applause followed President Weeks' address.

The report of the secretary, for 1917, of the Chicago meeting followed. There was no 1918 report on account of no meeting being held due to the war. The report was accepted as read.

At this time Acting Mayor D. Marshall, who announced himself as being the leading booster of Cleveland, spoke. He made a glowing presentation of the city of Cleveland, and tendered the convention of the National Association of Gardeners the freedom of the city. This was followed by the secretary's financial report, which was accepted as read. In the secretary's annual report, he announced there were 868 active members of the association. The treasurer's report of August 20, 1919, showed a balance in the treasury of $2,387.13. This was followed by the reports of the committees.

At 2 p. m. on Wednesday, an auto trip is to be made to the estates of F. F. Prentiss and S. H. Severance on Mayfield road. The trip will take them through the delightful Heights district, where some of the beautiful homes of Cleveland are located. At 7:30 p. m. will occur the annual banquet in the ball room of the Hollenden. Well known speakers will be in attendance. The illustrated lecture by J. Otto Thilow, of Philadelphia, on "Flora of Hawaii" was given Tuesday evening. The gardeners' clubs of Cleveland were all invited to this lecture. The bowling tournament will be held at 3 p. m. Thursday. Some famous scores are expected to be made.

The general committee of arrangements consists of R. P. Brydon, chairman, and F. H. Francis, secretary. Entertainment Committee—W. E. Cook, T. M. Rowe, H. P. Rapley, R. Poole. Banquet Committee—W. E. Cook, J. Hamilton, A. Brown.

There were two large exhibition tables of named gladioli in the convention hall. The stage was also prettily banked with ferns and palms. An especially fine specimen of Rhapis flabelliformis occupied the center of the lobby. This was 12 feet high and a well grown specimen in a 20-inch tub, exhibited by Carl Hagenburger of Mentor, O.

Cattleyas.

There is no class of growers harder hit by the ruling of the federal horticultural board at Washington, than the orchid growers. Heretofore, they have depended for their main supply on importations direct from their native forests, all of which are now excluded, or subject to such purification as to render them almost valueless.

Griffin Bros., of Philadelphia, Pa., are now struggling with an importation of cattleyas, which, after passing through the hands of government examiners, and subjected to fumigation, are in such a shriveled, dried-up condition that not one-half are expected to survive. Ordinarily, cattleyas on arrival were laid out under tables in the orchid houses and lightly sprayed at times, until they revived and showed a liking for their new surroundings. This season's lot look so bad that no moisture is allowed to touch them except what they receive from the atmosphere. Those that showed any indications of life, were potted, but have not, as yet, after two months, been watered, as there is not evidence of sufficient root action.

There is a very good stock here of over 6,000 plants, established cattleyas, in all the forcing varieties, which have made a sturdy growth, and will give a good account of themselves the coming season. After the plants have become established, their flowering period is from four to five years, after which they appear to run out. The plants are still of good size, but year after year do not throw flowering shoots, or so few, that they do not pay for the room they take up.

PLANT NOTES.

Lorraine Begonias.

Begonias of the Gloire de Lorraine type should now be making active growth, the bud shoots starting and the plants taking on shape. The earlier struck cuttings will now be fine plants in five and six-inch pots and will need a center stake to keep them erect. It is yet too early to tie the plants into shape, but if any of the branches are long enough to hang over the edge of the pot, they should receive some support. These branches hanging over the edge of the pot are in the way when watering and if the leaves get wet it takes some time for them to dry off and many will become spotted, and besides the branches grow crooked and are much harder to tie into place later on when this will have to be done. Keep the plants in a good warm house, from this on until the buds begin to show color, when they can be placed in cooler quarters, but do not keep the house too close. Give a little ventilation every day possible. If kept too close and moist some of the foliage will spot and be ruined. Constant light fumigations will be necessary to keep down the green aphis. These plants do not like heavy fumigation but light fumigation carried on frequently will keep the vermin in check and not damage the plants. These insects must be conquered before the plants begin to bloom or they will cover the young blooming shoots completely.

Dahlias.

As the cool nights approach it pays to make preparations to cover the best varieties and protect them from the early frosts. Generally the first frosts are followed by two or three weeks of pleasant warm weather, when flowers are more or less scarce, the outside stock being cut down and the greenhouse stock not being yet in full crop, and a supply of dahlias is a great boon at such a time. See that the plants are properly labeled so when it comes to lifting time there will be no mistakes made. A good large label placed beside each root with the correct name is essential in growing this crop. This label can be tied on to the root when the clumps are lifted and all danger of misnaming be obviated. Keep the plants securely tied to the stakes so that the high winds which are prevalent in the fall cannot break the plants down or the branches off.

Early Firing.

"Economy is wealth." This maxim has been drilled into the young for generations, but false economy is waste. And to put off starting the fires until all the plants have cold feet and have received a check that is going to take them two or three months from which to recover is false economy. As soon as the temperature in the house drops below the point at which it should be maintained, it well pays to start the fires. Many nights at this time of the year at 8 o'clock the temperature outside will be above 60°, but by morning it has dropped to 40°, and if the houses are closed the glass will be covered with moisture, the house cold and damp. This condition is not at all conducive to good growth, and gives the plant a check from which it often takes it some time to recover. It is far better and a money-making proposition to have the fires going and the proper temperatures maintained. The small expense of a little coal burned and the few weeks' wages of a night fireman that are necessary will be more than made up in the excellence of the crop. At this season of the year there will occur cold, stormy days when a little heat will be necessary to keep up the growing temperature all day. This is the time to look over all the piping and see if the boilers are working right. If steam heat is used see that none of the pipes have dropped from their fastenings and have made pockets in the circulation. If this has happened, fasten them up and straighten out the flows. Turn on the valves and see if they leak, and if they do repack them; in fact, it is good policy to repack all valves every fall, whether they actually need it or not, for they will require it before the winter is over. This early firing will also give the opportunity to spread sulphur and nicotine extracts on the pipes and keep the insects and mildew from getting a foothold. Looking at this question from all sides, early firing is an economical proposition and should not be neglected.

Cannas.

As soon as the frost kills the cannas, preparations should be made for the storing of the stock plants for next year. The tops should be cut off about six inches above the ground and removed from the field and not left lying around to attract cut worm millers. The roots should be dug and each variety should be carefully kept separate so that there will be no chance of their being mixed another season. Unless the weather is very severe they can be allowed to dry off a little before being housed, but if there is any chance of the night temperature dropping below the freezing point it is much better to get them under safe covering at once. Under a bench in a cool house is one of the best places to keep them during the winter months, but if the soil under the bench is inclined to be moist, boards should be placed running lengthwise of the bench and the canna roots placed upon these. They must, however, be looked over occasionally to see that they do not run too dry, for there is just as much danger of losing the plants by their drying up as there is by their rotting from an excess of moisture. In placing the clumps under the bench set each variety by itself and leave space enough between it and another variety that it will be impossible, no matter what may happen, for them to get mixed. Mark each variety with a label, written plainly and in full. It takes but a few seconds longer to write the name in full and abbreviations are to be deprecated; we have known cases where the man who always does things in a hurry to abbreviate the name so short that when he tried to read it six months later he could not make out what name he intended to write. This is often a case where "haste makes waste." Attach the labels in such a manner that they will not become misplaced or lost.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

The F. T. D. Home Office.

The headquarters of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association in Secretary Albert Pochelon's store, Detroit, Mich., is spacious and splendidly fitted up with all the office appliances, files, etc., necessary to carry on and keep up with the rapidly increasing business. The secretary has two able assistants in Michael Bloy and Miss Helen Wicks, who are familiar with every detail, and relieve him of much of the clerical work.

His store and retail business, conducted under the name of the Bemb Floral Co., is splendidly equipped in every way for carrying on trade on a large scale. Features of his window decorations were, in one, a large fountain and basin, swimming in which were turtles, who bore on their shells inscriptions in white letters, "Say it with Flowers," "Bemb Floral Service," "Florists' Telegraph Delivery," etc. The other contained a large blue globe, four feet in diameter, with the continents and large islands outlined in white. On all these, stamped in blue, was the slogan, "Say it with Flowers," all over the world. On top was a figure of Mercury, who held in his hand, telegraph wires which were attached to poles in corners of the window. The globe rested on blue chintz, relieved with white. It was a fine example of the work of the F. T. D.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The summer is fast passing, and while turning the present to the best account, it is well to keep a sharp lookout ahead to the future, the coming season, of which so much is expected. For the man who is properly prepared, there is no question but that his activity will be rewarded, that he will reap as he has sown.

The best barometer of the business is the supply house. The retailer who makes up his mind to lay in a good stock early, is prompted to do so by his business instinct; his experience of the past season has proven to him that he can sell the goods if he has them. There never was a more representative attendance than at the recent S. A. F. convention, and that they expect much of the coming season, and are preparing for it, was evidenced in the free buying of the retailers, who exceeded all records in their purchases. They want to have supplies on hand and ready, so as to be prepared, and in fact, to force the business from the first indications in the early fall.

The "coming out teas" will start early and be more numerous than ever the coming season In every community, the name of each debutante and the date of her tea should be on record in the "future event book" of every live retailer. It may be some little trouble to get a line on her relatives or personal friends or her father's business associates, but it will be found to pay, and now is the time to do it, not just a week or so before the event when the orders begin to come in. Every customer will want to know "what are they sending this year?" and the salesman must be ready to present the several new arrangements that are exclusive with the house.

All kinds of berried shrubs, which are to be had now from the nurseries, or can be gathered in the woods, are very interesting and decorative. The snow berries, with their graceful clusters of white, pearl like fruit, will last quite a while when cut. There are a great number of others, which when combined with the fall grasses and seed spikes, such as cattails, make very attractive baskets. They can be arranged with the glass blocks to look very showy in shallow flower bowls.

Golden Glow, the earliest of the chrysanthemums, is in. These flowers can be given a fine decorative effect with the aid of autumn leaves, of which some varieties have commenced to take on their fall colorings.

Gladioli are still good stock. As far as possible, carry the best varieties, and see that they are given plenty of room to open their flowers. The opened, as compared with the closed spikes, are as 50 cents to a dollar.

In cut flowers, it is quality that counts. They need not be of the highest grade, but first in their class, and in all made up funeral clusters and designs, which are to last at most but a few hours, should be at their best in point of development. Where possible, flowers to be used in such work, should be selected and set aside, so as to be forwarded or retarded as the case may be. It is not the number of flowers used, but the effect, and if at their best, half the number will be sufficient; the preparation has saved half the cost. Much time may be saved, or an hour added to a busy day, by such before-hand preparations, the just-right flowers in quality and amount being in jars marked for this or that spray or design at hand without selection, to be at once made up the next morning.

The Late Andrew McAdams.

Major O'Keefe, of the O'Keefe Advertising Agency, Boston, is a most convincing speaker, and at once conveys the impression that he thoroughly understands advertising. His address at the Detroit convention, if it could only be heard by all the trade, with his emphasis and impressive manner, would put the entire amount over the top at once. It is remarkable the attention that is given the slogan in an incidental way by so many interests outside the business, proving that it is having the effect desired. There are so many large growers, and other trade interests, that are still lukewarm in this advertising campaign; $10 a year, is only 20 cents a week; $100 is only $2 a week. This amount will be returned 10 fold, if the total amount of business of the country is only increased one per cent. Send in your check today to John Young, 1170 Broadway, New York.

OBITUARY.

Andrew McAdams.

Andrew McAdams, prominently identified with the Chicago trade for half a century, died at St. Luke's hospital, that city, August 26. He had suffered considerably from internal troubles for a prolonged period and was operated upon August 11. For a time he seemed to gain slowly, but later sank gradually to the end.

Mr. McAdams was born in Londonderry, Ireland, in 1849, leaving for Chicago when eighteen years of age. Two years later he entered business with the late John Goode, his brother-in-law, near the present location on 53rd street. The business was a success from the start and continues today among the most prosperous in the city. Mr. Goode retired in 1890, Mr. McAdams continuing as sole proprietor. For the past five years he had given but little attention to the business, spending most of the time on his Melbourne, Fla., farm.

Mr. McAdams was always active in trade affairs. He was a former president of the Chicago Florists' Club and a constant and successful exhibitor at the local shows. He was a genial and kindly man, ever ready to lend a helping hand in any worthy cause and always a fearless champion of the right. Associates constantly requested his counsel and it was freely given. The needy frequently sought his aid and found him generous to a fault.

Mrs. McAdams (his second wife) died three years ago, Miss May McAdams, the well known landscape gardener, being the only survivor. The families of the late J. A. Pettigrew and Mr. McAdams were related by marriage.

The funeral will take place Friday, August 29.

William Hartland.

William Hartland, formerly with J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York, and brother of E. A. Hartland, of Vaughan's Seed Store, New York, lost his life, August 19 through a distressing accident. He had been working for the shipping board, and was on a vessel in the Brooklyn basin. Another vessel lay inside, next the wharf. They were fumigating the latter vessel, and it appears had left a tarpaulin spread over an open hatch and had gone ashore. Mr. Hartland started across the vessel on his way to lunch, stepped on the tarpaulin and fell into the hold and was suffocated, though it is even possible that the fall would have killed him.

Mr. Hartland was a son of the late Wm. Baylor Hartland, of Cork, Ireland.

William Roemer.

William Roemer, a florist of Woodlawn, N. Y., 60 years old, who for a number of years had been employed in Bronx park, New York, died in Fordham hospital on the evening of August 19 from injuries received a hour earlier by being struck by an automobile as he was crossing Webster avenue at East 233d street. His home was at 367 East 234th street. The deceased was a son of the late Peter Roemer, who came from Alsace to this country many years ago and established a florist business, which is yet conducted by the widow, near Woodlawn cemetery. William Roemer is survived by a widow and three children, who have much sympathy in their sad and sudden bereavement.

JOSEPH J. BUDLONG, Chicago, reports having cut Columbia roses the past season at the rate of $3.00 per plant.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, the well known manufacturer of insecticides and greenhouse paints and putty, Beacon, N. Y., has the following in the Beacon Daily Herald: "Americanism and general prosperity or individual comfort is not brought about by the so-called strikes. Loyalty and patience, combined with industry, is what we need at the present time for the common good."

THE University of Illinois experiment station at Urbana, issues Bulletin No. 221 on "Snapdragon Rust." Growers of snapdragons should get it.

EUREKA, CALIF.—The receiver of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Inc., writes under date of August 20, stating that the affairs of the firm have materially improved, and that he hopes to pay dollar for dollar if given sufficient time.

Plant Quarantine Lashed at Detroit.

If Dr. Marlatt and his associates on the federal horticultural board have been mistaken as to the attitude of the trade regarding Plant Quarantine No. 37, they were fully awakened to the truth of the situation at the Detroit convention of the Society of American Florists, last week, when prominent members, in Dr. Marlatt's presence, plainly voiced their sentiments in strong opposition to the present regulations. Some other trade organizations may have been lenient with the board, by courtesy or otherwise, in failing to express their convictions, but the national society of florists and horticulturists, operating under federal charter, approved strong resolutions in opposition to the plant quarantine almost unanimously.

Dr. Marlatt, as a result of disclosures at this meeting, has promised to amend the regulations, and his action in this direction will be awaited with interest. We regret our inability to give fuller details of the prolonged discussion, owing to pressure on our space at this time, but hope to do so later. The resolutions adopted, however, will be found in our account of the general proceedings elsewhere in this issue.

American Carnation Society.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS' MEETING.

The midsummer meeting of the board of directors of the American Carnation Society, was held at the Arcadia auditorium, Detroit, Mich., August 21, those present being President Theodore A. Dorner, Vice-President C. W. Johnson, Secretary A. F. J. Baur and Director W. D. Howard. Secretary Baur brought up the following matters for the board's consideration: Premium list for annual exhibition approved; the R. C. Kerr prize for the best keeping qualities of carnation, the matter as outlined being left in the hands of the secretary; the question of rearranging the exhibits at the Chicago exhibition by the retail florists, as suggested by the Chicago committee of arrangement, approved; registration of the variety, Red Cross, the secretary having reported that the name having been used before, he was instructed to notify the introducer, and in accordance with the rules of the American Carnation Society, to ask him to provide another name for the variety.

C. W. JOHNSON.

New York Federation of Societies.

There will be a meeting of the New York Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs in Commissioner Wilson's office at the state fair grounds, Syracuse, N. Y., Wednesday, September 10, at 2 p. m.

E. A. WHITE, Sec'y.

Personal.

Frederic W. Taylor, well known to the trade in connection with at least three world's fairs, Omaha, Buffalo and St. Louis, has just concluded a three-year irrigation engagement in Arizona, and is in New York this week. His home is now Los Angeles, Calif.

Frank R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., has purchased a large house with two and one-quarter acres of ground in the center of the village, which he is remodelling for a permanent home.

Peter Bisset, in charge of foreign plant distribution, bureau of plant industry, department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., was in Chicago last week on a western trip.

Thos. N. Cook, the well known rosarian of Watertown, Mass., was in Chicago this week looking up rose literature.

State Fairs.

The following is a list of coming state fairs with the names and addresses of the superintendents of the floricultural and horticultural departments as far as obtainable:

August 30 September 6, Hamline—Minnesota State Fair. J. V. Bailey, R. F. D. Dayton's Bluff station, St. Paul, superintendent of horticulture; LeRoy Cady, University Farm, St. Paul, superintendent of floriculture.

August 31-September 5, Lincoln—Nebraska State Fair. J. V. Bailey, R. F. D., Dayton's intendent of horticulture; B. K. B. Weber, Lincoln, superintendent of floriculture.

September 1 - 5, Hartford.—Connecticut Fair Association. Gordon R. Scrivener, Hartford, superintendent of floriculture; Geo. W. Frasee, Storrs, superintendent of horticulture.

September 1-6, Indianapolis—Indiana State Fair, S. W. Taylor, Boonville, superintendent of horticulture and floriculture.

September 1-6, Wheeling—West Virginia State Fair.

September 1 - 7, Elsmere.—Delaware State Fair. Prof. C. A. McCue, Newark, Del., superintendent of horticulture.

September 9-12, Douglas—Wyoming State Fair. Ivan L. Hobson, Douglas, superintendent of horticulture and floriculture.

September 8-13, Louisville—Kentucky State Fair. Prof. H. R. Niswonger, Lexington, superintendent of horticulture; Wm. Rabe, Versailles, superintendent of floriculture.

September 8-13, Helena—Montana State Fair. A. L. Strausz, Missoula, superintendent of horticulture and floriculture.

September 8-13, Syracuse—New York State Fair. Chas. G. Porter, Albion, superintendent of horticulture; David Lumsden, College of Agriculture, Ithaca, superintendent of floriculture.

BAILEY'S NEW STANDARD Cyclopedia of Horticulture

SIX SPLENDID VOLUMES

THIS work is Prof. L. H. Bailey's latest and greatest achievement and will undoubtedly stand as a monument to him. This is not a revision of the old Cyclopedia, but a brand new work containing features not dreamed of at the time of publication of the original cyclopedia, which was a pioneer work. The old Cyclopedia of Horticulture, it will be remembered, was a cyclopedia in fact as well as in name, whereas the new Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture is a gardener's manual as well as a cyclopedia and contains features that make it equally adapted to the amateur and to the professional, to the man without education or the man with high literary tastes.

ROSES ARE MORE PLENTIFUL.

Roses are more plentiful this week and some particularly fine Columbia are included in the shipments. The new rose, Premier, is making new friends every day, and many of the dealers speak in high terms of it. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are in good supply, and are moving nicely at fair summer prices. Sunburst, Ophelia and Killarney Brilliant have improved wonderfully in quality the past few weeks. American Beauty roses continue to clean up nicely right along at high figures, and there is seldom a surplus in this variety. Carnations are seen in good supply at one or two of the houses, and some first-class summer stock is obtainable, especially Rosette and Ward. Asters are more plentiful, and considerable pushing is needed to move the supply at greatly reduced prices. First-class asters hold their own, but the supply of these is limited. Gladioli are reaching the market in larger quantities, and there are more than enough to go around. The majority of the gladioli show the effects of the hot weather, but there are some good flowers available if one is willing to pay the price, which is not so high, considering the general market conditions. Those who attended the Detroit convention from this vicinity have nearly all returned home with the same report that they had a most delightful time, and that it was one of the best conventions ever. The exhibitors from here were particularly well pleased with the amount of business they did, and are confident that trade is going to be brisk this fall and winter, judging from the early preparations the retailers are making to meet it.

NOTES.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, reports that he had a most enjoyable time at the Detroit convention, which was one of the best he ever attended. He speaks in glowing terms of the treatment the visitors received at the hands of the Detroit florists, who did everything possible to make them feel at home at all times. Mr. Washburn is busy this week disposing of the biggest cut of Columbia roses that ever reached Bassett & Washburn's store.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are moving a large supply of gladioli and asters this week which are arriving in exceptionally good condition. Miss Charlotte Paradise is again attending to her duties as bookkeeper here after a pleasant vacation in Wisconsin.

One of the rose growers whose place is located within shipping distance of this market is looking for a buyer and will dispose of his range to some responsible party at very reasonable terms.

Allie Zech and wife have returned from their vacation which was spent at the Detroit convention and the Niagara Falls. They motored to Detroit and back, but made the trip to Buffalo by boat.

Miss Nelda Wolf, who has charge of Zech & Mann's books, is again on duty after enjoying a two weeks' vacation, part of which was spent at Deer Park and Starved Rock

Miss Nettie Parker, secretary of A. T. Pyfer & Co., is again attending to her duties after a well-earned vacation spent at Yellowstone Park and the Detroit convention.

F. J. Rioux, of the Central Refrigerator & Equipment Co., has secured the contract to completely equip the M. G. Madson Seed Co.'s new florist store at Manitowoc, Wis.

Wietor Bros. are having a good call for carnations, which they are cutting in quantity. The stock is particularly fine for so early in the season and finds ready buyers.

H. E. Humiston, of the Proto-Feed and Guano Co., is attending the convention of the National Association of Gardeners at Cleveland this week.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports a strong demand for American Beauty roses, which are bringing high summer prices and clean up early each day.

The American Bulb Co., having the only display of Formosum lily bulbs at the Detroit convention last week, made a decided hit with it.

Dick Rolston, who visited friends here last week, has returned to Cleveland, O., where he is in the employ of Knoble Bros.

The local bowling team consisting of W. A. Amling, Eric Johnson, Herbert Amling, Allie Zech and Peter Olsem captured the pennant at the S. A. F. tournament in Detroit last week with a total of 2563 pins, which won the $50 prize. Allie Zech was high man and won a life membership in the S. A. F. in addition to what other prizes he received.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. enjoyed a brisk business at the Detroit convention, where it made a large exhibit that attracted many customers. According to T. E. Waters, everyone of those who made displays, especially in the supply line, booked more orders than they had any reason to expect and are more than satisfied with the result.

F. H. Holton, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., Milwaukee, Wis., and J. E. Matthewson, Sheboygan, Wis., were visitors in the wholesale market this week. They attended the Detroit convention.

George Blackman, wife and daughter, Evansville, Ind., are the guests of Allie Zech and wife. They made the boat trip to Buffalo and returned here from Detroit in Mr. Zech's car.

L. A. Bale, of the Drumm Seed & Floral Co., Fort Worth, Tex., spent a few days here this week on his way home from the Detroit convention.

Several new retail stores will open in this city in the near future. There are a few good established places for sale.

H. G. Berning and wife, St. Louis, Mo., are spending a few days here after attending the Detroit convention.

L. Hoeckner, formerly with Peter Reinberg, is planning on opening a retail store in the near future.

Vaughan's Seed Store is making shipments of Paper White narcissus. Freesia sales hold up well.

J. Jegen, of the Jegen Floral Co., is back from a pleasant vacation spent in northern Wisconsin.

August Barnett has returned from his vacation and is back on the job at Erne & Co.'s store.

Vaughan's Seed Store made its first counter display of Dutch bulbs this season August 23.

EXCELLENT AUGUST BUSINESS.

Business during the month has maintained an average unheard of during former summers. Perhaps the cool, agreeable weather had something to do with this condition of business, but it is probably more logically attributed to the advertising campaign which has been carried on, not only by local firms, but by the advertising committee of the Society of American Florists, with the slogan, "Say it with Flowers," becoming universally known and recognized from coast to coast. Funeral work, hospital flowers and counter trade have been in the lead, although there have also been numerous small weddings. Stock arriving has been far superior to any previous summer month. Asters are in fine condition, with long stems, and good sized flowers. Gladioli spikes of excellent proportions are offered on this market. Roses, from the young stock, are still short in stem, but are improving each week. Columbia and Premier bid fair to outclass the Russell in popularity this season.

NOTES.

Richard Blossom and Mrs Ruth Flick-Blossom were guests of Miss Helen Patten, at her summer home on the bay shore, near Toledo, O., the latter part of the week, on their way home from the convention at Detroit, where they purchased the supplies for their new store at 110 West Wayne street, to be opened about October 1.

The rose houses of the Doswell Floral Co. are showing up well with the young stock of Columbia, Premier, Russell, Ophelia and other leading varieties, which are making splendid growth. Chrysanthemum plants are also in fine condition, and will soon have flowers ready for cutting.

Ed Wenninghoff is showing some attractive aster plants in the lighter colors, and says they sell very readily. He reports a number of orders booked the past week for September weddings.

Miss Marguerite Flick, of the Flick Floral Co., who attended the S. A. F. convention in Detroit, left that city by boat for Buffalo, and Niagara Falls, for a short trip before returning home.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hagenburger, West Mentor, O., called on the members of the craft here last week.

I. M. Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., was a trade visitor last week.

INCREASED SUPPLY BRINGS PRICE DROP.

The warm spell of late has caused stock of every description to be rushed into this market. The effect is noticeable in the drop in prices along all lines. Roses are coming in very freely; in fact, so much so that the market is unable to absorb all the offerings. Quite a lot of stock shows the effect of mildew, due no doubt to the sudden change in weather conditions. Russell has been coming in rather freely all week, but as this is a great favorite, it moves quickly. Quite a quantity of white roses are to be had and are largely used for weddings. There are large stocks of Ophelia, Hadley, Shawyer and Hoosier Beauty. It has to be extra good quality to tempt buyers. Cecile Brunner is plentiful once more, and so is Mrs. Aaron Ward. The warm weather has brought the cut of asters along at a great rate. They have dropped considerably in price, and a great number of them are sold on the street. All colors are to be had. The first Unaka of the season is now being offered by the chrysanthemum growers. While they are of rather poor quality, as regards color, they find a ready market, due to the public taste for something new. The old favorite, Monrovia, is also abundant and is a fine seller. Golden Glow has passed out of the market. All chrysanthemums arriving are selling rapidly and at good prices. Some beautiful gladioli are coming in, and add greatly to the displays in the stores. Most of the stock offered is of first-class quality and is being largely used in decorative work. Dahlias are very abundant and low in price; in fact, some of the leading stores have dropped them entirely, and are not carrying any stock of them at all. Sweet peas are with us yet, but are not so noticeable as last week. Considering the lateness of the season, the quality is good. There are no orchids and very few gardenias to be had. Cut cyclamens are plentiful, and very often are used instead of lily of the valley for bridal bouquets. Snapdragons are over for the season. There is a large supply of delphiniums and other herbaceous stock, including phlox. In pot plants, cyclamens are coming along in limited quantities. Celasias are very popular and sell well. A few begonias are noted in some of the stores. There seems to be an ample supply of Bostons and palms. Ferns are plentiful and cheap.

NOTES.

The Park Presidio dahlia show, which will be held this week, is attracting much attention among dahlia enthusiasts. The show has been widely advertised and a large list of entries has been received. The exhibition committee has hit upon a unique way of advertising. Wherever a window card is put up, either in shops or other public places, a tin container is placed directly underneath the advertising card and in this receptacle, three or four well grown assorted dahlias are placed. The flowers attract attention immediately, with the result that the display card is also read, informing the reader where the show is to be held. The idea is a very commendable one, and might be copied with equal success elsewhere.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. has been featuring a fine lot of Monrovia chrysanthemums during the week just passed. Their gladioli have also been extra fine. They say that trade with them is keeping up exceptionally well this summer. Their Palace hotel branch also reports a steady trade. At their nurseries their immense cyclamen stock is coming along in the best possible shape. Their stock of begonias also give great promise. Superintendent Andrew McDonald is growing some splendid specimen foliage plants. He tells us that the outlook for the plant trade this coming season is particularly bright.

Secretary F. C. Burns, of the California Dahlia Society, announces that all available space for the coming show has been applied for. The society has arranged to hold the show in the ball room of the Palace hotel. So great has been the demand for space that all the available corridors adjacent to the ball room have been taken by the society also. The show will be held during the arrival of the New Pacific fleet of war vessels. Secretary Burns informed us that it will be the greatest show the society has attempted.

The Kentfield Nurseries, operated by Richard Diener & Co., at Kentfield, is now making a wonderful display of gladioli. Many acres are now in flower, offering a beautiful sight to all visitors. The seedlings are showing up in great shape this season, and they will have many meritorious novelties to offer this coming season.

George C. Roeding, president of the Fancher Creek Nurseries at Fresno, and the California Nursery Co., at Niles, is busily at work on plans for the opening of the state fair at Sacramento. Mr. Roeding is president of the state board of agriculture, under whose auspices the fair is held. Mr. Roeding's two nurseries will be represented by large exhibits of plants.

J. A. Axell expects to have his new wholesale store on Bush street ready very shortly. Chrysanthemums will be one of his leading specialties during the season. He has contracted for the cut of many of the leading growers. He will also handle asparagus and ferns on a large scale.

Anchieo Carbone, brother of John Carbone, the well-known orchid grower, died at his home in Berkeley, August 18. The deceased was highly respected by all who knew him. He was a native of Italy. The funeral was largely attended by the trade in this city.

Ronald Coates, of the Leonard Coates Nursery Company of Morgan Hills, says his firm is having an unprecedented call for fruit trees of every description. He has a wonderful collection of native flowering shrubs, which are now at their best.

GOOD FUNERAL AND WEDDING DEMAND.

Business conditions are good for the summer season, with the demand for cut flowers and wedding and funeral work better than in former years. The supply, while not varied, has been satisfactory, especially gladioli, which are excellent, as are roses. Asters are scarce and of poor quality, and the same is true of sweet peas.

NOTES.

The local shops had many callers last week from the eastern cities, who were on their way to the convention. They were met by a delegation from the local club, the itinerary including a trip to Niagara Falls and the Gorge route and a visit with local florists.

John Fiebelkorn gave a party last week celebrating his bachelorhood, which was so thoroughly enjoyed by those present that they hope he will make it an annual event.

Needless to say, Joseph Streit was a busy man in Detroit last week, if everybody from this city called on him that intended to. A friend like Joe is never forgotten.

S. A. Anderson and family motored to Williamstown, Mass., last week, returning in time for the Detroit convention.

Vacations are still in order, and in consequence, most of the stores are working shorthanded.

SUPPLY OF GOOD QUALITY AND NORMAL.

The improvement in business continued during the past week, and the oversupply has been reduced until conditions are now about normal. Roses show better form and are arriving in large numbers. The most in demand are Columbia, Ophelia Supreme, Victoria, Stanley and Ophelia. Asters are moving well and the same is true of gladioli. Garden stock has little call.

NOTES.

Edward Rogean has returned after a pleasant trip through Maine in his new automobile. He took time to catch a few salmon and trout.

Penn, The Florist, is taking advantage of the quiet season, and is redecorating his store. Business is reported far ahead of last year.

Harry Ward is now handling the entire stock of Jelle Roos. Gladioli are cleaning up easily at $4 per 100.

Wm. Thurston and family will leave soon for an auto trip to the White Mountains.

M. Slater, formerly with the Wm. W. Edgar Co., is now with A. Leuthy at Roslindale.

J. M. Cohen has returned from his vacation and is now on hand at the market. S. K. G.

Baltimore.

ROSE SUPPLY SHORTAGE NOTICEABLE.

The item of interest on the market this week was the scarcity of roses, which while generally short at this season, have been in fair supply until a week ago, but they dropped off with one day's shipments, August 19, at which time, with quite a lot of funeral work, it was rather a task to divide them up to in any way meet requirements. Gladioli and asters still arrive in fair numbers, the best, of course, going first and then the balance are offered at buyers' prices. Hydrangea paniculata, buddleia and other outdoor stock continue to glut the market and are only moved when there are orders for funeral work. There are some good zinnias, but the colors must be separated to be used to advantage.

NOTES.

It has been reported that Charley Chaplin has been working for the Leo. Niessen Co. for the past two weeks, but investigation, careful but thorough, brought out the fact that it was Louis Glick with a perfect mustache, shaved from the top of his head and pasted on his upper lip. However, he must have received a strong protest from the "movie star," for the tonsorial adornment has disappeared and Louis is himself again.

John J. Perry, of the S. S. Pennock Co., has returned from his vacation and reports business very good for the season, but no great rush to tax his force. His chauffeur has been referred to by several retailers as "honorably discharged from both the army and navy," caused by his appearing on several days with navy blue trousers and a khaki shirt.

The Baltimore Wholesale Florists' Supply Co. is making very attractive alterations to the front of its store. The stock in the large display windows early in the morning always attracts the eyes of the retailers and their size admits abundant light to the interior.

The most interesting delegate from this city to the S. A. F. convention was probably John Cook, the eminent rosarian. The long journey shows his interest in every move for the betterment of the trade is not lessened by advancing years.

H. E. McKissick makes many business trips to Philadelphia, but on the last one, accompanied by Mrs. McKissick, he was on pleasure bent. His auto makes the distance in three hours and forty-five minutes. G., Jr.

St. Louis.

FAIR SUPPLY, EXCEPT ASTERS.

There is very little change in market conditions. Stock of all kinds is in fair condition and supply. Roses are showing improvement, with Russell the best variety. Prices are fair, and there is no trouble in cleaning up the better quality. Gladioli are in good supply, but very few are of first grade. Asters are plentiful, but poor. Business continues to be slow, with a normal amount of funeral work. Greens, with the exception of string smilax, is plentiful.

NOTES.

Most of the local delegation to the S. A. F. convention have returned from Detroit, and express themselves as having had a good time, with lots of praise for the wonderful work the convention accomplished. This city was very well represented, nearly 75 visitors from here being in Detroit.

Oscar Ruf, of the Bergsterman Floral Co., on South Grand avenue, has been having his place decorated. He has a pretty conservatory next to his store, which is always an attractive advertising medium.

C. A. Kuehn and his family went to the Detroit convention. Mr. Kuehn has many friends and relatives in Detroit, that being his old home.

Geo. Waldbart has his place looking fine, all cleaned and painted. His trucks also, have been refurbished and look like new.

E. A. Guntly, of Windlers' Flowers, has been spending a quiet vacation at his home the past week. J. J. W.

DES MOINES IA.—J. H. McGarrick, formerly with the J. S. Wilson Floral Co., is opening a retail store at 515 Grand avenue.

COLUMBIA CITY, IND.—L. B. Roebuck, of Fort Wayne, has purchased and taken possession of the West Side Greenhouses, formerly managed by Albert Wagoner, and for the last year owned by Mrs. Jennie Sherwood.

BETTER CONDITIONS GENERALLY.

Market conditions are improving, with a larger demand and plenty of stock. American Beauties are better in quality and the supply is large. Of the other roses, Columbia and Russell are still the favorites. Ophelia, Sunburst, and the Pink and White Killarney are still small and short stemmed. Gladioli are of fine quality, but the supply has increased until it is almost impossible to clean them up. Asters are arriving in good shape, and are the best that have been seen this season. The supply of greens is about equal to the demand, the southern stock not arriving in very good shape.

NOTES.

The new firm of Richards & Brown, of Monessen, Pa., opened their new store August 23. It is one of the most beautiful and up-to-date in western Pennsylvania, the chief feature of which is the large fountain in the center. For the opening, they had a five piece orchestra, which gave a concert, both afternoon and evening. Roses were given to all the ladies who attended the opening, and from all accounts the affair was a big success.

Ralph E. Pinner, of the A. W. Smith Stores Co., has returned from eighteen months' overseas duty. Mr. Pinner will again take up his duties as head of the landscape department, while Herschel McCallum, of The McCallum Co., is back on the job at their greenhouses after serving one year overseas.

There was a large delegation went to the S. A. F. convention from this district, and they all pronounced it the best one they had ever attended. H. D. Rohrer and Ira Landis of Lancaster, Pa., stopped on their way home from the convention.

Society of Iowa Florists.

The Society of Iowa Florists has announced its programme for its seventeenth annual meeting to be held in the state house at Des Moines, August 28, at 8 p. m. The president, J. T. D. Fulmer, of Des Moines, will deliver his address, and after the presentation of the report of the secretary, Wesley Green, the following papers will be read, each followed by a discussion: "The Value of a Florists' Club as a Business Asset to the Profession," by William Goos, Davenport; "The Value of an Exposition to the Trade," by Arthur H. Smith, Boone; "Commercial Fertilizers of Most Value to Florists," by G. F. Kurtzweil, Des Moines; "The Effect of Plant Quarantine No. 37 on the Florist Trade," by Blaine Wilcox, Council Bluffs; "The Park as an Educational Factor and Its Value to the Florist," by G. A. Heyne, Dubuque; "What it Costs to Produce Florists' Stock," by J. S. Wilson, Des Moines. The afternoon, previous to the meeting, will be spent in examining exhibits at the state fair.

The officers of the society are: J. T. D. Fulmer, Des Moines, president; John Reardon, Ames, vice-president; Wesley Green, Des Moines, secretary-treasurer.

Newark, N. J.

Hugo Hass, a well-known grower of Irvington, was married to Miss Dassler, of 1287 Springfield avenue, also of Irvington, a member of a florist family, on August 23. Philips Brothers of this city, made the bride's and bridesmaids' bouquets.

Although summer business is light, the leading retailers pronounce it better than last year.

A. F. F.

PORTLAND, ORE.—The Swiss Floral Co. is making extensive alterations at its range.

WEST PARK, O.—Kirchner, The Florist, is adding one Lord & Burnham house.

MEXICO, MO.—C. C. Wonnemann has purchased land and will erect one house.

GARNETT, KAN.—Mrs. F. A. McDowell will build one house on property recently purchased.

SHREWSBURY, MASS.—D. C. Murdock is building one house which will be devoted to sweet peas.

ELMIRA, N. Y.—The Oriental Flower Store, 331 East Water street, has been purchased by Knapp & Suffice from Peter Makres, who established the business 13 years ago.

HARTFORD, CONN.—More than 150 florists of this vicinity, and their friends, enjoyed a delightful outing at Lake Compounce, July 19, the trip being made by auto. A barbecue and a good programme of sports were included in the day's events.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y.—The thirteenth annual exhibition of the Southampton Horticultural Society, July 30, resulted in interesting displays of flowers and vegetables, six prizes being awarded. Part of the proceeds will be used to plant trees in memory of the young men of the community who fell in the world war.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.— The twelfth annual rose show of the San Diego Floral Association, while not as large as in previous years, took rank as one of the best in the history of the organization, the attendance numbering something over 2,600 persons. Two of the most attractive entries were Rose Los Angeles staged by Howard & Smith, and another introduction of the same firm's. Mrs. F. K. Rindge, an excellent clear yellow with a phonomenally long bud.

TRADE SLOW, BUT BETTER THAN 1918.

Business during the past week has been slow—very slow—but for the third week in August, it has made a better showing than for the same period a year ago. There are more flowers in the market now than last season; plenty of gladioli, asters, single and double cosmos, larkspur, gaillardias, dahlias, tritomas and hydrangeas from outdoors. The main inside crop is roses, the best of which are Columbia, Russell, Premier, Ophelia, Maryland and Double White Killarney, the latter quite scarce. Prices are about the same as a week ago, there not being enough buying to warrant any increase in price. Cattleyas are very scarce. It is said the day of the $2 cattleya is near at hand; in fact, that is the price in New York for anything worth while at this time.

NOTES.

The convention visitors are now nearly all back home and immensely pleased with their trip. Philadelphia firms were to the front, as usual, with their large exhibits. The Robert Craig Co., H. Bayersdorfer & Co., M. Rice Co., Joseph Heacock Co., S. S. Pennock Co., Jos. G. Neidinger Co., Henry A. Dreer, Inc., C. S. Ford, H. F. Michell Co., C. U. Liggit, and Macaw Bros., all made exhibits that were in keeping with their reputations, containing all the up-to-the-minute novelties and the best of the standard stocks in their lines. All report having done a business greatly exceeding their best expectations.

Robert Craig, our silver tongued orator, who has done so much to keep his native city to the front, was unable to make the trip, but this city is fortunate in having an able substitute in Charles H. Grakelow, who was called on frequently to be spokesman of the society. His presentation of the Croix de Guerre to W. F. Gude, and the chest of silver to President J. F. Ammann, were appropriate and as finished flights of oratory as ever heard at an S. A. F. convention.

It is to be hoped that the increased demand, so confidently predicted for the coming season, develops. All the wholesale houses have been spending more or less of the past month in renovating their interiors, and they now, almost without exception, look as well as paint and varnish can make them.

All the boys are looking forward to a good time next Saturday at Richboro, when the Pennock-Niessen baseball game will be played. After the game, the clubs and visitors will be entertained at dinner by Elmer W. Gaehring, followed by a movie show in the evening.

Eugene Bernheimer and family are spending a month at Seaside Heights. Mr. Bernheimer speaks of the great beauty of the shore boulevard from Long Branch to Atlantic City lined with beautiful estates from Long Branch to Ocean Grove.

At the September meeting of the florists' club Tuesday next at the Adelphia, the feature will be addresses by Arthur Niessen, Chas. H. Grakelow, James W. Heacock and President Harvey: a review of the recent convention as they saw it.

The Florex Gardens are cutting their first Premier roses. They have planted 20,000 Premier and 25,000 Columbia, many of these to take the place of carnations, which are entirely discarded.

Edward Reid's Ranstead street market, looks very fine with its renovating. He says the interior looks good to him, but the stock is better. Choice asters, gladioli and new crop roses are features.

The palm and fern display in the Jos. Heacock Co.'s Mole street store, gives a good effect, and helps along the sale of this fine stock.

Very choice asters, and a good line of roses, are features of the stock at the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists Exchange.

The Leo Niessen Co. reports business a shade better than last year at this time, and a greater assortment of stock.

The London Flower Shop reports a good business. Irwin Rosner is on his vacation.

Flower Show at Bronx Park N. Y.

The flower show held in the Museum building, Bronx Park, New York, August 23-24, was not noteworthy in the matter of competition, but some good stock was shown. The authorities of the botanical garden made clever exhibits of their Primulinus hybrids, gladioli, canna blooms and hardy roses.

Mills & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y., took first prize for the largest and best collection of named varieties of gladioli, also, a special prize for a collection of dahlias. Their entire exhibit occupied large space.

The Cedar Hill Nursery, Glen Head, N. Y., (Albert Lahodney, Gr.) took first prize for best 12 varieties of gladioli, three spikes of each; first for the best vase of white, 25 spikes, with Europa; first for 25 spikes of Golden Measure, and first for 25 spikes of a new red variety.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

MARKET IS INACTIVE.

It cannot be said that there was any active business in the wholesale district during the past week, but when it is considered that there are hundreds of retail florists that draw their supplies from this market, and that it is up to them to maintain appearances, even in summer time, their demands, though light, create a movement. During the first part of the week, the weather was dark and cool, and the supply of roses was light, consequently the best grades moved fairly well. The latter part was hot and humid, the supply increased, and the rose situation was practically reversed, with the majority of the buyers wanting short stock and the better grades hanging fire. In white roses, there was a rather light supply, and inferior No. 1 sold for $6 per 100. There has been a considerable stock of Francis Scott Key on the market this summer, and taking the average of all grades, it has been the highest priced rose, but occasionally it gets a fall. In Ophelia, Columbia, Premier and Prima Donna, there is good stock for the season. A few of the best specials in American Beauties will sometimes wholesale at the rate of $35 or $40 per 100, but the poor ones, of which there are many, and the left-overs, go for a song. As, next to roses, the asters are the most useful in funeral work, there is always a demand for them, and the best bring fair prices, but it is impossible to clean them up. The gladioli situation is worse. The best can be used effectively for display, but the surplus goes cheap or is lost. A few of the early yellow chrysanthemums are on the market and some of the large retail stores use them in window displays, but the day of this flower is not yet. The rubrums, for which there was some demand a few weeks ago, as they were about the only lilies on the market, are now plentiful and practically a drug. Orchids continue scarce and high. In addition to what has been enumerated, there are quantities of stock, both "wild" and domestic, and some of it sells, but all combined, it is not much of a factor.

August 25.—With a heavy supply of stock, and also a deluge of rain, the outlook for a good day's business is not promising.

NOTES.

Mrs. F. H. Traendly and Mrs. Charles Schenck have ever been known as clever social entertainers. We take pleasure in presenting to the trade, or for that matter to the world, their joint efforts in the line of poetry, which is the best that has come under our notice, in the "Say it with Flowers" campaign:

In a garden so fair, with its fragrance so rare,
I watched the sweet flowers grow;
Thinking of someone, some certain someone,
A someone that I love so;
As I wandered along on my way,
I seemed to hear each flower say.

REFRAIN

Say it with flowers, beautiful flowers,
Secrets of love they'll reveal;
Bring her sweet roses or violets blue,
Orchids, carnations or pansies will do,
In gloomy hours, sweet scented flowers
Change that darkness to light.
So say it with flowers, beautiful flowers,
And make someone happy to-night.

II

When the wedding bells chime and the world seems to rhyme,
And true love is all in bloom,
Beautiful flowers, from nature's bowers,
Are worn by the bride and groom,
As they journey along life's sweet way,
Each flower they see seems to say.

Florists' Clubs.

The Society of American Florists is the mother or grandmother of the florists' clubs of the country, of which there are now nearly or quite 50 active trade organizations. Many of them were organized on the occasion of the first visit of the society to their respective cities, the various branches of the trade coming together and waiting in a body to welcome the national body. As the business has grown, the success of these organizations of the larger cities has induced the trade in smaller communities to get together for mutual benefit, and there are many smaller, but quite important and active florists' clubs, which show a larger percentage of local tradesmen in their membership than is the case in the large cities.

While the primary object of most of these bodies may have been such an emergency as the meeting of the national society or other trade organization, or the holding of horticultural exhibitions or chrysanthemum shows, their constitutions generally state that "the object of this organization is for the promotion of social intercourse and advancement of the business-interests of its members."

Nearly all of these clubs meet once a month, some having a recess during July and August. There are also special meetings, dinners, picnics, and other outings that bring the members, and at times their families, together in pleasant gatherings, which are greatly enjoyed. The promotion of the business interests, however, is the most important function of these trade gatherings, and in order to hold the interest, and insure the attendance of the members, it is necessary that the essay and exhibition or novelty committees shall be composed of wide awake men, who take at all times, an active interest in the affairs of the club. Exhibitons of new or rare stock, or the best of the seasonable plants and flowers, should be a feature of each meeting.

Commencing in the fall, dahlias from the growers, and their artistic arrangement in baskets, vases or designs, together with a talk on this subject by one or more of the growers, will be found interesting. Chrysanthemums, and the first of the new roses, make the display feature of the November meeting. As speaker, a prominent member of the trade, having an interest in new plants, will often find it convenient, on invitation, to be present and make an address.

For December, there is nothing better than a display of Christmas flowering plants, while growers of cut flowers of various kinds, who have something of which they are a bit proud, require little coaxing to bring it along. Interest the retailers to exhibit samples of Christmas wreaths or other handiwork. The literary feature can be a paper prepared by a local grower on the latest in Christmas plants, or an address by one of the big men on any of the popular business topics.

January might be a retailers' meeting, or one in which this branch would be especially interested by reason of the exhibits, consisting of artistic arrangements of baskets of flowers, corsages, etc. A prominent retailer from another city should be the speaker. The papers that are prepared by specialists in various lines, and read before the florists' clubs of the country, and which are given wide circulation by the trade press, are invaluable as additions to the literature of the trade.

February is the height of the carnation crop, of which flower a very good display can be made. New varieties from prominent growers can be obtained, which will be of great interest to the carnation growers of the district. Prominent carnation men will often, on invitation, attend and address such a gathering.

Sweet peas are a timely subject for March, as they are then at their best. Local growers generally have an abundance, which will make a splendid showing. Retailers can be interested to exhibit corsages, baskets and other artistic arrangements of these flowers. The literary feature does not have to be on the flower selection, as any educational feature in connection with the business, advocating salesmanship, the S. A. F., the F. T. D., or other matter of interest may be handled by one competent to speak on the subject selected.

Easter plants in April, if the date is convenient, will be found a great attraction, while May is just right for roses. New ones are then being groomed for introduction and are sure to interest all in the trade.

There are many other matters that will interest the members, such as visits from or to the other clubs, smokers, dinners on club nights, prior to the meetings, complimentary to the speakers, which are generally well attended. Lunches and smokes at the meetings are found an attraction by some clubs.

In order to secure a good attendance, it is advisable to send notices frequently to all whom it is desired to add to the roll. Let them know that the latch string is always out, make them welcome when they come, and they will then soon allow their names to be presented.

An executive committee, with a live wire chairman, whose business it is to see that the interest in the club does not flag, and who can smooth over and settle differences that sometimes arise, is most important. Its motto is, "For the good of the club." They can be quickly called together and plan or arrange legislation that will conserve the time of the regular meetings, and in many ways quicken the life of the organization.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting will be held June, 1920.

VISITED CHICAGO: L. H. Hayward, representing S. D. Woodruff & Sons, New York.

ALASKA PEAS are being sold in this country on the basis of 14 cents per pound in England.

SEEDS of herbaceous plants can be imported under Plant Quarantine No. 37 by special permit.

IT is reported there are 250 cases of Formosum lily bulbs aboard steamer sunk off the coast recently.

LONDON, ENG.—Owing to shipping troubles, some of the English dealers are not handling French bulbs.

A. H. GOODWIN, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, and wife, have been spending August at Saratoga Springs.

AURORA, ILL.—Albert S. Wilson, of this city, has been appointed seed analyst and chairman of the state department of agriculture's seed section.

THE Cunard Steamship Co., offering lower rates than the Holland-America line, has secured the transportation of 30,000 to 40,000 cases of Dutch bulbs.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade August 27, were as follows: Timothy $10.25 to $11.50 per 100 pounds. October $12.10 bid.

DUTCH advices of early August indicate a wet season and heavy rains in July. The bulbs are, therefore, drying very slowly and will come forward a little later than usual.

FLORAL PARK, N. Y.—John Lewis Childs reports that the past season's business is probably the largest in volume and profit in the history of the house, showing an increase of 25 to 30 per cent over last year.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district are over 85 per cent in crates and many are warehoused to avoid possible fall rains rightly expected soon. The yield will not exceed approximately two and one-half bushels to the pound of seed sown.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover opened lower and October and December dropped 25 cents, August 25, with cash offered at $30.00. Timothy was steady, cash being offered at $5.40, September $5.87½, October $5.70, December $5.80 and March $6.00.

IT is reported that the French pathological service has withheld permits to ship to the United States Roman hyacinth bulbs, only Paper White, Trumpet and Soleil d'Or narcissus having been allowed to pass. This is due to a certain disease in the French hyacinths.

ONE hundred regulation seed bills were introduced in various state legislatures last year, good, bad and indifferent. Three bad ones were enacted into laws, namely, in Utah, West Virginia and in the state of Washington. Three states passed fair, workable laws.

Rice's Michigan Trial Farms.

Next week, September 2-5, will be a busy one at the extensive Grass Lake, Mich., seed farms of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., where a large gathering of seedsmen will inspect the crops. This is the best time of the year for that purpose, and many are looking forward to the trip as a rare opportunity to obtain first hand information as to crop conditions and varieties.

In addition to over 1200 acres in seed crops maturing on the farms, there are now in the trial grounds 118 selections of cucumber, 190 tomato, 334 garden beans, 188 sweet corn, 114 muskmelon, 62 watermelon, 90 cabbage, 51 squash and pumpkin, 18 pepper, also a very complete radish and root crop trial, all of which will then be at their best.

Dutch Bulb Import Case.

A recent decision of the appellate division of the supreme court teaches the lesson that great care should be taken in looking for obscure and technical clauses when placing orders with Holland bulb growers, and our experience may be of value to others in safeguarding their interests by vigilance as to terms in their contracts. In the case in question, we found an obscure reference, in very small type, in our order, calling attention to a catalogue, which contained a clause stating that, "the buyer assumed all risk on bulbs, f. o. b. Holland," but no catalogue was ever furnished, or knowledge of the clause known to us. The bulbs were shipped in unmarked cases, direct to the growers' agents in New York, and to further complicate matters, there was a change of agents in the meantime, no advice being received showing when shipment was made, or for whom it was intended. Consequently, the bulbs lay on the docks at New York, no one knowing to whom they belonged. Insurance charged for in the invoice insured nothing. We had no knowledge of the shipment from beginning to end until it reached us too late to be of any value, after we had spent much time and money trying to locate the goods. We have imported bulbs from Holland for many years, but have never had previous trouble in any way.

The firm to whom the order was given, pursued a very arbitrary course and threatened to list us with a Holland association, claimed to be a very powerful organization that could make or unmake the credit of any importer at its pleasure, by means of a "blacklist," said to be maintained for that purpose. As there was no justice in the plaintiff's contentions, and the bulbs were of no value when received, we fought the case through to the end without assistance from any source. We doubt seriously if the majority of the bulb growers in Holland are in accord with the high handed methods employed by the firm in question. Hereafter, however, we shall buy bulbs f. o. b. New York, which will prevent a repetition of this difficulty, and in view of our experience, would recommend this course to other bulb purchasers.

F. H. EBELING.

Syracuse, N. Y.

Roman Hyacinth Embargo.

Only recently has it been announced, through the trade journals, that the United States department of agriculture has prohibited the entry of Roman hyacinths into this country, claiming some diseased bulbs had been found in the crop. It is an imposition on the American seedsmen to take such action at this late date. Most of the seedsmen have had their catalogues printed, and some of them already circulated, offering to supply Roman hyacinths to their patrons, consequently as orders come in, constant correspondence will be necessary to notify customers of this ruling, so detrimental to the seedsmen and so unwarranted. We think we are voicing the sentiments of the entire seed and plant trade of this country, when we brand the agricultural department at Washington as foolhardy and detrimental to the seedsmen, and the interests of this country in general.

ROBERT BUIST CO.

[Latest reports indicate that the French authorities are responsible for the embargo on Roman hyacinths, prompted, no doubt, if not rendered compulsory by the requirements of our own officials.—ED.]

Potato Crop Conditions.

The department of agriculture has issued a special report on the late winter commercial potato crop, based on condition August 1. It deals primarily with that part shipped in carloads or the strictly commercial crop. The gist of the report follows: "Information this month bears out earlier estimates of a general decrease in acreage from that of last year of from five to 10 per cent. Conditions in the Rocky Mountain states are not promising. The stand is poor and acreage good. In New York the condition is poor, with the exception of Long Island where conditions are promising. In the heavy producing centers in Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota the crop is indicated at considerably less than last year. Michigan is 10 points lower than last year, while Wisconsin is two points lower. On the other hand, the condition of the crop in Minnesota is considerably better.

Next annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., September 9-12, 1919.

FEDERAL authorities claim farmers are selling potatoes at $1.50 while dealers get $4.50 per bushel.

COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS, truckers have had the worst season ever known with insect enemies and plant diseases.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, August 27.—Cucumbers, Climax baskets, 15 to 25 cents; celery, Michigan, crate, 75 to $1.00; leaf lettuce, per tomato box, 15 cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $1.50; tomatoes, per box, 25 to 50 cents.

New York, August 25.—Celery, per doz. roots, 20 to 75 cents; cucumbers, 40 to 60 cents per dozen; mushrooms, 50 cents to $2.00 per three-pound basket; tomatoes per pound, 5 to 12 cents; lettuce, per package, 50 cents to $1.25; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.50.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports received by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture for the period, August 19-26, indicate trend of prices continuing downward with movement increasing. Potatoes were considerably lower with supplies increasing liberally. During the week prices dropped 10 cents to $1 per 100 pounds and the whole market averaged about 35 cents lower. New Jersey sacked cobblers fell back to $3-$3.50, closing at $3.10 f. o. b. Jersey Giants, sacked, ranged $2.16-$2.33 f. o. b. Consuming markets quoted $2.50-$3.75 per 100 pounds sacked in the east but some middlewestern markets ranged $3.50-$4. Minnesota Early Ohios declined about 25 cents, closing at $2.50 per 100 pounds f. o. b. Carlots in Chicago were $2.40-$2.55, other middlewestern jobbing markets quoting sales at $3.25-$3.75, a decline of 75 cents. Onion markets showed declines of 25-50 cents per 100 pounds. Connecticut Valley sacked yellow stock was quoted $3.25-$3.75 in eastern consuming markets and New York round reds ranged $3-$3.50 per 100 pounds.

Green and Cover Crops.

With the ever-increasing shortage of stable manure, green crops and cover crops are rapidly gaining in importance. We have been working along this line for some years and in locating for this business, were very careful to select land that would grow well all the clovers and alfalfa. We have, at this writing, almost half of our acreage in clover and alfalfa, the other half in vegetables. The green crops we have preferred so far are alsike clover, sweet clover and alfalfa. The prospects now are that alsike clover will eventually lead the list; it has made the quickest and best growth and is cheapest at present to seed down. We had hopes that alfalfa would prove a leader, but it develops that grasshoppers breed so readily in an alfalfa field as to render this crop entirely unsuited to market garden needs in our locality. So severe is the grasshopper invasion this year that to date we have been unable to start either spinach, turnips or lettuce, the pests devouring the young seedlings as fast as they appear. They also bite ripe tomatoes and melons, so as to unfit them for market. There is no question, whatever, but we must take active measures to control these grasshoppers in the future. We propose to discard alfalfa, and depend on clover only, and permit the clover but one year to grow, thus turning the land every year. There is no doubt that the grasshoppers get too much of a start in the undisturbed alfalfa land. We shall also resort to the spray-pump and thoroughly poison the clover patches. This programme will avoid the production of hay as unsuited to our conditions. The damage from grasshoppers in this district this season will be enormous. This proves that with any change, new problems arise and have to be met. MARKETMAN.

Rhubarb Crop in England.

The West Riding of Yorkshire, in the vicinity of Leeds, is the center of the English forced rhubarb trade and ordinarily produces about 70 per cent of Great Britain's total production, according to Commerce Reports. In 1918, a record year, the total output of green and forced rhubarb from this district was about 16,000 tons, or practically 90 per cent of the English supply. The acreage under rhubarb was reduced from 2,573 in 1917 to 2,272 in 1918, a further diminution of 301 acres in partial compliance with the appeal in 1914 to rhubarb growers by the West Riding War Agricultural Committee to reduce their acreage of rhubarb one-third, in order to grow more potatoes and essential foodstuffs. Previous to 1914 the area in this district devoted to rhubarb was 4,000 acres. Owing largely to the failure of the fruit crops in England and to the total lack of imports of fruit, about 8,000 to 10,000 tons of green rhubarb were pulled to make jam. Average prices in 1918 were relatively higher than in 1917; they were then about $20 a ton for outdoor-grown rhubarb, and $80 a ton for forced, both prices f. o. b. railroad.

Vegetable Judging Standards.

The Ontario department of agriculture, Toronto, in Bulletin 270, entitled "Judging Vegetables," calls attention to the fact that for some time it has been felt that a more definite idea of the type of each vegetable should be published, in order that judges may be enabled to more easily arrive at their decisions. Uniformity of exhibit is always necessary. Each specimen shown should be similar in shape and size, and smooth. Too many exhibitors fail, owing to lack of uniformity in their entries.

The size certain vegetables should be, to obtain first place, has been a much debated point, many individuals, according to the Bulletin, giving preference to size rather than quality. As the latter term is rather difficult to explain, it may be designated as what a good cook selects in the way of vegetables for table use. Medium size in most cases indicates this.

Each specimen should be fresh, firm, free from blemish and correctly named; nothing soft, short or spongy should be considered for a prize. Weight must be considered in judging cabbage, melons, squash, pumpkins, onions, egg plant and citrons. While coarseness is always to be avoided, the heavier specimens should be awarded the prize.

The bulletin contains more than 20 pages of illustrations, a list of 30 vegetables, with qualifications on which awards should be based, and the number or quantity of each in an exhibit.

Crop Summary and Country Prices July.

Reports received by the department of agriculture are the basis for the following crop summary for July 1, published in the Monthly Crop Reporter:

Corn production on that date is indicated as 2,815,430,000 bushels as against the December, 1918, estimate of 2,582,814,000 and the five-year average of 2,749,349,000, the price being $1.765 as against $1.537 in 1918. This year's acreage is estimated at 102,977,000, or 95.8 of the previous year.

Potato production is estimated at 390,748,000 bushels, compared with 400,106,000 in December and the five-year average of 366,046,000. The present price is $1.284 as against $0.949 on July 1, 1918, and $1.067 as a five-year average. The acreage is 4,003,000 or 95.1 per cent of last season.

Sweet potato production is placed at 101,942,000 bushels, an increase from 86,325,000 in December and 69,209,000 in five years. Prices show an advance from $1.343 to $1.598 with a five-year average of $80,963. The 1919 acreage is computed at 1,023,000, 111 per cent as compared with 1918.

Apple production is placed at 155,608,000 bushels, the June figures being 10,726,000 and 169,911,000 in December, 1918. The five-year average was 197,855,000 at a price of $1.101.

The pear yield is indicated at 12,068,000 bushels, a change from 230,000 on June 1, 10,342,000 in December and 11,713,000 bushels for a five-year average. The price this year is $1.977, last year $1.594.

The acreage by states is as follows: California, 129,500; Colorado, 236,300; Idaho, 53,700; Michigan, 166,100; Nebraska, 64,800; Ohio, 37,100; Utah, 100,700; Wisconsin, 16,200; other states, 77,000.

Forty-fifth annual convention will be held at Chicago, June, 1920.

AN English grower says his crop of Manetti stocks will not pay expenses, even if sold at £10 per 1,000.

LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT JENS JENSEN, Chicago, is building a rustic summer home at Ellison Bay, Wis., near Green Bay. He is 40 miles from a railroad.

APPLE STOCKS in France, says Herbert Chase, who has just returned from that country, are selling at $40.00 per 1,000, as against a former price of less than $10.00.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—This city has made an appropriation of $750 to continue the work of pruning trees on city property this season. The sum of $600 was previously set aside for the purpose.

DETROIT, MICH.—The city council has ordered condemnation proceedings for the acquisition of $1,500,000 in new parks and playgrounds and plans have been approved by the city commission for others whose total value will be in excess of $2,000,000, while another $1,000,000 worth has been referred to the commission for action.

BARBERRY ERADICATION.—Notice has been given by Charles Adkins, director of the Illinois department of agriculture, that effective August 20, the tall-growing European barberry, Berberis vulgaris, and all its horticultural varieties are a nuisance and must be eradicated from the state for the protection of wheat and other small grains and grasses. This notice does not apply to the Japanese variety, Thunbergii, or mahonias, unless actually infected by black stem rust.

American Ass'n of Park Supts.

The opening session of the twentieth annual convention of the American Association of Park Superintendents was held in the Municipal building, Hartford, Conn., on the morning of August 26. There were about 75 delegates in attendance. In the absence of President Jacob Foster, George H. Hollister, superintendent of Keney park, Hartford, occupied the chair. A letter was read from Theodore Wirth, superintendent of parks, Minneapolis, Minn., saying that this convention was opened in Hartford to do honor to "Father" George A. Parker, present park superintendent of that city, who organized the association 21 years ago. Various committees made reports on which there were discussions. Superintendent Parker spoke at length on the report of the committee on standard cost records. The remainder of the day was devoted to enjoyable visits to the city parks. The programme announced for the second day includes a trip to New Britain and Meriden, visiting points of interest on the way, with supper at North Haven, followed by an address by A. M. Turner on "The State Parks of Connecticut." On Thursday, the last day of the meeting, the delegates will convene at New Haven, Conn., with headquarters at the Hotel Garde. They will be welcomed by the mayor and will be escorted on an inspection tour of the park system of the city with luncheon at East Rock. There will be addresses by Theodore S. Woolsey, president of the park commissioners, and Colonel N. G. Osborn.

Apple Orchard Pruning.

The increased yield of fruit from his apple trees paid W. A. Knight of Athalia, Lawrence County, Ohio, $100 per day last spring for pruning 10 rows of trees in his orchard, according to the agricultural extension service of the Ohio State University, Columbus. The work was done as a demonstration in co-operation with the Lawrence county farm bureau and the agricultural college extension service. The trees on the 10 pruned rows will bear 800 barrels of apples. Twenty-nine rows adjoining the pruned part are carrying at the present time an estimated crop of 1,200 barrels. At current apple prices, Mr. Knight figures that, had he been able to prune the entire orchard, consisting of 1,200 trees, the crop would have been worth $5,000 more to him than it now promises. He also reports that the pruned trees were sprayed with much greater ease than those receiving no pruning, and that he used surprisingly less spray material. The fruit now ripening on the pruned trees is of much greater size, and promises to be of better color and quality than that grown on the unpruned trees.

Attar of Roses.

Through an arrangement between the respective governments, the United States will obtain the entire Bulgarian crop of attar of roses, in exchange for food. The delight of the fair ones of America in the exquisite perfume, can only be excelled by the Bulgarian satisfaction in the cooking odor of American corned beef and cabbage. Wall street men, however, must forego the pleasure of presenting this perfume to their families, because the exchange price will be $17.50 an ounce. Ammunition workers, and producers of wheat and cotton may scent their limousines with it, while bankers and brokers get along with plain musk, or better yet, with nothing at all.

Attar of roses is a volatile oil of some species of eastern roses. Gathered with the morning dew on them, the petals are distilled in water and exposed to the night air in shallow vessels, and the oil skimmed off with a feather. It only takes about 20,000 rose blossoms to yield an ounce of attar, therefore, if Wall street cannot afford the perfume, it can at least find opportunity for a profitable promotion in the Bulgarian fields where capital is needed. Think of an American Standard Attar Oil concern in the near east. —The Wall Street Journal Straws.

Tree Conceals Body 57 Years.

The startling discovery of a human body in the cavity of a giant white oak tree where it had been preserved in a mummified state for 57 years has been reported to the Milwaukee Journal from LeSeuer, Minn. In clearing a piece of land on the farm of Edward Gleek in Ottawa township, it was found necessary to cut down the large tree, which broke in falling, disclosing the fact that it was hollow for a distance of about fifteen feet, beginning several feet above the ground and the cavity ending in a large opening concealed among the branches of the lower side of the tree, which leaned considerably. Within this hollow was found by the horrified choppers the mummified body of a man, not at all decayed, but dried and shriveled into something rivaling the best Egyptian art. Mr. Gleek, on being summoned by the frightened laborers, recognized in the mummy the body of Jean LaRue, a former servant of Mr. Gleek, who had mysteriously disappeared from the farm August 13, 1862. On that day, which was during the Sioux uprising, a boat load of soldiers on their way up the Minnesota river from St. Paul to New Ulm, foolishly discharged their muskets several times, carrying terror to the hearts of people along the river who were already about to flee from the dreadful Indians. Jean LaRue heard the firing, he seemed to nearly lose his reason from fear, rushed into the house, seized his rifle and some other belongings, including about $700 in money, and fled. He must have known of this hollow tree, sought to hide there, slipped down too far, and being unable to extricate himself, must have perished there where his body, preserved in the living oak, failed to decay. His rifle, bullet pouch and powder horn were found by him and the money, $783.50, was found in his pocket.

NEW EARLY-FLOWERING or WINTER-BLOOMING

GIANT PANSIES

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe Winters and to bloom right on into the Summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, eye.
15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with eye.
16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.

IMP SOAP SPRAY
Sure Insect Killer
IMP Soap Spray is a scientifically prepared compound that is destructive to insects without injuring plants or roots. Does not spot leaves, fruit, glass or de ace paint work. It is clean and colorless. May be used on fruit trees; shade trees; flowering shrubs; vines; garden truck; and on all sorts of plants, both under glass and out of doors.
It is most effective against rose bug; mill bug; white, black, green and rhododendron fly; red spider; thrips; aphis; fruit pests; elm leaf beetle and moths. Used in country's biggest orchards and estates. Very economical, one gallon is mixed with 25 to 40 gallons of water. Full directions on each can. Genuine can has Ivy Leaf trade mark. Your money back if Imp Soap Spray does not do as claimed. Order direct if your dealer cannot supply.

Practical Greenhouse Work
calls for the best equipment obtainable to gain the most profitable results. Ordinary make-shift greenhouses may answer the purpose, but harder work is required of the owner and smaller returns for his labor and investment.
Every piece of material that enters into the construction of Callahan Cut-to-Fit Greenhouses is the result of much experience on the part of our detail men. The members are cut to exact measure and shipped to you with the plans; all so simple that any man with an ordinary knowledge of greenhouse construction can set them up perfectly.
Callahan Cut-to-Fit Greenhouses
are made of selected Louisiana Red Gulf Cypress, to best withstand the heat and moisture required in greenhouse work.
The Callahan Cut-to-Fit Greenhouse is a practical answer to the market grower's needs, and will give you a lifetime of service at a small expenditure.
No frills no fancy work; just solid, useful, up-to-date construction at low prices.

HAVE TIGHT GREENHOUSES BY USING

IT retains its elasticity indefinitely, prevents breakage of glass, and does not crack or peel. Withstands heat, cold and dampness. Will adhere to wood, iron, stone, etc. Beds perfectly, and lasts as long as the glass lasts. If the glass breaks, Elastic Glazing Composition can be cut out without injury to the wood, as it remains flexible. Can be painted over immediately, or left without paint.

Elastic Glazing Composition is used by the Government, several railroads, and specified by hundreds of architects.
